Drowning Total In State Drops To 104 in 1965

Drownings in Minnesota during 1965 were 11 less than in 1964, according to Carl W. Moen, chairman of the water safety section, Minnesota Safety council. In 1965, there were 104 drownings compared to 115 in 1964.

Boating accidents in 1965 accounted for the greatest number of deaths (39 per cent), followed by swimming (27 per cent) and child play, 17 per cent. Another 17 per cent were from miscellaneous causes. Of the boating accidents, 21 per cent of the drownings were the result of motorboat operation.

Although the number of drownings has declined, the incidence of tragedies involving persons 20 years of age and younger has increased steadily. In 1965, this age group accounted for 59 per cent of the total while in 1964 the figure was 53 per cent. Thirty-six drowning fatalities were children under 12 years of age.

Regarding the 18 whose deaths were directly attributable to child play, Moen said, "One observation only can be made; some parents must be careless." Since 1944, the first year official records were kept, a total of 2,867 persons have met death in water tragedies.

The average for the past 11 years is 117 as compared to 144 from 1944 to 1953. It is remarkable, said Moen, that despite the great increase in water activities, the drowning total is not higher.

Gifts included records, stockings, stuffed toys, T shirts, books, bibs, candy, pajama bag, games and other items. Some of the gifts were made by club members or their parents. Place Orders Now For State Trees

State landowners throughout Minnesota were reminded today by the state division of forestry that this is the time to place their order for trees to be planted next spring.

Norway pine, the tree most widely planted, is still in good supply at forestry nurseries; supplies of other species, however, are dwindling rapidly. Still available are jack pine, ponderosa pine, scotch pine, Colorado spruce, white cedar, white spruce and caragana.

Application forms for planting stock are available at all forestry field offices, county agents offices and A.S.C.S. offices.

Minimum tree orders accepted are for 500 trees with no maximum limit. Prices for planting stock are $10 per thousand. Stock furnished by the division is available for all purposes.

Producer Spills Milk in Protest Over Low Prices

Protest of low milk prices to dairy farmers was reported in an Associated Press story last week. Irving Beyer, a milk producer in the Red Lake Falls area and one time president of the Red Lake County National Farmers Organization unit, was identified in the incident.

The Associated Press story said that Beyer purchased six half gallons of milk at a Crookston supermarket, then put them on the floor and stepped on them, splattering the fluid in a big puddle. He then identified himself to the assistant store manager.

Beyer said he was objecting to a sign on the store counter reading: "New low price for milk."

"And", he said, "that comes right out of my pocketbook," the AP story said. The milk was selling at two half gallons for 79 cents.

The AP article noted that Beyer said he is a member of the National Farmers Organization and of the Red River Valley Milk Producers Pool, and he wanted to call attention to the dairy farmer's economic problems.

Jean Dryden left Sunday evening and her sister, Mary, will will leave this evening (Monday) for Dayton, Ohio where they are students at the University of Dayton. They spent their holiday vacation at the home of their parents, the R. J. Drydens.

After two weeks of visiting cooperatives in the Thief River Falls area, Marcus Nywe Mosi of Cameroon, Africa, termed his visit here "very beneficial". A visitor in the United States since last August, Mosi has spent most of his time in Wisconsin and Minnesota. His local visit was arranged through the Farmers Union with Charles Kotaska, manager of the Farmers Grain and Seed company, as host.

Manager of Bamenda Cooperative Marketing association, Ltd., Mosi manages the apex organization of all eight cooperative unions and all cooperative societies in the state of Bamenda. The association markets agricultural produce primarily coffee and serves as a farm supply cooperative.

Mosi's visit to the United States is sponsored jointly by the government of Cameroon and the U. S. Agency for International Development which has a field station in Cameroon. He will be in the United States until February 12. After leaving Thief River Falls Saturday, he will spend a week in St. Paul and additional time in Wisconsin before joining about 40 other AID delegates at Madison, Wis., January 17.

Many similarities between U. S. cooperatives and those of his native country were noted. Mosi said, ". . . because the principle of cooperatives is the same in our country." Main differences were in the types of farm products handled.

Mosi was most impressed by the fact that cooperatives here operate independently. As an example, he cited the establishment of the alfalfa pelleting plant being organized as a separate cooperative rather than a branch operation of another local cooperative. In Cameroon, he said, many cooperatives have several operations and members are discouraged from joining more than one of them.

The reason for membership in only one cooperative in Cameroon is that the cooperatives also provide credit. If a person holds membership in more than one, he could receive credit from both and have greater debt than he could handle. Credit is difficult to obtain because of the country's financial situation, he said, but is needed by the farmers to improve their land and purchase machinery with which to harvest their crops.

Words of praise for the Peace Corps were given by Mosi. He said that there are many Peace Corps workers in Cameroon and that they have been of great help in working with the people and adding diversity within the cooperatives. Other agricultural products than coffee are now handled through cooperatives, much as a result of Peace Corps assistance. In addition to coffee, Cameroon

Motor Vehicle License Deadline Noted in County

Deadlines for purchase of 1966 motor vehicle and mobile home registration were announced today by Mrs. Marjorie Hanson, deputy registrar of motor vehicles in Pennington county.

January 10 will be the last day on which licenses or tabs may be purchased without penalty. On January 11 a penalty of $1 will be added to the license fee. On January 21 the penalty will be increased to $2 and on February 1 the maximum penalty of $2.50 will be assessed.

Registration for 1966 in Minnesota need not be displayed until March 1, although they may be placed on vehicles immediately upon purchase. People who plan to travel out of state, however, should affix the registration before they leave, since the deadline date for display on current registration is not the same in all states.

Penalty for mobile home registration will be eight per cent beginning January 1.

Mrs. Hanson noted that there is a record number of re-registrations at the Thief River Falls office- a contrast with the St. Paul offices which are reportedly falling below average. The local office had an average annual increase of about 100 registrations a year from 1958 through 1964 and about 225 per year since that time.

Select Plays in Town and Country Art Show Contest

Three plays by Minnesotans have been selected in the University of Minnesota town and Country Art Show playwriting competition to be presented March 29-30 on the University's St. Paul Campus.

One-act plays to be produced are "Good Night, Ruth" by Henry Scholberg, Columbia Heights; "The Swing Tree" by Cecil Wade, Foley; and "Green Springs Eternal" by Gladys Jo Estenson, Northfield.

The plays will be performed by the Punchinello Players in the Punchinello Playhouse on the St. Paul campus during the last week of the show. They will be directed by William Marchand, university instructor in rhetoric and advisor to the Players.

The playwriting competition was added this year as a new feature of the art show project on the St. Paul campus. Amateur playwrights of high school age or over who are residents of Minnesota communities of 25,000 or less were eligible to submit one original recently written one-act play.

Entries are now being accepted in the short-short story contest, another feature of the show, conducted for the second year. Closing date of this contest is January 10, according to A. Russell Barton, coordinator. Eligible to compete are amateur writers from Minnesota communities of 25,000 or less. Entries are limited to original unpublished short-short stories not over 2,000 words in length.

Studded Tires Still Illegal in Twenty States

Do you have metal-studded snow tires on your car? If you do, and you're planning a winter vacation trip, it might be wise to replace them with standard tires before leaving, warns the head of the Minnesota AAA.

"Although studded tires are legal in Minnesota, 29 other states and the District of Columbia, they are still illegal in 20 states and the law is being enforced in 16 of these states," said Erling Berg, Duluth.

"Enforcement is of doubtful character in four states—Alabama, Arkansas, Indiana and West Virginia. However, even this situation could change in the event that studded tires are found to be damaging to highway surfaces."

Missouri is the most recent state to rule that studded tires may be used on that state's streets and highways. The Attorney General of Missouri, by administrative ruling, has announced that metal-studded tires could be used on Missouri roads.

"Rather than risk being stopped by law enforcement officers for using studded tires, motorists planning out-of-state trips are urged by the AAA to put on standard tires before leaving," Berg added.

A Florida-bound Minnesota vacationer would find that studded tires on his car are illegal in Iowa, Illinois, Louisiana, Mississippi and Georgia.

Other states where studded tires are illegal and where the law is being enforced include: Arizona, California, Hawaii, Michigan, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Texas, Utah and Virginia.

Studded tires have undergone thorough testing and have been found to be highly effective on ice or packed snow in breaking a car to a stop.

The last session of the Minnesota Legislature passed a law making studded tires legal in the state from last October 15 to April 15, 1967 (winter months only.) During this period, the effect of the tires on highway surfaces will undergo intensive studies by the Minnesota highway department.

Hardy Retires As FBI Agent

Samuel W. Hardy, head of the St. Paul office of the Federal Bureau of Investigagion since 1941, retired last week at the age of 65 after 41 years as an FBI agent. He had appeared in Thief River Falls several times to speak to service groups on law enforcement and crime problems.

Of the more than 6,000 agents now in the FBI, the seniority of Hardy was second only to that of the chief, J. Edgar Hoover. He participated in the investigation of nearly every major kidnaping case in the 1920's and 1930's, including the famous Lindbergh case.

He was at Little Bohemia, Wis., when FBI agents shot it out with the John Dillinger gang, and at Elfie where James Merrdith, wanted for Kidnaping a St. Louis, Mo., couple, attempted to ambush the FBI kidnap squad.

Since 1937 he had conducted hundreds of police schools for training law enforcement officers in scientific crime detection, and estimates he has helped instruct about 10,000 officers.

Electric Heating Included in Many New Homes Built

More than 13 per cent of all new homes constructed in the area served by Otter Tail Power company during 1965 were "total electric" including electric heating according to C. R. Gustafson, vice president. Of 768 new homes connected to the company's electric lines in the past year, 101 of them were total electric, Gustafson said.

By the end of 1965, 545 electrically-heated, total-electric homes, cottages and commercial buildings were connected to the company's lines, compared with 226 just three years ago. In addition, 1,091 Otter Tail customers used electricity to heat portions of their homes or buildings, bringing to 1,636 the number of customers using electricity either exclusively or in part, for space heating purposes. And, predicts Gustafson, this figure will reach nearly 3,000 by the end of 1966.

Jobless Fund Reverses 12 Year Downtrend

For the first time in 12 years, payments into the Minnesota Unemployment Compensation fund in 1965 exceeded withdrawals paid out to jobless workers eligible for unemployment insurance.

In a year end report on unemployment conditions and the status of the fund, Employment Security Commissioner Robert J. Brown said that the approximately $28,400,000 in benefits paid to unemployed workers in the state during 1965 dropped almost 24 per cent ($8,650,000) from 1964.

Brown said that improvement in the fund last year was due to the the last legislature to bolster the fund through an increase in the employer tax and a broadening of the tax base became effective only January 1, and will no doubt augment the reserve appreciably if the present good employment conditions continue. Increased benefit provisions of the new law become effective July 1, 1966.

Brown estimated that the number of unemployed workers drawing benefits for one or more weeks to total 92,000 for 1965, a decline of nearly 13,000 compared to the 104,969 figure for 1964; the number of claimants who exhausted their benefit rights during 1965 was 15, 320 or 6,690 below the 1964 total of 22,010.

Weeks of compensated unemployment totaled 966,600 in 1965 compared to 1,258,845 in 1964. Weekly payments at $29.38 in 1965 averaged five cents less than in 1964.

In addition to the state unemployment compensation program, the Department of Employment Security administers two programs as an agent for the federal government—unemployment compensation for federal employees and unemployment compensation for ex-servicemen. Brown reported that benefits under these two programs also declined to an estimated $1,960, 000 for 1965 compared to $3,203, 967 paid in 1964.

The Minnesota Unemployment Compensation fund, which has slumped to $22,825,052 at the end of 1964 rose to $27,500,00 by the end of 1965, an increase of $4,674, 948 according to Brown's report. Most of this increase in the fund is attributable to the decrease in benefits paid out although increased employment during 1965 has also increased the taxable payroll.

The 1965 amendments to the law increasing the minimum contribution rate of 0.7 per cent from the previous minimum of 0.6 per cent and the maximum to 4.5 per cent from the previous maximum of 3.0 per cent become effective on 1966 payrolls, according to Brown, and it is expected that the increased rates which in 1966 must be paid on the first $4,800 earned by an individual as against the former $3,000 limitation will increase the income to the fund substantially during 1966.

Brown further pointed out that 1965 is the first year since 1956 when the fund has not declined substantially and that it is the first year since 1953 when contributions by employers have not been substantially lower than benefit payments. In 1956 interest earned by the fund pushed income above the benefit level.

African Tells Of Cooperatives In His Country

exports bananas, cocoa, rubber and palm oil, Most said. The country has a land area of 2,800 square miles and population of 5 million people. There are only two seasons of the year—the wet season and dry season. Average annual rainfall in Cameroon ranges from 60 to 400 inches in some places. Temperature ranges from 65 to 120 degrees.

Until 1916 Cameroon was controlled by Germany. Then, following World War I, it was divided into East Cameroon which was controlled by France and West Cameroon controlled by England. As late as 1960 East Cameroon received its independence from France and West Cameroon gained its independence in 1961 by merging with the eastern sector of the country.

The cooperative movement in the country began in about 1934, but has shown its major growth since the country gained its independence. The Cameroon government, which is composed of two houses of assembly, is working to solve the problems of a nation which speaks about 50 different dialects and the two basic languages of French and English. Transportation is also a major problem in bringing produce to market, with much of the crop being carried by animals or in human head-loads. Roads are few and poor.

People who own cattle in Cameroon are permitted to graze them at will over the vast grassland areas, following their herds with portable shelters and paying a property tax on the livestock in lieu of leasing the grazing land. Nearly all of the people in the country have some land of their own, but they live in villages and farm the land surrounding the village.

Most believes that his trip to the United States and visits with cooperatives here will help him in fulfilling the task which he has in building a part of the agricultural program in his home country.

State To Acquire 6,000 Acres of Wetlands in 1966

Game and fish division of the Minnesota conservation department plans to acquire approximately 6,000 acres of wetlands during 1966, it was announced today. Ted Shields, state game and fish director, said the acreage figure is about the same as that purchased in 1965 and is all which can be acquired with the funds available.

He said the division is prepared to increase the program substantially during the succeeding two-year period if sufficient funds are appropriated.

The wetlands are contained in 575 Wildlife Management Areas which are open to public hunting during the established seasons. During 1966, Shields said, it is planned to acquire another 25 such areas in addition to building some 30 miles of hunter access roads and completing several other projects.

Heredity in Poultry Studied at University

Some old puzzles of heredity among our feathered friends may be closer to solution as a result of a basic study in avian genetics at the University of Minnesota. For the first time, karyotypes—complete pictures of the chromosomes—of chickens, turkeys, pheasants, quail and even horned owls are submitting to scientific protrayal.

Chromosomes, the microscopic, thread-like bodies that carry the genes of heredity, have been studied far less in birds than in plants, humans and other mammals.

Even in the poultry industry, extensive breeding efforts have dealt more with observable, production-related characteristics than with the fundamental aspects of cytogenetics itself.

Poultry cytogeneticists Robert N. Shoffner and Awtar Krishan at the University, working with a high-powered research microscope recently cleared the methodological hurdles that had held up the study of the avian chromosomes.

With repeated counts from microscopic photographs of cell tissue, they determined the number of chromosome pairs, relative size of these pairs and other characteristics in text-book detail for the chicken. The picture is nearly as complete for turkeys and pheasants, and is being developed for other species.

The domestic chicken, it turns out, has 39 pairs of chromosomes and the turkey has 41. (Man has 24 pairs.) The length of the largest chicken chromosome pair is 50 times that of the shortest.

One implication is a possible explanation of why intergeneric crosses are easier to bring about between turkeys and pheasants than between turkeys and chickens.

Researchers trying the turkey-chicken cross with artificial insemination procedures have found fertility to be extremely low, less than five per cent. Fertility is no better between chickens and pheasants, but with the pheasant-turkey cross it runs considerably higher.

Judging from gross appearances and historical background, scientists had believed the pheasant to be more like the chicken than the turkey. But the chromosome diagrams by Shoffner and Krishan show the physical characteristics of the turkey and pheasant chromosomes to be more alike than for any other pair among the three species. This similarity is a possible explanation for the greater compatability because of ease of chromosome paring at fertilization.

Perhaps even more significant are the findings of Shoffner and Krishan which deal with sex-linked characteristics. In avian species, the male is homogametic—meaning that both members of the sex chromosome pair are alike. The avian female is heterogametic—with one member of the pair labeled as a "W" chromosome, which is about a fifth the size of the other member.

This arrangement is opposite of that in mammals, where the male is heterogametic.

It means that in birds there may be certain sex-limited characteristics which can be transmitted only from mother to daughter. However, at this date no traits have been discovered which follow this pattern.

Shoffner says the knowledge of avian chromosome configurations may be especially helpful in studying the evolution of bird species and in making more refined separations among them. Most taxonomical classifications are based on appearance and habits; now a genetic basis for classification promises to be more feasible. It may help identify certain birds, whose identity is now in doubt. The sand grouse, for example, was long thought to belong to the grouse family, but biologists more recently have assigned it to the pigeon. A chromosome description for this bird may help settle the issue.

Finally, the new knowledge has implications for studies of hybridization that go far beyond the turkey-pheasant question. To date, off-spring from such intergeneric crosses have been sterile. Eventually, with knowledge of the chromosomes, it may be possible to get fertile offspring from species crosses and thus lead to further crosses, backcrosses, and other sources of experimental genetic variation.

Such research on chromosomes requires repeated observations of cells through the high-powered microscope before scientists can put full confidence in their findings.

Shoffner and Krishan used cell tissue from the tips of pin-feathers—since these may be obtained easily and repeatedly without harming the bird being studied. This cell tissue is then treated and literally squashed between two surfaces so that cells pop open and chromosomes scatter around where the microscope can zero in on them.

The key to the research was in working out the "squash" preparation for getting the cells open at the right stage of development. In mammals, this has been done with cultured white blood cells. While this same procedure is possible in birds, the feather pulp method is less time consuming and therefore more efficient.

Name Boy, Girl As Camp Courage Children of Year

Julie Wessel, 8, Minneapolis, and Jerry Breitkreutz, 9, Hector, have been named "Camp Courage Children-of-the-Year," according to W. B. Schoenbohm, executive director of the Minnesota Society for Crippled Children and Adults (MISCCA). The two will represent the many handicapped children and adults served through MISCCA's programs in its annual Crippled Children's appeal.

Julie, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Wessel, was born with amyotonia (severe muscle weakness) and, as a result, moves about with a wheelchair.

Jerry, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Breitkreutz, also uses a wheelchair, since he was born with cerebral palsy.

Camp Courage is just one of the services for the handicapped provided by the Minnesota Society for Crippled Children and Adults. MISCCA also supports 20 day camps throughout the state including one in Thief River Falls, research and education programs and scholarships, four sheltered workshops, six rehabilitation centers and a statewide equipment loan program.

Support for MISCCA's programs comes through the annual Crippled Children's appeal, held from January 23-February 9 this year. Areas contributing to the Crippled Children's appeal through their local United Fund will not be resolicited.

Minnesota IFYE Delegate Named To Visit Turkey

A former state 4-H club president, now a social worker for the Steele county welfare department, Owatonna, has been named the first International Farm Youth Exchange delegate from Minnesota for 1966.

She is Jo Anne Thomas, who will leave April 11 to spend approximately six months in Turkey, living and working with farm families to obtain an understanding of their way of life and at the same time introducing them to American customs and ideals.

Miss Thomas will have a week's orientation in Washington, D.C., before leaving for Turkey. She will return to the United States in November, 1966.

For 13 years she was a 4-H member in Dakota county where she grew up on a farm. She was president of the Dakota county 4-H federation and in 1958-59 was president of the state 4-H federation. She was also state vice president of the Future Homemakers of America.

Two Minnesota IFYE students in the 1965 program have returned recently from their assignments—Kent Ringkob, Jackson, from Finland, and Emmaline Schlueter, Cedar Mills, from the Philippines. A third Minnesota IFYE in the '65 program, Richard Krueger, Litchfield, will be in India until early April.

The IFYE program, a two-way exchange, is conducted by the national 4-H Foundation and the agricultural extension service to increase international understanding at the family level. In the 18 years of the program, Minnesota has sent 80 of the more than 1,500 American youths who have gone to live and work abroad and has been host to 128 of the 1,700 young people who have come from 67 countries to live with farm families in this country.

Langen Comments on Interest Rate Rise

"It's not so much a question of whether or not the Federal Reserve board should have raised the nation's basic interest rates, but is a question of why the action was taken," said Congressman Odin Langen today.

In commenting on the board's move to tighten U. S. credit, Langen said that "the cause of the increased interest rates is directly attributable to the deficit spending policies of this government over the past five years."

"These deficits, acting as inflationary threats, are increasing at an alarming rate," Langen said. "We have added $30-billion to our national debt in the past five years that have elapsed since this nation's last balanced budget, and the deficit for the current fiscal year is estimated to run another $7 to $10 billion. If we had realized balanced budgets during those five years, the nation's basic interest rate would be going down no matter what ceiling the Federal Reserve board put on it.

"Just a casual look at the interest we pay each year on the National debt shows that it has skyrocketed," the Congressman said. "We will spend an estimated $1½-billion more on interest this fiscal year than we did in 1959. We could finance over three poverty programs with that much money, and these figures represent just one year. If we had balanced the budget every year since 1959 we would have an extra $18-billion at the end of this fiscal year, just on the interest payments saved."

Noting that the nation now pays $12-billion a year for interest, Congressman Langen said it was not enough for administration leaders to say they're against increasing interest rates. "If they want to hold interest rates down, the way to do it is to reduce the deficit. This is where the responsibility lies."

"As long as you derive inner help and comfort from anything you should keep it. If you were to give it up in a mood of self-sacrifice or out of a stern sense of duty, you would continue to want it back, and that unsatisfied want would make trouble for you. Only give up a thing when you want some other condition so much that the thing no longer has any attraction for you, or when it seems to interfere with that which is more greatly desired." —Gandhi

Picking Poverty's Pockets

While there most certainly must be a few poor people benefitting from the government's enormous poverty program, there have been a number of instances discovered where the program runs out of money before it gets to the poor. There are too many people tapping the supply along the route from Washington to the poverty level of the nation's communities.

Nationally, the rate of supervisors to workers is one to 18. In New Jersey the state director of the Office of Economic Security Opportunity receives $25,000 a year. One county was reported to have received $67,000 in poverty funds with $52,000 going for salaries and administrative expenses. In Indiana the Office of Economic Opportunity paid salaries 25 per cent higher than those paid by the state for comparable positions.

When jobs such as picking up sticks and cleaning latrines are given students on campuses, the O.E.O. has been quoted as stating, "You must pay $1.25 per hour for work the student is doing, but when it is publicized include the actual hours they are training as well as working so it will reduce the pay rate, then the people who are being hired at a different level will not complain of being driven out."

Cost to teach each student at an urban center for a nine-month period is $4,483.87 per girl and $4,877.95 per boy—about 50 per cent more than the average college or university.

The government is not only picking out pockets of poverty, it is also picking poverty's pockets—and the pockets of the nation's taxpayers.

Health of the Dollar

Government sources recently revealed the cost of living in this country reached a record high last October. According to the labor department's consumer price index, it then cost $11.04 to purchase a representative list of items in general family use as against $10 in the 1957-59 base period. An Associated Press news item, reporting this development, said: "But despite the most rapid rise in some five years, federal officials is announcing the October figures. . . still shied away from the scare word 'inflation'."

It is one thing to avoid a word—it is a very different thing to avoid a fact. And the fact is that the danger of renewed inflation on a readily increasing scale is very much a reality now. This was highlighted by the action of the Federal Reserve board in raising the bank discount rate in order to tighten up on credit.

Without going into the complexities of this action, or debating the pros and cons, it is essentially an anti-inflationary move. It is designed, among other things, as the board said, to prevent inflationary excesses from damaging the economy and to demonstrate anew this country's determination to maintain the international strength of the dollar.

What will come of this remains to be seen. But, as every consumer knows, the value of the dollar has been going steadily down and many authorities feel that further erosion lies ahead. A primary reason for that is continued deficit spending in a time of unprecedented prosperity—largely for welfare state purposes.

World in Turmoil

As 1966 gets underway, the new year finds the world in a turmoil. There are a number of trouble spots and explosive situations. U.S. News and World Report summarizes some of them as follows:

In Viet Nam, the war grows bloodier, and swiftly. The communists refuse all efforts at negotiation. The $64 question, as the article sees it, is whether Red China will enter in if the North Vietnamese are faced with defeat.

Rodesia is "a new tinder box". The whites, outnumered 18 to 1 by blacks, refuse to relinquish power. The government has withdrawn from the British Commonwealth. Britain and other nations are applying economic sanctions. Some African nations threaten the use of armed force against Rodesia. U.S. News says that "the danger of a bloody outcome of this whole situation is regarded as real."

More troubles are arising in much of Latin America. There is little political stability and communist subversion exists on a broad scale. Most of the nations are threatened with a food crisis—populations have soared and per capita food production has dropped. The U.S. is pledged to prevent communist take-overs of government by armed force if necessary.

Just next door to us, in the Caribbean, Castro trains revolutionaries from the Latin American countries. Hundreds of these young men, trained in sabotage, terror and guerrilla warfare, return to their homelands each year to start more revolutions. The magazine reports that "Top targets as of now are Columbia, Venezuela and Guatemala."

So the list of hot spots goes. India and Pakistan seem close to war. Indonesia, with Red China's friend Sukarno in control, seeks the conquest of Malaysia, which has U.S. support. And the deepest kind of troubles face NATO.

It is a gloomy picture indeed. Our involvement in such affairs is profound and is likely to become more so. To quote U.S. news again, "There's a feeling being sensed in Washington that if the problems of the world can possibly be brought under control by a strong hand, then the U.S. may now be getting ready to step out and give it a try."

One more point should be noted. It is that communist powers have problems on their hands and have had small success in finding solutions. As Intelligence Digest, an authoritative British publication which deals with world affairs, states: "In fact, they are in serious trouble. They are politically confused, in great economic diffulties and divided. It is right that, without indulging in wishful thinking, this should be appreciated. What is wrong—and could be suicidal—is to help the enemy out of his difficulties."

Talk About Snow!

As you gaze glumly at the falling snow and brood about galoshes, snow shovels, and aching backs, remember that it could be worse.

Much worse. For instance, back in 1921, 76 inches of snow fell at Silver Lake, Colo., in just 24 hours. And at Tahoe, Calif., 108 inches of snow came down between January 12 and 15, 1952.

The record snowfall for a calendar month occurred at Tamarack, Calif., which got 390 inches during January, 1911, according to World Book Encyclopedia. In the same year a record depth of snow accumulated at Tamarack, where 454 inches covered the ground.

The all-time U.S. record for snowfall in one season was set from July, 1955, to June, 1956, when 1,000.3 inches of snow fell at the 5,500-foot level of Mount Rainier, Wash. Be glad you don't live there.

All these figures are records, and therefore unusual. But individual snowfalls of 80 inches are not unusual at all. In the hills southeast of Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, the average winter snowfall is more than 150 inches. Erie, Pa., on the southeast shore of Lake Erie, was buried by a 27-inch snowfall on Thanksgiving Day, 1956. Be glad you don't live there, either.

But no matter where you live, there are few spots in the United States which never get snow. For instance, snow fell as far south as Lakeland, Fla., near St. Petersburg, in January, 1958.

So, like it or not, snow is going to be with us for awhile and in quantity. People who like snow include small children, skiers, poets—and the people who make galoshes and snow shovels.

The Total Picture

In a column written by the National Rifle Association of America, some interesting statistics are presented relative to "hunters and money". Not the least interesting of these is the fact that the hunter spends more than $5 for additional products and services for each $1 spent on firearms and ammunition.

A recent survey indicates that hunters now put $1.5 billion into the national economy annually. The number of active licensed hunters is now more than 14 million and has increased five per cent annually for the past several years.

"The typical American hunter is an ideal market for the local merchant," the NRA reports. "He fits well into the law of supply and demand—young enough to still need everything, yet old enough to be able to pay for it. Because of the nature of the sport, the hunter is motivated toward a set and predictable market. What he wants and what he buys is almost axiomatic."

Perhaps this area is more acutely aware of this situation than many others since it is popular hunting territory. Opening of waterfowl and deer seasons bring a mass migration of humanity through and into this community. The pre-dawn parade of headlights from cars heading out of town on an opening weekend is a sight to behold.

The point to be made here is that these hunters, in addition to guns and ammunition, must have transportation, gasoline and lubricants, tires, proper clothing, licenses for cars, boats and trailers as well as game, food, lodging and a host of other needs. They must buy these items from people who have them to sell—and many community businesses gain the benefits.

In 1964 alone, for instance, hunters purchased more than 350 million gallons of gas, 4 million quarts of oil, 900,000 tires, almost $75 million worth of auto insurance, $85 million in additional auto maintenance and $12 million in license fees and registration.

Hunter purchases comprise nearly 10 per cent of the gross volume of the entire boating industry. In 1964 hunters spent nearly $31.5 million for lodging and $828 million for clothing and footwear. They also helped finance their recreation by paying more than $68 million for licenses, tags and permits.

And if you think that communities in the hunting area don't get a portion of the out-of-area hunter's money, try buying a pair of red gloves the night before deer season, getting immediate service at a gas station or standing in line to get an early breakfast on opening day.

Interesting Opinions . . .

"At most, there are 600,000 maried men with families in the U.S. who can be classed as long-term, hard-core cases of unemployment. Though the commonly cited figure for the jobless is nearly 5,000,000, among them are close to 1,000,000 youths under 21, more than 2,000,000 'short-term' jobless and many others who are seeking only part-time work".

—Time magazine

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

The 4-year-old told his kindergarten teacher he was soon to have a baby brother. "How do you know it will be a boy?" the teacher asked.

"Last time Mommy got sick, she came home with a baby sister," the youngster replied. "This time, Daddy's sick."

Tasa Named Chairman Of Co. Commissioners

Glenn Tasa of Trail was elected chairman of the Pennington county board of commissioners at the reorganizational meeting of the board held Tuesday at the commissioners room in the Pennington county courthouse in Thief River Falls. Donald M. Olson was elected vice chairman.

Meeting date for the board was again set as the first Tuesday after the first Monday of each month with the exception of July which is set by statute as the second Monday of July.

The commissioners acknowledged receipt of $10,000 from the City of Thief River Falls for payment of courthouse bonds. Although two years of payments remain on the bond retirement schedule, the auditor was instructed to call all bonds on their anniversary date this year and to retire all indebtedness for courthouse construction.

Commissioner Anderson and chairman Tasa were named to serve on the county extension committee for 1966. Reappointed for three-year terms on the committee were Stuart McLeod of the second and fourth commissioner districts and Mrs. Leonard Melin of the third district.

Approval was also given to the budget of the county extension service which calls for total expenditure of $21,385 during the coming year. Of this total, $9,910 will come from county funds, according to C. W. Rodekuhr, county auditor.

Dr. H. P. Wendt was reappointed county health officer with commissioners Olson and Lindberg serving on the health committee. Dr. F. W. Hazard was reappointed county livestock inspector, commissioner Hanson was appointed to serve on the county Rural Areas Development committee and H. B. Rafteseth was reappointed veterans service officer on a part-time basis at a salary of $100 per month.

Discussion was held on the problem of case load for the probation officer headquartered in Thief River Falls and serving the counties of Pennington, Red Lake, Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Clearwater, and Lake of the Woods. CROWNED queen of the Thief River Falls chapter of TOPS Dieteers at the group's organizational meeting Monday night was Hazel Omlid, center, who has lost 40½ pounds since the same time last year. Also pictured are Carmen Anderson, left, who has lost 33 pounds, and Florence Rhode, who has lost 32 pounds.

Pennington county 4-H project leaders in five different project areas are urged to attend a training meeting on January 12 in Thief River Falls. The session will be held in the courthouse meeting room at 1:30 p.m.

The training session is one of a series of four identical meetings to be offered within two days in Mahnomen, Pennington, East Polk and Red Lake counties for 4-H project leaders in home improvement-family living, agronomy, foods, and sheep. Any club which has four or more members enrolled in any of these projects should designate a project leader to attend.

Wayne Carlson, assistant state 4-H club leader, will speak on the role of the project leader at a general session opening the meeting. Following his talk, 4-H leaders will separate into their subject matter groups.

Training in the various areas will be given by these leaders: Kathleen Ophoven, East Polk county home agent, foods; Harley Shurson, East Polk county agent, agronomy; Elmo Skare, Red Lake county agent, horticulture; and Miss Beverly Tveito, Pennington county home agent, home improvement-family living. Edgar Olson, Fosston, will teach the sheep project leaders.

The training meetings will bring 4-H leaders up-to-date on subject matter and research in the five project areas. Minnesota's 4-H program is dependent more and more on the project leader to work effectively with club members, Miss Tveito said. For that reason, she adds, it is essential that project leaders be well informed in the subject matters for which they are responsible.

Aliens Reminded To Report During Month of January

Joseph A. Cushman, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization service, St. Paul, has again reminded all aliens to report their addresses during January. The cards with which to make the reports are available at post offices and offices of the Immigration and Naturalization service throughout the country.

Reports must be filled out and returned to the employee from whom received. They should not be placed in mail chutes or mail boxes. Parents or guardians should submit reports for alien children under 14 years of age.

Cushman urges all aliens to report their addresses before the end of January as willful failure to do so may lead to serious penalties.

Ground School Test To Be Given

Written examination for the ground school section of training leading to the awarding of a private pilot's license will be given Tuesday by the Federal Aeronautics administration. The examination will be offered from 6:30 to 11 p.m. in the vocational, agriculture room at Lincoln senior high school. Anyone who so desires may take the test.

Kruger Cow Has High Production

Orrin C. Kruger and sons of Warren has a registered Brown Swiss cow that recently completed 2X records of over 550 pounds of butterfat in 305 days or less. This is nearly twice the amount of milk produced in a year by the average cow being milked in the United States today.

According to the Brown Swiss Cattle Breeders' association, Beloit, Wis., the cow was tested under the Official Dairy Herd Improvement Registry.

Dragnet June's Aster 382745 produced 13,140 pounds of milk with 4.5 test and 587 pounds of fat.

Jaycees Discuss Several Projects Tuesday Evening

"Jaycee Radio Day" was discussed at the regular meeting of Thief River Falls Jaycees held Tuesday night at the Elks club. If the project is approved by the chapter and the management of KTRF radio, the Jaycees, on some future date not yet established, would take charge of broadcasting on the radio station, giving spot announcement purchased by local merchants.

It was reported that the new Roseau Jaycee chapter will receive its charter this month. The chapter will be known as the Northland Jaycees, and will include Roseau and the surrounding area.

Neil McEwen gave the final report on the 1965 Operation Christmas shopping tour for underprivileged children, proposing that remaining funds from the project be donated to the Salvation Army. The chapter approved this action.

The winter regional Jaycee meeting is scheduled for Thursday evening in Halstad. All local Jaycees are urged to attend, and will be notified as to the time and place of departure.

Norman Peterson, administrator of Northwestern hospital, attended the meeting to present the Jaycee of the Month award for December to Art Heinze, his employee. Heinze received the award for his outstanding job as chairman of the Christmas lighting contest held in December. Following the meeting, Heinze and Jim Wills showed some colored slides which Wills photographed of the homes of winners and recipients of honorable mention in the lighting contest.

Following the general meeting, the board of directors elected Jim Carlson as state director to fill the vacancy left by Ken Taylor, who has moved from the city.

Moren To Attend 'U' Short Course

Ed Moren, Pennington-Red Lake County weed and seed inspector, will attend the 25th annual weed and seed inspector's short course to be held January 1-14 at the University of Minnesota's St. Paul campus. Problems in weed control will be thoroughly discussed at the event.

Approximately 125 county weed and seed inspectors are expected to attend the short course, according to LaVern A. Freeh, director of agricultural short courses at the college. Richard Behrens, university agronomist and Sigvard Bjerken, supervisor of the section of weed control, state department of agriculture, are program coordinators.

Speakers during the five-day short course will come from the University of Minnesota, North Dakota State university, U.S. Department of agriculture, Minnesota Department of conservation and department of agriculture and from the seed industry.

The Minnesota County Weed and Seed Inspectors association will hold its business meeting at the morning session January 10.

Parent Education Is Purpose of Program To Start Here Jan. 12

by Beverly Tveito
Pennington County Home Agent

Two recent articles in this newspaper briefly described some reasons for parents education programs and the content of an upcoming program for Pennington county parents. This article will deal briefly with the nature of the discussion approach.

All Pennington county parents of elementary school or preschool children are invited to participate in a study - discussion approach which will deal with the development in children of the characteristics essential to mature, democratic living.

A "kick-off" session will be held in the Thief River Falls Lincoln senior high school auditorium Wednesday evening, January 12. In the following weeks, participating parents will meet in small study - discussion groups under the leadership of trained local leaders.

Interested parents who have not registered are urged to do so promptly by (1) returning the green registration form to the elementary schools or the county extension office, Courthouse; or (2) by calling the extension office.

Adults may acquire knowledge about child development and parental roles by several means: experience; individual reading, study and thought; and attending lectures. Studies in social science and education show that it is increased understanding, rather factual knowledge alone, that brings about different feelings and ways of behaving.

To gain the necessary understanding, parents must have the opportunity to thoughtfully relate new concepts and insights to their personal experiences with their children.

The study - discussion approach provides opportunities for acquiring both knowledge and understanding about children and parent - child relations. The subject matter content, in this program, is obtained through reading the text (its cost is included in the $2 registration fee) and other suggested readings.

The participating parents will meet at regular intervals to discuss issues arising from this reading and from their own experience. This program shares the conviction of many educators that parents learn best when they are given the opportunity to discuss their experiences. There are many values to be gained through group learning situations where the discussion method is used.

For example, in a good discussion group: (a) Every person can learn and grow through participation; (b) each person learns to think for himself and to express himself; (c) each person learns to listen to others express themselves; (d) all have opportunities to share their learnings and experiences with each other; (3) each person has an opportunity to learn whether others feel and think as he does; (f) all have opportunities to listen to others who feel and think differently, and to try to understand why they do; (g) all have opportunities to try to resolve their differences—to reach agreement or accept disagreement; (h) each person is likely to gain greater insight into his own feelings, thoughts and opinions, as well as those of others.

Weather Remains Moderate; Little Change Expected

Temperatures in the Thief River Falls area have moderated slightly since the -25-degree reading of Monday morning. Though subzero lows have been recorded on both mornings since that time, temperatures have not been abnormally low for this time of year. Winds have been generally light and no snow has fallen

Forecast calls for variable cloudiness with occasional period of light snow today and tonight, turning fair to partly cloudy tomorrow. No important temperature change is predicted today, but it will be colder tonight. Highs today will range from 5 to 15 degrees; lows tonight from 2 to -12.

Temperature readings recorded by North Central Airlines at the municipal airport are as follows: 7 and -25 on Monday, 11 and -8 on Tuesday and a low this morning of -7.

Tasa Will Head Pennington Board For Coming Year

Board chairman Tasa was authorized to represent the county board on the highway committee of the Association of Minnesota Counties and the transportation and communications committee of the local Chamber of Commerce.

Jury lists for grand and petit juries were drawn, as well as a list of jurors for the municipal division of Pennington county probate court. Commissioner Olson was named to the law library committee and $750 was appropriated to the law library fund.

Allocations were made in the following amounts: $1.00 to Pennington County Crop Improvement association to assist in staging the annual seed and feed show; $150 to the Red River Valley Winter shows; and $1,000 for assistance of the Soil Conservation service. A number of other fund transfers and authorizations for clerk hire by county offices were also approved to supplement salutory amounts which are insufficient.

Licenses for sale of 3.2 beer were granted to Bennie Groven at Highlanding, Mrs. Gertrude Carpenter at Carpenter's Corner, Clifford Olson at Kife's cafe and Thief River Golf club. The golf club license is for on-sale only while the others are combination on-sale and off-sale licenses.

Union and Northern States banks were designated as official depositories for county funds and the Thief River Falls Times was named as the official newspaper for publication of county legal notices. The board also voted to purchase a 20-acre gravel pit in Polk county from Marlin Johnson.

Art Stenberg, Edgar Nalpin, Leonard Melin and assistant county agent Charles Will appeared in regard to a proposal for recognition of county farmers at the Pennington county fair. The farmers would be recognized for their efforts in farm practices and farmstead appearance. The board agreed to endorse and assist in the completion of the program.

SERVING a sukiyaki party at the George E. Hanson home in Moorhead recently was Mrs. Morris (Ginko) Lundin. Lundin is a brother of Marvin Lundin and nephew of Mrs. Lillian Smith, both of Thief River Falls. His Japanese wife has catered a number of sukiyaki parties in Minneapolis since moving there with her husband from Japan in 1958. Hanson, an uncle of Lundin, has other relatives in Thief River Falls. He promised his guests he would import a cook all the way from Japan for his holiday party, and he kept his promise. The event was featured in the Fargo Forum, and the above picture accompanied the Forum article. Shown with Mr. and Mrs. Lundin are their three children, Rhonda 5, Kathy 6 and Tommy 9. Sukiyaki is a dish made from bamboo shoots, fresh mushrooms, whole green onions, chopped white onions, water chestnuts and thinly sliced beef. Vegetables and meat are cooked in soy sauce and wine. Rice is served separately.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q—Is there a special protection for a veteran who has been receiving a 100 per cent disability from the VA for almost 20 years. I thought that a law was passed on this matter.

A—The law to which you refer states that after a veteran has had a service-connected disability for 20 years, his disability rating cannot be reduced below the lowest rating that he has held during that 20-year period.

Q—I have read in your column that a veteran can collect a pension from the VA for the time he served in the service if he retires or becomes unable to work. Is this correct?

A—Veterans of World War I, World War II, or the Korean conflict who were discharged under other than dishonorable conditions after 90 or more days service, or because of a service-connected disability, who are permanently and totally disabled from reasons not traceable to service may be entitled to a nonservice-connected pension if their income from all sources does not exceed $1,800 if single, or $3,000 with dependents.

Q—I have heard of a bill in congress that will enable all ex-GIs to obtain a loan for a home, etc. My husband was in the service from 1958 to 1961. Would he be eligible for this benefit from the VA and what limitations are made by this bill?

A—The bill to which you refer has been passed and is now law. If a veteran has had 90 days of consecutive active duty and an honorable discharge, he may qualify for a loan for a home. This loan is administered by the Federal Housing administration not by the Veterans administration; however, the veteran must obtain a certificate of veteran's status from the VA. If a veteran has already had a GI loan, he does not qualify under this new loan program.

Q—Are veterans of World War I eligible for GI home loans?

A—No, but they may be eligible for housing benefits under the new Housing Act of 1965 administered by the Federal Housing Administration.

Q—May a veteran who has no service-connected illness enter a Veterans Administration hospital and pay for his care?

A—No. VA hospital benefits are free to veterans with service-connected disabilities and to veterans with non-service connected disabilities who cannot afford hospital care. All other veterans are expected to use non-VA hospitals.

Good Visibility Key to Safe Winter Driving

The "bone-tired" motorist who fails to keep his windshield clear of road-muck, sleet and snow is headed for a bone-breaking winter weather crackup. This warning was sounded today by Professor A. E. Neyhart, Pennsylvania State university.

Professor Neyhart, who is nationally recognized as the "father of driver education," told motorists they must be able to see and be seen if they are to survive during hazardous winter driving conditions.

"Reduced visibility due to sleet, fog, rain and snow, plus longer hours of darkness, make winter driver education," told motorists fessor Neyhart said. "Motorists must use extra care in driving and pay more attention to vehicle maintenance."

The safety specialist warned motorists to clean the entire windshield as well as the side and rear windows and not to try to get by with a small peephole in the windshield.

"You have to see all of the roadway and also both sides and the rear," he warned.

"Before you start out on any kind of a trip, even if it is only a few blocks, be sure your safety equipment is working. Your windshield wipers should always be kept in perfect condition. If the rubber is dead from months of exposure, your wipers will streak and smear," he warned. "Dead blades should be replaced or refilled with live rubber that does a thorough job of cleaning."

He also urged motorists to have their windshield wipers tested for adequate pressure, which should be at least one ounce for each inch of blade length to retard dangerous wind-lift. Most good service stations have an arm pressure scale that gives a quick reading. Special blades to minimize the effect of wind-lift at high speeds are standard equipment on several makes of cars, and they may be obtained at almost all service stations.

"A mistake some motorists make is putting too much water and not enough anti-freeze in the windshield washer reservoir," the professor said. A mixture of half water and half top-grade windshield washer anti-freeze solution may be used safely down to about 20 degrees below zero. Never test your windshield washers while driving if there is a chance that the solution is not strong enough, for it may freeze instantly on striking the windshield and blind you."

The professor urged motorists to check the car heater and defroster. This precaution is essential to assure clear vision.

"Before starting out, wipe snow and road-muck off headlights, tail lights and directional signals," the safety specialist said. "It is a good rule to keep one window open just a little. If your car is tightly closed, this shuts out noises you should hear, such as horns of vehicles and whistles on trains, and also increases the threat of carbon monoxide which induces drowsiness and may even kill the car's occupants.

"When you get on the road," Professor Neyhart concluded "keep your distance from other cars. And remember, when visibility is poor the posted speed limit may be entirely too fast. Adjust your speed to match your visibility."

Appearing in newspapers of the Minnesota Editorial Association through the cooperation of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture

If you think new and better highways are vital to your area's economy, you'll find yourself in complete agreement with many highway officials in the upper midwest.

Transportation bottlenecks are not good for business and transportation routes are a must if natural resources are to be put to work.

That was the consensus of three speakers at a recent meeting in Duluth—G. H. Bakke, Wisconsin Highway commission chairman; Lynn M. Carlson, program engineer for the Minnesota Highway department; and Harold G. Bauerle, director of research planning for Michigan.

They acknowledged that the three states have some catching up to do in highway development. Said Bakke, "We're not now building highways fast enough in Wisconsin to keep pace."

Interdependence of the highway systems of different systems was made clear. Bakke said completion of Interstate 35 from the Twin Cities to Duluth will have some bearing on Wisconsin traffic, since adjoining east-west routes lead into and from Wisconsin.

Carlson and Bakke both stressed the need for highways to make it easier for tourists to reach recreation areas in their states. And there are other rather new situations, Carlson pointed to the taconite development in northeastern Minnesota, leading to a volume of traffic far exceeding anticipations.

The three highway officials spoke at a meeting of the Northern Great Lakes Resource Development committee, holding its second meeting at Duluth since the Land and People conference attended by the late President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

The commitee grew out of that 1963 conference.

Field shelterbelts planted in the past 20 years or more are giving results akin to those from good agricultural water management, according to John Polley of the U. S. Soil Conservation service at Warren.

Farmers in the Marshall County Soil Conservation district, according to Polley, have planted about 350 miles of pattern type field shelterbelts in the past six or seven years. The oldest of these are nearly 20 feet high. They are providing soil protection and moisture conservation which in turn is increasing crop yields.

This was demonstrated this past summer by Richard Fitzimmons, a district cooperator near Argyle. While no precise measurements were made, a stand of wheat protected by shelterbelts was visibly more dense, taller and had longer heads. This occurred in an area as wide as eight or nine times the tree height.

Henry Hoper, a district cooperator from the Stephen area, has planted more than five miles of pattern shelterbelts on his field. He has overcome the snow problem in the belts by spacing his tree rows from 20 to 40 rods apart. Thus one row supports the other.

Perhaps the most encouraging action thus far in getting wide and concentrated establishment of one-row field shelterbelts, the conservationist believes, came from a group of farmers in Vega township. This group, headed by Adolph Hagglund, a township board member, contacted all farmers in the township, encouraging them to use as many erosion control practices as possible.

After only two years of endeavor, Vega township farmers have over 20 miles of field shelterbelts plus large increases in acres of cover crops and stubble mulch.

The Agricultural Extension service, the Soil Conservation service, and the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation service have assisted with educational materials, technical information and cost-sharing.

How's Your Health?

(Prepared in the public interest by the Minnesota Medical Ass'n)

Everyone should have a periodic health examination and an annual physical should be the goal for persons over 35 years of age, advises the Minnesota State Medical association.

For those persons a regular medical physical examination can help to detect diseases like diabetes, cancer, hypertension and glaucoma in their early stages. Early detection allows immediate therapy often prolonging the patient's career and life.

While most doctors have their own routines and procedures for conducting a health examination they all follow certain basic principles. Your health examination will ordinarily begin with a health history or record of your past illnesses or injuries and present complaints. The doctor will usually review the family health history for any record of heart or kidney disease, high blood pressure, tuberculosis or cancer.

He will also note allergies or other conditions which tend to occur in your family. He will ask for the cause of death in close relatives. Other questions will refer to health habits, diet, weight change, use of alcohol and tobacco, medications taken, forms of rest, and relaxation, habits of sleep, exercise as well as type of employment, working conditions and environment.

Your actual physical examination will include certain tests including those for blood pressure, pulse rate and temperature. The doctor will examine the major body systems for physical or functional abnormalities. An examination of the eyes with an ophthalmoscope will tell the doctor much about the condition of the blood vessels in the retina of the eye. Thier condition may provide him with clues about diabetes or other conditions which may be present.

He will carefully inspect your ears, mouth and throat. Your hearing and breathing will be carefully observed. An examination of the neck will help to reveal the condition of the thyroid gland and blood vessels. The doctor will use the stethoscope to listen for heart beat and chest sounds. Special studies may be made with a chest x-ray or an electrocardiograph.

In women a brest examination and a papanicolaou test will be used to detect brest or uterine cervical cancer. By means of rectal and vaginal examinations abnormalities of the anus and rectum, abnormalities of the prostate gland in males, and the ovaries, uterus and cervix in females, may suggest the need for further study.

While all of these procedures and tests may sound formidable it is reassuring to know that when used regularly and in time they can help protect your health, concludes the association.

As the curtain rises on the winter scene of our theater of seasons, frostbite, the perennial villain, makes his annual appearance He lurks wherever there are below freezing temperatures. Quite often the victims of frostbite aren't conscious of his presence.

The first signs of frostbite are a "pins and needles" prickly feeling and then numbness, says the Minnesota State Medical association. The affected area will turn white or grey and later red. Sometimes frostbite can be painful for a long period of time. Occasionally the person who has experienced frostbite will be hypersensitive to cold for the rest of his life.

The damage from frostbite is similar to a burn. Prevention is the best protection against frost-warm clothing, waterproof shoes and heavy dry socks. Keep clothing dry and protected from outside moisture and perspiration. Avoid tight clothing which may restrict circulation.

As a precautionary measure, motorists should carry heavy clothing and shoes in the car in the event that the car stalls and a hike to get help becomes necessary. The wind also plays an important part in frostbite. The chilling effect of air at 20 degrees moving at 45 miles an hour is the same as 40 below zero air on a still day.

Because frostbite is one of the hazards of winter sports, many sports leaders advocate a buddy system—two persons paired off—each watching the other for early signs of frostbite. True frostbite means that the tissues are frozen. Crystals of ice form between the cells. Nerves, muscles, and blood vessel tissues are the most susceptible to frostbite.

To treat frostbite begin rapid rewarming as soon as possible. Forget about the old wives tales and do not rub the frozen part with snow, a tepid bath is excellent but be on guard against scalding, if the water is not hot. If bathing is not practical, gently apply tepid wet towels, changing them frequently. If no fire or hot water is availab,e pace the patient in a seeping bag or cover with coats and bankets.

Hot, nonalcoholic beverages will help to raise the body temperature. Prompt medical attention for even a mild case of frostbite is important because the depth and degree of the frozen tissue cannot always be readily determined and the treatment will vary with the degree of the injury.

Most important of all take the necessary steps to guard yourself and your family, against frostbite this winter, concludes the Minnesota State Medical association.

If you want to catch a cold, first catch a suitable virus, says the Minnesota State Medical Association. You have as many as a hundred viruses from which to make your selection. Some of the viruses produce minor illness in adults and critical illness in infants and children. Others affect only children or only adults. All of these viruses seem able to alter their characteristics from season to season. When one develops immunity against a virus that produces cold symptoms, he is not protected against another virus or against the same virus in altered form a few weeks later.

Most contagious are fresh colds; and children's colds are more contagious than those of adults. It is quite apparent that well persons will frequently act as carriers of the cold virus. They will sometimes transmit it to someone else without showing any symptoms of a cold, themselves.

Contrary to popular belief, low temperatures and inclement weather in themselves have little to do with colds. Sudden changes in temperature, on the other hand, may be a contributing factor. The low humidity which results when winter heating begins is also the key to a sharp rise in the more then 20 million people who suffer from colds on any given winter day. Ideally, the relative humidity in a heated room should be about 45 per cent. If the moisture content of the air in a heated room falls below that amount moisture will be absorbed from the mucous membranes lining the respiratory system. Because dry mucous membranes cannot properly clean themselves by the action of the hairlike structures which move mucous upward out of the respiratory tract, the danger of a cold virus invasion increases.

So far no specific treatment has been found to be effective against the common cold. Treated or untreated, a cold usually lasts a week. If you have a cold direct your treatment toward the relief of symptoms and prevention of complications. Remember the wonder drugs—antibiotics and sulphas—have no effect on cold viruses. These drugs should be used only under medical supervision for the control of complicating bacterial infection. Antihistamines should be used only when there is anallergy complicating the cold. Coughs and sneezes should be covered with a handkerchief. Frequent hand washing is helpful. Have your own drinking glass, towels, and other personal items. Above all stay away from other people. You can help your body fight a cold by taking a hot bath, drinking a glass of hot lemonade or milk, and going to bed. Complete rest is important. Use caution in taking medicines except those prescribed by your doctor. Be especially cautious about taking laxatives. Don't waste your money on nostrums that claim to cure a cold. They can't do it.

Mrs. Alton Sackett has passed on a letter she received from a former Viking resident, Mrs. Anna Jacobson and while it is a bit late for Christmas greetings I think friends of Mrs. Jacobson will enjoy hearing from her. The letter reads: Greetings everyone: Christmas—A time of joyous greetings to relatives and friends, with festive decorations and goodies of all kinds. Since this "Season to be Jolly" also rounds off another year, I will turn on my memory bank and "tick" off some events of the past year. I enjoyed last Christmas with Dorothy, Buzz and family at Holden, Mo. We all spent the following New Year's day with Jim, Rose and Tammy in Kansas City, Kan. and I remained with them until mid-January and then returned to Dorothy's. On February 22 I boarded the Santa Fe San Francisco Chief, enroute to Belen, New Mexico and after spending several days with Gloria, Dale and family, I rented a lovely apartment. I was delightfully surprised when Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Malberg, while on their way to Yuma, Ariz., dropped in for a real nice "old-time" chat. They left that same day for Yuma. In mid-March, Hulda and Clarence, on their way back to Minneapolis after spending some time in Florida, rapped on my door. They spent the next couple of weeks visiting with Gloria's and myself. As the time drew near for them to leave, that incessant "traveling bug" gave me a good bite. Consequently, after putting my belongings into storage, I packed up the old green Ford and accompanied them back to Minnesota, just in time for the big spring flood and tornado which hit Minneapolis on April 12th. After things had calmed down and dried up, Clarence, Hulda and I spent a week at their home on Lake Wabado near Walker. From there I returned to the old stamping grounds at Viking and Thief River Falls where I enjoyed several days visiting with Ruth and Werner, and all my old friends in the area. I also had a very nice time with Harry, Eunice and family at their former home at Stephen. Soon after, I boarded my Ford and took off for a visit with Edith and George at Townsend, Mont., where I also visited with Hilmer and girls of Helena, Mont. From there, I returned to Dorothy's this being mid-September. Shortly after, I sold my home in Viking to the William Forsbergs; so again, I drove back to Minnesota. On my return, Ruth and Werner accompanied me as far as Winthrope, where we visited with Harry, Eunice and family in their new home. Also saw Clarence and Hulda while there. So, finally, here I am back to Kansas and Missouri. The weather is beautiful, 60 degrees during the day and above 20 degrees at night. The next few days will be the usual pre-Christmas hubbub, with baking and shopping. I do hope Myrtle Sackett has some good "lutefisk" to send me. I ordered it to go with our "ris-gryns grotten" for Christmas eve supper. In closing, I want to wish you, one and all, a merriest of Christmasses and a joyous and prosperous New Year, 1966. God bless you all. Anna.

Newfolden B Team Places Third in Holiday Tourney

Newfolden Nordics "B" squad won the third place trophy in the Argyle Invitational "B" tournament with a 56 to 55 win over Stephen.

The Nordics victory over Kennedy was a come-from-behind effort although the Nordics started fast to take a 14-9 lead in the first quarter, Kennedy overcame this and went ahead by 30 to 19 at the half. Kennedy still had a 41 to 32 margin at the end of three quarters but only scored four opints in the final period as the Nordics were hitting 15 for their 47 to 45 margin.

Scoring in double figures for the Nordics were Gerald Nelson and Jack Halvorson with 14 and 12 points respectively. High point man for the evening was the Rockets Stan Visnesr with 16 and Darryl Matthew added 12.

In first round play, the Nordics jumped off to a 10-2 lead against Argyle but the Eagles came back for a 17 to 16 lead at the first quarter stop. They increased this to 33-25 at halftime and to 48-39 at the third quarter mark, winning 68-52. The Eagles ran away with it in the last few minutes as two of the Nordics regulars fouled out.

High point men for the game were Smidt and Larson of Argyle with 21 points each while LaBine added 14. In double figures for the Nordics were Clyde Sorenson, Gerald Nelson and Jack Halvoson with 13, 12 and 10 respectively.

Editorials . . .

"All ages have said and repeated that one should strive to know one's self. This is a strange demand which no one up to now has measured up to and, strictly considered, no one should. With all his study and effort, man is directed to what is outside, to the world about him, and he is kept busy coming to know this and to master it to the extent that his purposes require." —Goethe

The Big Bite

There is an old saying that death and taxes are the only certain things in the world today but that death doesn't get worse every year. Taxes generally edge upward in little bits—sort of a malignancy of the pocketbook. One exception to this general rule is the social security program.

In 1966, persons who earn $6,600 or more a year will have their social security taxes jump $103 (59 per cent) to $277.20. Persons earning less than $6,600 will pay somewhat less in taxes. Under the law which authorized the increase to help finance medicare and increased social security benefits, the tax will rise periodically to a top of $372.90 in 1987. That final figure is subject to change, so don't count on it as a ceiling.

The social security tax has been one of the fastest rising of all our taxes. The top tax on an individual next year will be more than eight times what it was at the start in 1937. That year the top amount was $30.

The American people are beginning to find out that creeping socialism is doing more than nibbling at their pocketbooks. In the case of social security, it is taking a big bite.

In Other's Words . . .

The following words of wisdom came from Donald F. Haynes:

Freedom is helpless and worthless without people who believe in it and are willing to die for it.

It is not self-perpetuating. It does not beget itself.

On the contrary, freedom is bred, begotten, perpetuated by people—freedom lovers.

Freedom is not static. It is, rather, a force. That force is enervated and activated by freedom practitioners. They go to the polls and implement it. They campaign for it, or that candidate or party, and express it. They learn in school how to evaluate and understand it; they teach others to appreciate it and respect it.

Freedom lovers do not have to indulge in freedom-riding or freedom-sitting, or legislation-demanding.

Freedom is in the heart of the patriot, in his brain, his hands and feet, and on his lips. He lives and breathes and spreads freedom everywhere.

In the exercise of freedom he keeps his government clean and efficient and strong. He says to those who are bent on world dominion, "Don't tread on me," as he readies himself to spring into action to have and to hold this priceless gift from God.

Was It a Hoax?

Washington News Service reports the following:

Lloyd Mallan, one of the nation's top science writers, has reports that the Soviet 'walk in space' was another big hoax. To prove his point, Mallan consulted some of the foremost space and photography experts, running for them the official Kremlin films of the Communist "achievement." This story, which should have made page one of the big city press, was generally suppressed.

Writing in Science and Mechanics, Mallan reported out that the photos of Cosmonaut Leonov crawling out of the space capsule were taken from out in space, with the camera pointed head on. No one else was out in space, and the Soviets themselves reported that the only pictures of this "feat" had been taken by a camera which Leonov himself attached to the outside of the capsule.

U. S. experts, examining the film, also found that it was a double exposure, with Leonov superimposed on a background of the earth below. Black and white stills, under careful scrutiny, revealed that Leonov was floating in a tank of water, to give the effect of weightlessness, and that he was suspended by fine wires.

And Dean C. B. Neblette of the Rochester Institute of Technology put his finger on the cause for this Soviet clumsiness. "They had to make this film before they had seen any other pictures of a man walking out in space," he said. "They had to do a lot of guessing."

This is not the first time Lloyd Mallan has caught Soviet scientists in an attempt of this kind. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, for reasons of its own, has stubbornly refused to put Soviet claims to the acid test of scientific analysis—but the truth will out.

Voting Right

Minnesota's DFL Representatives and Senators in the U. S. Congress rank pretty close to perfection, according to an analysis by the Minnesota Federation of Labor's Committee on Political education. The analysis was published in the December 30 issue of the Minneapolis Labor Review.

Representatives John Blatnik, Joseph Karth, Alec Olson and Donald Fraser were reported to have "voted right" on a number of union-favored legislative proposals. These included votes for repeal of Section 14 (b) of the Taft-Hartley act, for the housing and urban development act which provided rent supplement for low income families, for medicare, for federal aid to schools, for nearly $1 billion in aid to Appalachia, for establishing the new U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and against a cut in appropriations for the anti-poverty program.

Republican Congressmen Clark MacGregor, Albert Quie, Ancher Nelsen and Odin Langen, incidentally, were said to have "voted wrong" by casting opposing ballots.

Senators McCarthy and Mondale also echoed the union voice in the halls of Congress. They also "voted right" on Appalachia, federal aid to schools, medicare, rent supplements, urban affairs, anti-poverty funds and Section 14 (b) repeal. Senators McCarthy and Mondale were also lauded by the union for their action upholding the supreme court's decision that both houses of state legislatures must be apportioned on a population basis.

Republicans from agricultural areas should consider the opposition of the Minnesota Federation of Labor as one of their best endorsements. Think carefully, now—who can tell us what the "F" signifies in the term "DFL"?

It's No Bargain

For those who like it, the Great Society may be worth every penny it is costing. For those who oppose it, any price is too high. The trouble is that both sides of the argument usually have no idea just what the tab will come to. The facts are interesting, no matter how you look at it.

This year's administrative budget—and this is considerably smaller than the sum total of the treasury's total expenditures—was announced at under $100 billion by President Johnson. However, the best estimates as of now are that by the end of the fiscal year, on July 1, 1966, the administration will have gone at least $10 billion over what was budgeted. This will give the treasury one of the biggest peacetime deficits in history.

Only part of this can be dumped in the Great Society's lap. After all, close to $50 billion will go for defense alone—and there are such expenditures as foreign aid, a solid $3.3 billion, and other programs begun by previous administrations.

Great Society programs, for which the American taxpayer will be paying in the next five years, add up to some $111 billion in new authorizations. Of that $1 billion will go to the Appalachia relief project, $7 billion for a federal aid-to-education step-up, and a conservatively estimated $5 billion for the poverty war. A $20 billion measure, for various federal subsidies, sits on President Johnson's desk, awaiting his signature. The International Monetary fund is scheduled to get $1 billion, and social security will cost the treasury $33 billion more than it did before this year.

This is one reason why the administration is talking of increasing taxes. The Great Society may be great—but it's expensive, and to all of us.

The Consequences

We often wonder if persons who commit crimes would do so if the consequences were more severe when they are apprehended. In other words, would the fear of penalty help to deter the commission of crime? This is a question which will never be answered to the full satisfaction of anyone.

Many crimes are committed on an impulse without thought of being caught or of being punished. In many cases the person committing the crime does not even know the penalty for his crime. Perhaps the knowledge of the penalty is more important than the penalty itself.

This was recently called to our attention by a reader who provided us with printed comments by a Midwestern judge, who made them to two young men he had just placed on probation. The men had made a practice of "borrowing" automobiles to go joyriding. Auto theft is a felony, and the seriousness of a felony was cited by the judge.

"Even if you never see the inside of a penitentiary or jail, you will not have escaped the penalties of your crime," the judge told the young men. "The record of your conviction will be here as long as the courthouse stands. No amount of good conduct in the future can ever erase it."

The judge added that although they were not 21, they already had lost their right to vote and were thus deprived of their voice in public affairs. He observed that their integrity as a witness in court was from thereon questionable; that their record would bar them from civil service appointment.

"Someday you may have a chance to live and work in one of the expanding countries of South America," he said, "and you will apply for a passport. You may not get it. You might enter Canada for a fishing trip, but you would not be allowed to stay. No country will allow you to become a resident. Your world is so much smaller that it was."

A person can lose his rights by stealing a car, pointing a revolver, or committing a felonious assault. Conviction of a felony means loss of opportunity for a military commission and prospects for a position of trust and respect. All of this can be avoided by common sense and good behavior. It's worth it.

Progress Report Given On Resources Project

A report citing the progress achieved during the first two years of the Natural Resources program was released today by Governor Karl F. Rolvaag. The stepped-up resource development program went into effect July 1, 1963, and was renewed by the 1965 Legislature. The report covers the first two years of the program, or up to July 1, 1965.

The program is financed by a one-cent-per-pack tax on cigarettes which yields about $7.5 million dollars over a two-year period.

Rolvaag said emphasis of the program was on the acquisition, development and improvement of state parks. During the first two years, approximately $1.5 million dollars was expended on development and improvement work in state parks. In addition, $1.6 million dollars was expended on land acquisition under the direction of the Department of Administration.

Development and improvement projects included such things as construction of roads, campgrounds beaches, boat launching sites, picnic areas, wells, sanitation buildings, sewer and water systems.

Rolvaag said 220 parcels of land were acquired involving 17,400 acres in 31 state parks.

Some other accomplishments during the first two years of the program included the planting of over seven million trees on state land, creation of 250 additional camping sites in forest campgrounds, purchase of 8,000 acres of wildlife lands and acquisition of 305 acres of fish spawning habitat.

In addition, said Rolvaag, the program made possible an increase in the development of wildlife areas, chiefly wetlands. Types of work done in these areas included the building of small dams, fencing, building of access roads and trails, deer yard improvement, diking and planting of wildlife food and cover.

Studies are also well underway on the eight watersheds located in the Minnesota portion of the Red River basin in northwestern Minnesota, Rolvaag said.

This problem area was singled out for special emphasis and matching federal funds were secured to assist in the study. Six other watershed units were also made the subject of studies using natural resources funds, and the reports on some of them have already been published.

Topographic and geologic mapping of the state was also accelerated by the appropriation of natural resources funds, said Rolvaag, and it now appears that the entire state will be topographically mapped by 1970.

He said that an appropriation of $500,000 allocated under the program for conservation work projects—employing out-of-work adults from distressed counties—was completely expended in addition to $275,000 in federal funds made available under the Accelerated Public Works act.

Rolvaag said he was particularly pleased with the progress of the program because of its importance to the economy of the state and the welfare of Minnesota citizens.

Safe Pesticide Use Featured at 'U' Short Course

Safe and effective control of insects, diseases and other pests doing millions of dollars of damage to Minnesota crops, livestock, homes and wildlife will be featured in two special short courses on the University of Minnesota's St. Paul campus, January 10-13.

Such currently widely-discussed topics as pesticides-wildlife relationships, toxicity of pesticides and legal aspects of pesticide use will be stressed in the program.

The 25th annual agricultural inspectators short course will be attended by 100 county weed and seed inspectors, January 10-13, according to LaVern Freeh, head of the University's Department of Agricultural Short courses.

The second annual pesticide short course, January 12-13, is expected to attract 200-300 chemical industry representatives, educators and government inspectors.

The two courses have been planned together so county weed inspectors may benefit from the detailed treatment of subjects related to pesticide use and safety at the pesticide course.

We wish you all a very Happy New Year!

Even a frown can worry Mother. And when he has a fever — she always fears the worst?

Did you know, Mother, that more children fall victim to spiritual neglect than any of the crippling diseases we dread? It has wrecked the fond hopes and bold dreams of hundreds of thousands of parents.

Yet it isn't a disease, at all!

It is a HESITATION; hesitating to start our child in Church School, hesitating to go with him and worship God, hesitating to discuss at home the need for moral and religious foundation for the whole family.

Face it today! Do something about it next Sunday! Choose YOUR church. And make it YOUR church. And through a lifetime of worship and faith it can be for your child . . . HIS church.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL. ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

PROBABLY COMING DOWN WITH SOMETHING!

Parking offenses resulted in 1,960 tickets being issued—402 more than a year ago.

Virtually all phases of traffic violations brought into municipal or juvenile courts showed increases last year. Significant exceptions were driving after revocation which dropped from four to two and driving after suspension of driver's licenses which dropped from 14 to eight. Charges of having no current motor vehicle registration displayed dropped from 43 in 1964 to only 15 last year.

Failure to heed stop light or sign increased 131 per cent from 13 in 1964 to 30 in 1965. Careless driving increased 92 per cent from 25 to 48 and speeding cases jumped 82 per cent from 64 to 116. Failure to yield right-of-way increased from 26 to 33 and improper turns and U turn climbed from 13 to 24. The bulk of traffic offenses were in these categories.

Other increases in traffic cases included: driving while intoxicated, seven to 12; too fast for conditions, one to seven; improper passing, two to four; open bottle in a motor vehicle, nine to 12; no driver's license, 11 to 13; and driving after midnight, two to five.

Eight persons were charged with leaving the scene of an accident, five with following too close, one with failing to signal, one with failure to heed school patrol stop flag, five with violating driver's license restrictions, one with driving the wrong way on a one-way street, nine with illegal mufflers, two with permitting unlawful operation, four with expired driver's license, one with littering the roadway and one with unsafe equipment.

Other offenses for which the police department brought cases to court totaled 110—an increase of 45 cases or 69 per cent. Drunk cases increased from 36 to 46, drinking by a minor increased from five to nine, possession of beer or from four to 16, and warrants issued for failure to respond to tickets issued for parking violations increased from seven to 12.

Other offenses in 1965 included grand larceny, one; petit larceny, one, assault, two; resisting arrest, one, disorderly conduct, 10; furnishing beer to a minor, one; furnish liquor to a minor (gross misdemeanor), 1; destruction of pro-

Lions Club Has Topic Regarding Visual Program

Thief River Falls Lions club met for its regular meeting Wednesday at the Elks clubrooms. President Phil Kays was in charge of the noon meeting. Following the introduction of guests the meeting was turned over to program chairman Rev. Paul Biegner. Rev. Biegner introduced Kenneth Swenson, principal at Mark Twain and Knox elementary schools, who spoke to the group on the education program for visually handicapped in Thief River Falls.

Swenson said that the state legislature approved a program requiring all school districts to train the handicapped. The visually handicapped program was officially started here in 1960 with a full-time instructor. Prior to this time there was no provisions for training any handicapped without sending them away to schools at great expense.

Swenson said that for the visually handicapped the school uses a resources program, providing individual help for 30 to 40 minutes with each handicapped student, then placing the student in the regular classroom. They can follow daily lessons with special equipment provided.

In the case of the visually handicapped, this special equipment includes raised maps, globes with contour features, books with specific covers and textures, and Braille writers. Swenson said that much of this equipment can be borrowed from state sources and that the state also provides aid for salaries paid for special teachers.

Slides were shown to the club of the local students and their teachers. Also shown in the slides series was some of the equipment the students use and pictures of how they are able to follow along with other students in the classes.

Christi Cuppet, one of the students in the visually handicapped program, presented a reading to the club. She had written her presentation in Braille and was reading from it.

Since the Lions club is interested in sight-saving and other work associated with sight it was considered by members to be an appropriate program.

C of C Annual Meeting Set Tues., Jan. 18

Plans are now complete for the 52nd annual banquet of the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce to be held Tuesday, January 18, at the American Legion club rooms in Thief River Falls. The banquet will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Special entertainment for the evening will be provided by Danny Klayman, "Henry Youngman's Comedy Protege". The young comedian has been Youngman's protege since he was 13 years old and has made a number of appearances under contract with a Minneapolis booking agency.

Dr. O. D. Belch will serve as master of ceremonies for the banquet at which an outstanding citizen award will be presented by J. J. Womack, 1965 president of the Chamber of Commerce. Honorary life memberships will be presented by Donald Narverud, 1966 president, who will also provide special recognition of the out-going president. Directors will be introduced and comments made by both Womack and Narverud.

Gene Gaer is chairman of the annual banquet committee with Alan Turkelson as ticket drive chairman. Other committee members are Glenn Peterson and Dr. W. P. Kaisler. Tickets at $2 each will go on sale today and are available from committee members, block chairmen and at the Chamber of Commerce office. A turkey dinner will be served.

Commenting on the laugh-producing style of young Klayman, the Oliver Towne column in a Twin Cities newspaper stated: "Danny's style is fast, furious fun. He plays the law of averages. If you belt out enough jokes, fast enough and dead pan enough, you'll connect often enough to keep a steady ripple of guffaws rolling across the tables. In 20 minutes he must go through 100 jokes.

"Danny is a human anthology of the best, clean night club humor I've heard in a long time. And he keeps adding fresh ones as fast as the script writers get them down. They can hardly keep up."

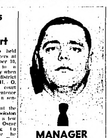
School Board Approves '66 Program of Summer School

Lannoye Pleads Guilty Tuesday In Warren Court

James P. Lannoye, who held three law enforcement officers at gunpoint in Warren November 10, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of aggravated robbery when he appeared Tuesday in district court in Warren. Judge H. O. Chommie presided at the court session and ordered a pre-sentence investigation before issuing a sentence.

Lannoye had been held at the Polk county jail in Crookston since his apprehension only a few hours after stealing Sheriff Oscar Erickson's car and driving to Crookston. During the time he held Sheriff Erickson, Police Patrolman John Sedlacek and Game Warden Ted Znajda at gunpoint, Lannoye reportedly fired a number of shots from several different revolvers, with at least two of the bullets narrowly missing the officers.

Ingvald Tollefson of Bagley and Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Olson and daughter were Thursday afternoon visitors at the Ed Gregory home in this city. Mr. Tollefson is Mrs. Gregory's uncle.



MANAGER of the Firestone store in Thief River Falls as of January 1 is Richard "Dick" O'Brien, who arrived recently from Fargo. His former position was that of territorial manager of Firestone dealers. O'Brien has replaced Veto Chepulis as manager of the local store. Chepulis has accepted the position of Firestone tractor tire manager at Fargo. O'Brien is married and the father of three children, and is presently looking for living quarters in this city.

Approval of the summer school program for 1966 and authorization of the first step toward possible improvement of the area vocational-technical school were main items of business considered by the Thief River Falls board of education Thursday evening at Lincoln senior high school. Three members of the board were absent from the session.

Summer school offerings and enrollment increased substantially last year over the first year's program in 1964 and the school administration had recommended that summer courses be continued.

Authorization was given by the board for Supt. M. R. Hankerson to submit applications for federal financial participation in the construction of vocational education education facilities. The action would be an initial step toward the possible construction of vocational facilities on a separate site.

Board members hired an architectural firm to conduct preliminary planning at a previous meeting. Application for federal financial assistance is made to the Minnesota department of education and merely indicates the district's interest in securing funds for construction purposes. A number of other actions would be required in the future before definite plans would be established.

Robert Kloubec appeared before the board regarding possible landscaping at the Franklin and Mark Twain schools. He was instructed by the board to prepare a proposal and cost estimate for presentation to the board at a later meeting.

Board approval was also given to a second clerk-typist course in the vocational - technical school under the Manpower Development and Training act. The first class of 19 students graduated recently after five months of training.

The new course proposed would also run for five months and also be 100 per cent reimbursed from MDTA funds. Instructing the class—which will meet from 3 to 9:30 p.m.—will be Jerald Lydeen, Loren Weigand, Miss Nancy Chernak and Miss Bonnie Stebleton, all currently instructors in the vocational school business department.

Upon request by the salary committee of the school district faculty, the board set a special meeting for January 24 at 8 p.m. At that time the board will meet with the salary committee to discuss problems and ideas.

Resignation of Mrs. Hazel Iverson as fifth grade teacher at Washington elementary school was accepted. A replacement has been secured.

Approval was given by the board to the annual contract with parochial schools in the city regarding Title II or library funds. The public school and parochial schools receive library grants on the basis of enrollment at the respective schools, with the public schools handling the ordering, distribution and record-keeping in the program.

No action was taken on the school calendar or superintendent's contract since the full board was not in attendance.

Wesley Johnson To Head County Heart Fund Drive

Wesley Johnson of Thief River Falls has been appointed Pennington county chairman of the 1966 Heart Fund campaign, it was announced today by Lennard Hall, Minneapolis, state Heart Fund chairman.

The drive, which is the major fund-raising effort of the Minnesota Heart association, will be conducted in February with a statewide goal of $525,000.

In accepting this position, Johnson said, " 'Give so more will live' is a truly appropriate motto for the coming Heart Fund drive for now, with the knowledge of heart disease growing as it is, the work of the Heart Fund is more vital than ever before.

"Your heart association is effective in fighting heart disease because it has won the confidence, respect and gratitude not only of the medical profession but of the public. It has channeled more than $110 million into research—research that is now paying off. Its work in education and community service is bringing the benefits of new knowledge to every Minnesotan."

According to Johnson, volunteers are needed to make calls on their neighbors during February's campaign. Those interested are asked to call 681-1981.

Emergency Loans Available from FHA in County

Due to the wet spring in 1965, the planting of crops in Pennington and Red Lake counties was delayed. Due to excessive rainfall during the summer months and especially in September, harvesting of the crops was prevented. There was a damaging frost which hurt many late-seeded crops.

This is the summary report issued by Albert Mattson, supervisor of the Pennington county Farmers Home administration.

Initial emergency loans may be approved, effective immediately, in these counties which have been designated as emergency areas and are eligible for the processing of emergency loans through June 30, 1966.

Other surrounding counties which were designated as emergency areas are Lake of the Woods, Polk and Marshall.

Inquiries regarding the assistance available through the FHA can be made at Mattson's office at the Pennington county court house in Thief River Falls on any day of the week and at Oklee at his office at the back of the Security state bank of Oklee on Wednesdays between the hours of 1 and 4 p.m.

Phyllis Drotts Marries Orrin Linder Dec. 26

Miss Phyllis Drotts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Drotts of this city, and Orrin Linder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Linder of Plummer, exchanged marriage vows Sunday, December 26, at 4 p.m. at the Mission Covenant church in Thief River Falls. Officiating at the double ring ceremony were the brother of the bride, the Rev. Lowell Drotts of Batavia, Ill., and the Rev. John Lind, pastor of the local congregation.

Mrs. Alvin Dahlstrom presided at the organ and played the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin as the processional. Mrs. William Jensen of this city sang "Prayer of St. Francis of Assisi", "The Lord's Prayer" and "More Love to Thee".

Christmas decorations made the church festive for the ceremony attended by 250 guests. A decorated Christmas tree graced the chancel, and the baskets of white gladioli with red carnations on the altar were baked by graceful pine boughes. The candlelite aisle was marked by candles on the pews with sprigs of pine, bows and Christmas balls.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a floor-length satin gown with elbow length sleeves and a watteau train. Alencon lace motifs with seed pearls enhanced the scalloped neckline, emphasized the empire waistline and were scattered across the front of the slender skirt. A pillbox hat with matching Alencon lace held the fingertip veil of silk illusion and she carried a cascade style bouquet of white roses and holly leaves.

The bride chose her sister, Mrs. Phillip (Evonne) Peterson of Chicago, Ill., as her matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Marji Dalzell of Thief River Falls and Jane Ann Linder of Plummer, sister of the groom. They wore floor length gowns with dark green tops and light green crepe skirts fashioned with green satin bows at the empire waistline. Their headpieces were green satin bows and each carried a cascade of white poinsettias and holly leaves.

Flowergirl, Mary Jo Anderson of Albert Lea, cousin of the groom, wore a floor length dress with a green bow at the empire waistline and a matching green headband. Her bouquet was similar to the bridal bouquet. Ringbearer, Craig Woetzel, also of Albert Lea and a nephew of the bride, wore a black suit.

John P. Gustafson of Bemidji attended the groom as best man. Groomsmen were Clarence Gagner of Brooks and Keith Lorenson of Sebeka. Serving as ushers were Paul Tangquist of Viking and David Johnson of Oklee, cousins of the bride and grom respectively. They wore black tuxedos with white carnation boutonnieres. The groom's boutonniere was a white rose from his bride's bouquet.

Mothers of the bride and groom were attired in navy blue suits with matching accessories and each wore a corsage of red roses with white carnations. Mrs. Larry Gustafson of Thief River Falls served as the bride's personal attendant.

The reception served in the church basement with Mr. and Mrs. Conrad (Carol) Woetzel of Albert Lea, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, as host and hostess, was catered by Mrs. Gil Sannes. The four-tiered, square wedding cake, topped with a gold cross with the double-wedding ring symbol, was trimmed with white poinsettias and holly leaves. Mrs. Orville Peters and Mrs. Lowell Collins, both of this city cut and served the cake while Mrs. Mabel Foldoe of Plummer, aunt of the groom and Esther Drotts of Grand Forks, N.D., aunt of the bride, poured. Mrs. Luther Hanson of Minneapolis and Mrs. Lloyd Bakke to Cedar Falls, Iowa, served the punch while Mrs. Norella Krogstad of Stephen registered the guests.

Waitresses were Toody Overby, Ruth Brodin, Susie Carlson, Joy Gillespie, Janice Hendrickson and Harriet Philipps. In charge of arranging the gifts were Judy Johnson, Elaine Linder, cousin of the groom and Carol Sorenson.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding were from Fairbanks, Alaska; Chicago and Rockford, Ill.; Warwick and Fargo, N.D.; Northwood and Cedar Falls, Iowa; Conrad, Mont.; Oklee, Plummer, Bemidji, Sebeka, Brooks, Viking, Warren, Stephen, Minneapolis, Kelliher, Tracy and Albert Lea.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

Features from the Kitchen of

MRS. EDWIN HELGELAND

Today's recipe is the first in a series of recipes received from homemakers in Pennington county featuring some of the foods that were served at the Homemakers annual Christmas party held at Zion Lutheran church. At that time an imaginary tour was made of foreign countries with booths, specializing in foods native to that particular country. Oriental casserole is, as the name implies, a recipe from the Far East. It makes 8-10 servings and when accompanied by a salad and a dessert forms the basis of a complete meal.

ORIENTAL CASSEROLE

1 lb. lean ground beef
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup chopped onion
2 cups diced celery
1 cup uncooked regular rice
1 can mushroom soup
1 can cream of chicken soup
2 cups water
¼ cup soy sauce
1 can bean sprouts
¼ cup cashew nuts (Optional)

Method: Heat the butter and brown the beef in a deep kettle. Add all the other ingredients, blend well and pour into a 2 quart casserole. Bake 1½ hours at 350 degrees stirring occasionally. About ½ hour before serving, sprinkle with cashew nuts.

The Helgelands, who are semi-retired, live on a farm in Smiley township four miles east and one and one half miles south of Thief River Falls. They are living alone as their two children are married and have established homes of their own. Their daughter, Joyce, Mrs. J. Arthur Johnson, Jr., lives at Fergus Falls where Mr. Johnson is a Math instructor. They have one child.

Their son, Orrin, who was married a year ago to Kathry Salmonson of Dunseith, N.D., resides at Cavalier, N.D. where he is employed by MAAYO AND Son, a road construction company.

At present Mrs. Helgeland's chief interests are her home and her church work. A member of the Silverton homemakers group with Mrs. Lester Chapman as leader, Mrs. Helgland is also a member of one of the circles at Trinity Lutheran church where the Helgelands are members.

Spl Kenneth Froehle, who is stationed with the armed forces in the 516 Engineers, Hanau, Germany, spent a 30-day leave here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Froehle. On Saturday, January 1, he accompanied his father to the cities and from there went on to Ohio to visit his brother, Tom, before returning to his duties in Germany on January 7. After a business trip to Wisconsin Mr. Froehle returned here Thursday.

First Students Enroll At Crookston School

First two students at the new University of Minnesota Technical Institute, Crookston, have enrolled for the 1966 fall term when the school officially opens. They are Troy Dagen, Karlstad, and Virginia Ricard, Red Lake Falls.

The two have been greeted by Director Stanley Sahlstrom of the institute as "pioneers who will assist in setting up the student activities, government and various other student organizations which will be a part of the college campus life."

The curriculum at the institute will be a terminal, two-year college program, offering the associate degree. It will consist of technical education undergirded by a strong general education program, according to Sahlstrom.

Each student will major either in agriculture or business and will also take the general education courses.

Applications for admission are available in all Minnesota high schools and from the office of admissions and records of the institute at Crookston. Sahlstrom is urging interested applicants to register early.

Authorized by the 1965 state legislature, the new institutite has three specific objectives: occupational competency to deal with rapid developments in science and technology; preparation for student employability in today's world; and responsible citizenship and personal growth.

Dagen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luverne Dagen, is a senior at Karlstad high school and currently president of the Karlstad Future Farmers of America chapter Miss Ricard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Ricard, is a graduate of St. Joseph's academy of Crookston.

Dagen is enrolled in agriculture and Miss Ricard will be in the business curriculum at the Institute.

Beneficiaries in Fargo VA Program 2,700 in Number

Almost 2,700 beneficiaries are now being served by the Veterans administration's guardianship program in North Dakota and the 15 northwest counties in Minnesota served by the VA center in Fargo, N.D., according to John R. Parrish, center director.

The estates of veterans and their dependents protected by this service are valued at approximately $3,500,000. The protection extends to additional income amounting to more than $150,000 annually. The Farog center's guardianship program now includes 2,700 beneficiaries as compared with a total of 2,400 in 1963.

Parrish said that approximately two-thirds of the beneficiaries of the guardianship program are children of deceased veterans. The remainder are veterans or adult dependents of veterans who are incapable of managing their own financial affairs.

The chief attorney in the VA center, Fargo, administers the program, participating in over 1,000 guardianship proceedings in local courts each year and conducting approximately 800 persons interviews with the beneficiaries in their homes. The office also provides benefit entitlement information, advice, counsel and any needed liaison with local agencies.

Parrish said that the VA's guardianship service is responsible for seeing that its wards receive the maximum benefit from the amounts paid to them. Funds received are invested or deposited in the communities where the beneficiaries live, to be used as the present and future needs of the beneficiaries may require.

Social Security Reports Required Of Beneficiaries

Social security benefits are now refigured automatically. A beneficiary no longer has to apply to have his benefits refigured, according to Clifford Kittelson, district manager for social security.

While the refiguring is automatic, any beneficiaries under 72 in any month in 1965 must file annual reports of their earnings if they earned over $1,200 in 1965.

A beneficiary who stopped his benefits during 1965 will receive the annual report form by mail. A beneficiary under 72 who earned over $1,200 last year and did not stop his social security checks should ask his social security office for the annual report form.

The annual report must be filed by April 15. A beneficiary wanting help in completing it should bring a record of his earnings with him. A wage earner should bring in his W-2 witholding statement. A self-employed person should leave with him a copy of his 1965 federal income tax return.

Benefits are now refigured in payment centers, Kittelson said. This will be done independently of the filing of the annual report of earnings. The new system assures that all beneficiaries entitled to increases will get them.

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning Among Winter Dangers

Don't overlook winter driving's fourth hazard—carbon monoxide poisoning, motorists were warned today by the Minnesota AAA. Most persons think of winter driving hazards as being limited to ice, snow and cold.

Because those three hazards are easily recognized, a motorist can take proper precautions, says the motoring organization. But it's different with carbon monoxide, which is oderless and tasteless and which cannot be seen.

Even so, the presence of carbon monoxide can be detected, usually through symptoms of persons who are beginning to be affected by this deadly poison. Nausea, tired eyes or headach felt by the driver or by a passenger could mean that carbon monoxide gas seeping into the car has reached a dangerous level.

Although CO is present any time an automobile engine is running, the hazards of being poisoned by the gas are greatest in winter, when car windows are usually shut tight and the car heater is in use.

Even in sub-zero weather, motorists should avoid shutting all car windows. Opening a wing window and an opposite rear window each just a crack will provide enough circulation to minimize dangers from carbon monoxide.

Other suggestions from AAA include:

1. At the first sign of headache, tired eyes or nausea, stop the car, get out and breathe fresh air.
2. Have the muffler and exhaust pipe checked for leaks.
3. To reduce the amount of fumes drawn into the car by the heater air vents, avoid following other cars too closely.
4. Don't sit in a parked car for any length of time while the engine is running. If you do, be sure the windows are open.

Tree Farming To Observe 25 Years Since Beginning

Tree Farming will be 25 years old this year. Starting from one tree farm in the State of Washington in 1941, the program has spread throughout the United State There are presently about 29,000 U. S. citizens recognized as tree farmers for their management of over 65 million acres. Tree farms are privately-owned, tax-paying forest lands being properly managed for a multitude of benefits.

Minnesota has been one of the leaders in Tree Farmings with 1,650 certified tree farmers having a total acreage of 750,000. The American Tree Farm system444 is recognized as the greatest forest conservation movement since the turn of the century. It touches the lives of all citizens with its multiple benefits of useful wood products, water conservation, forage, wildlife, soil stabilization, watershed control and outdoor recreation.

In 1939 the forest industries paid $857,155,000 to 882,568 employees. In 1963 they paid $7,044,000,000 in wages to 1,452,000 employees to produce products with a vlue of over $29,000,000,000.

Here in Minnesota the estimated value of forest products harvested has increased from $38,000,000 in 1941 to $280,000,000 in 1964—an increase of seven times in less than 25 years. But the benefits of tree farming are not solely economic. Tree farms provide many other benefits including enjoyment for millions of Americans.

The Tree Farm program is sponsored nationally by American Forest Products Industries, Inc. Keep Minnesota Green, Inc., sponsors and co-ordinates the tree farm program in Minnesota. Cooperating with KMG and important to its program are the forest and related industries; the state division of forestry; the agricultural extension service; the U. S. Forest service; and many other conservation - minded organizations, agencies and individuals.

Information on becoming a tree farmer can be obtained by writing: Keep Minnesota Green, Inc., 117 University Avenue, St. Paul 55101, Minnesota.

Forestry Losses Lowest Recorded In Past 55 Years

Minnesota forestry division has announced that fire losses in forested acres during 1965 were the lowest ever recorded during the 55 years that records have been kept. Although there have been 12 years when fewer wild fires occurred, losses in standing timber in 1965 were the lowest ever since most fires were confined to grass areas.

There was a total of 614 fires during the year which burned 21,713 acres, but only 1,743 acres were forested with the balance classified as grass or brush.

First fire of the year occurred on April 19. During the 16-day period to May 4, there were 322 fires. Another dry period was October 21 to November 8 when 102 fires were recorded.

Despite a relatively wet year and few number of fires, records show that fires of some kind occurred during 100 of the 202 days between the first fire and the last fire of the year.

The worst 10-year period in Minnesota for fire losses was from 1925 through 1934 when there was an average of over 2,000 fires per year which destroyed an average annual acreage of 119,870 forested acres.

A gradual reduction in forest fire losses have been achieved through the years, chiefly through a program of fire prevention education, better fire detection facilities and an increase in the numbers and types of fire suppression equipment.

Other contributing factors have been the use of two-way radios, lookout towers, greater knowledge of fire behavior, better fire weather forecasting and an increase in the number of trained personnel.

But the primary factor, in the opinion of forestry officials, is public acceptance of the fact that there is a need for more adequate fire protection.

Don Wilson, state forest fire suppression chief, said, "While we have made great strides in the struggle to protect our forest resources from wild fires, still greater improvement must be made if Minnesota is to continue as one of the leaders in recreation, timber, water and game."

Over 100 Future Farmers of America chapters conduct each year organized conservation programs such as reforestation, improvemnt of wildlife habitat, and raising and releasing of ducks and pheasants. Approximately 500 Future Farmer members in over 100 Future Farmer chapters raised and released over 20,000 waterfowl and game birds in 1965.

Public Hearing On Driver Clinic Set in St. Paul

A public hearing to discuss proposed rules and regulations covering the administration of driver improvement clinics will be held in the auditorium of the state office building, St. Paul, January 19, at 1:30 p.m.

These clinics, often referred to as violator schools, assist persons convicted of traffic violations, and provide a formal course of study designed primarily to correct improper driving habits and to familiarize them with highway regulations.

The courts, municipalities, or association of municipalities or any regularly established safety organization may establish and conduct driver improvement clinics. The rules and regulations proposed to be studied at the hearing in January provide the details of operation, definitions and methods of administration.

The driver improvement clinic bill provides that trial courts in the judgment of conviction may order the person to attend and satisfactorily complete a course of study. In addition, volunteers who may wish to improve their driving knowledge may attend.

Copies of the proposed rules may be obtained from the Director of the Safety Division, Minnesota Highway Department, St. Paul, Minn., 55101.

About seventy of Minnesota's 281 mer chapters annually conduct FFA chapters operate a school farm and over twenty chapters operate a school forest.

Queries Answered on Federal Income Tax

These questions most frequently asked by taxpayers on federal income tax matters with authoritative answers are provided by the office of the district director of Internal Revenue, St. Paul.

Q—How soon will I receive my withholding statement, Form W-2, so I can file my 1965 income tax return?

A—Employers must furnish withholding statements to employees not later than January 31, following the close of the taxable year. If an employee leaves the service of an employer before the close of the calendar year, and is not expected to return to work, the statement must be furnished to the employee not later than 30 days after the last payment of wages.

Q—A girl in the restaurant where I work told me that tax will be withheld on tips starting January 1. Is this correct?

A—Changes in the social security law provide that cash tips will be included in total wages earned for social security purposes. Your tip income can now be counted in determine the amount of social security benefits.

Those who receive tips of $20 or more during a month must report their tip income to their employers within 10 days after the close of the month. Tip income has always been taxable for federal income purposes, but until the law was changed, it had not been subject to withholding the social security tax deductions the same as salaries and wages.

Q—I made a pledge to my church's capital funds drive. Will I be able to deduct this on my 1965 tax return?

A—You may deduct only the amount you actually paid on your pledge during 1965.

S—What is included as "other compensation earned in 1965" on my wage and tax statement?

A—This includes compensation which was not subject to income tax withholding but is required to be included in your gross income: These items are the value of living quarters or meals furnished to an employee which are not excluded, travel and other expense which are considered income to the employee, annuity payments that are not excludible, the cost of group-term life insurance to the extent includible in the employee's gross income and amounts paid as prizes and awards by the employer.

This income was heretofore reported on Form 1099, but may be shown on Form W-2 or the 1099 this year, but not on both.

Q—Do I have to pay the final installment of my 1965 estimated tax?

A—If you file your 1965 income tax return and pay in full the balance of tax due by Jan. 31, 1966, you are not required to pay the last installment of the estimated tax due on Jan. 15, 1966.

Q—May I deduct the cost of my auto license tags this year?

A—Certain state and local taxes are no longer deductible on an individual return. Among these nondeductible items are automobile license fees and driver's license costs. However, state and local taxes you pay on real estate, personal property and income are still deductible on your federal tax return.

Q—What about someone like myself who receives a few hundred dollars in dividend income. Is this income taxable?

A—Individuals may receive up to $100 in dividend income before any of this income is taxable. For married couples where both have dividend income, each may receive up to $100 in dividend income tax-free.

perty, two; discharge gun in city limits, one; allow dog to run at large, four; and keep unlicensed dog in city, one.

Police answered 2,876 calls in which some action was taken during the year. The call total was down from 4,057 in 1964, primarily due to the police department no longer conducting affairs at the city scale. Calls for truck weighing resulted in a much larger total a year ago.

Police apprehension resulted in 199 man days spent in the city jail while 316 man days in city jail were served by persons apprehended by the county sheriff and state highway patrol. The department answered 56 fire calls, escorted 58 funerals and provided 47 escorts for other than funerals, found 69 door open during night rounds and investigated 269 accidents.

Fifty-eight accident reports were furnished to insurance companies, 41 sleepers used jail facilities, 313 dog calls were answered, 14 dog bites investigated and 151 dogs impounded. Only five burglaries and unlawful entries were investigated as compared with 24 in 1964. Attempted break-ins investigated increase from one to six while shoplifting complaints investigated increased from 22 to 28. Larcenies investigated totaled 118 as compared with 137 in 1964.

Vandalism increased from 65 to 85 cases from 1964 to 1965. Police biles, one personal injury, one property damage, seven suspicious persons, 27 calls for window-peeking or prowling, two transients or beggars, three fraud cases, one short-change artist complaint, 11 peddlers, four mail violations, eight disorderly conduct cases, three liquor violations, one molesting case, one indecent exposure case, one anonymous phone call, two forgeries, three bad check complaints and one case of discharging a gun in the city limits.

Chief Cummings attributed the increase of 13 in dog licenses and 329 in bicycle licenses from 1964 to projects by the local Jaycee chapter. The Jaycees, in cooperation with the VFW post, staged a bicycle testing and licensing campaign in the spring and a free rabies clinic for vaccination of dogs and cats this fall.

Juvenile offenses investigated by the police department increased from 303 to 333 in 1965. Not all of these investigations resulted in the offender appearing in court, but both warnings and those appearing in court are included in the report total.

Camp Friendship Selected as Name For ARC Property

"Camp Friendship" has been selected as the name of the new residential camp for mentally retarded children and adults operated by the Minnesota Association for Retarded Children (ARC), according to Raymond W. Doyle, Rochester, association president.

Located on Clearwater lake seven miles north of Annandale, the camp opened in June of 1965. Until now it has been known as the Minnesota ARC Camp.

During the first summer season, it served 553 campers from throughout the state, including 13 families of retarded children. Of the campers, 288 were from state institutions.

Doyle said the camp name ties in with that of the association's annual November fund drive, the Friendship campaign. The camp is supported by funds from this drive and from more than 400 United Funds and other federated drives throughout the state.

"The concept of friendship embraces many of the camp's goals," the Minnesota ARC president explained, "A friend, for instance, is someone who understands you, and understanding is one of the important needs of the retarded. A friend, also, is someone who helps you, and the retarded need special help in order to realize their potentials and to lead full, happy lives."

Help at Camp Friendship, Doyle said, basically means teaching a camper how to get more out of life how to do new things, to participate actively, to socialize, to be more independent or take more responsibility.

"The friendships formed with staff members and with other campers also are an important benefit to campers," Doyle noted. Many members of last year's staff have visited the state institutions several times since the end of the season to see the patients who attended the camp last summer.

During the winter, the camp is used for weekend outings by groups of retarded persons from throughout the state. Opening date of the 1966 summer season will be June 17.

More Than 3,000 Participate in State Youth Corps

Over 3,000 Minnesota young men have received training to date under the Neighborhood Youth Corps program administered by the conservation department, it was announced today.

The program got underway in Minnesota on February 23 when the conservation department activated the first NYC project at Ft. Snelling state park. Since then there have been 226 separate projects in 69 of Minnesota's 87 counties.

Priority has been given to projects located in economically distressed counties and in areas having large numbers of jobless youth lacking high school educations.

As examples of the types of work accomplished by NYC youth, the governor cited the following: Planting of 1,630,000 trees, timber stand improvement on 34,947 acres, 695 miles of road improved, development and improvement of 5,328 miles of trails, building of 1,681 picnic tables and clearing of 200 acres for campsites.

Rolvang said the three main goals for the NYC program are: (1) to provide useful work experience; (2) testing, counseling, job development and placement (provided by the Minnesota Employment service,) and (3) remedial education service.

The governor said the effectiveness of the program is indicated by the fact that 900 enrollees returned to high school and 300 obtained full-time employment.

He said several 'graduates' of the program advanced to further training under the federal Manpower Training act, some entered the armed forces and the Job Corps and 400 are still enrolled in the program.

Svendsgaard Herd Tops Pennington DHIA in November

Orville Peters, supervisor of the Pennington County Dairy Herd Improvement association, lists the following herds as the top 10 in the association for the month of November:

	Pounds Milk	Pounds Milk
Dale Svendsgaard	1,380	49.0
Darrow Lundeen	1,221	43.7
Wallace Relerson	983	36.2
Paul Morkassel	910	36.0
Martin Hanson	853	34.6
Art M. Stenberg	893	34.4
Albert Koop	892	34.2
Harold Sabo	974	33.3
Curtis Johnson	860	32.3
Clarence Swanson	836	32.2

Herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. The amount of milk or butterfat produced is averaged out over all the cows, giving the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for the month.

If too many dry cows are included in the herd, the average for that month may be low even though the cows which are milking produce a lot of milk.

There were 24 herds on test with a total of 718 cows and an average of 29.8 cows per herd during November with Pennington association; 78 per cent of which were milking. The average amount of milk produced per cow was 738 pounds which tested 3.74 per cent fat. This amounted to 29.3 pounds of butterfat per cow.

Fourteen cows finished with over 500 pounds butterfat during the testing year in a 365-day or less lactation. They were from the following herds:

2,078 Contacted Social Security Fieldman in '65

A total of 2,078 people contacted Chuck Fahlberg, social security field representative, about social security matters during 1965 at the Thief River Falls municipal auditorium, according to Clifford Kittelson, manager of the Grand Forks, N.D., social security district.

These persons came from many of the surrounding towns, as well as from Thief River Falls. Kittelson stated that many of the people came from St. Hilaire, Goodridge, Grygla, Newfolden, Middle River and Strandquist. Nearly all the communities in Pennington county and the eastern two-thirds of Marshall county had residents calling on Fahlberg at Thief River Falls during the past year.

Of the 2,078 people that contacted the social security representative, 672 filed applications for social security benefits and the rest sought information about the social security program. These 672 applications included 73 applications from farmers over the age of 62, 99 from people who worked for wages, 43 applications for disability benefits and three applications for childhood disability payments.

There was also a substantial number of people who inquired about and in most cases applied for medicare coverage. In addition, a large number of survivors claims were filed and many students filed claims to receive checks while they continue in school up to their 22nd birthdays.

Effective this January, Fahlberg will also be coming to Thief River Falls several times a month on special days for appointments only. This will be in addition to his regular Tuesday visits. Appointments on these special days can be secured by writing the Social Se- Grand Forks, North Dakota.

Safety Council Study Tests Studded Tires

Are the newly-developed snow tires containing metal studs as safe and efficient on winter road surfaces as some manufacturers claim? Research to be undertaken by the National Safety council's committee on winter driving hazards at Stevens Point, Wis., this winter will seek answers to this question which is of vital concern to highway users and public officials.

Preliminary tests made by the committee last winter at Stevens Point indicate that cars equipped with these tires are safer on icy pavements than cars with regular snow tires, but reinforced tire chains afford still more safety.

Prof. E. A. Whithurst, committee chairman, said the council's tests showed the following average stopping distances on ice for a car traveling at 20 mph with new equipment:

Regular tires, 180 feet; snow tires, 167 feet; studded snow tires, 110 feet; and reinforced tire chains, 70 feet.

"The tests also showed that new studded tires rank somewhere between tire chains and regular snow tires in starting ability on ice," Whitehurst said. He summarized the council's traction test findings on ice by reporting that snow tires give 36 per cent improvement over regular tires, studded snow tires provide 136 per cent improvement and reinforced tire chains offer 405 per cent improvement.

"Highway users should recognize that these tests were made with new equipment," Whitehurst said. "Limited data indicates that after 5,000 miles of wear, studded tires may lose as much as 50 per cent of their effectiveness. We hope to find out more about the influence of wear on tire efficiency during this winter's tests."

Whitehurst said the committee members are interested in reports by some agencies, including the Swedish national road research institute, that studded tires may reduce the coefficients of friction on bare pavements, both wet and dry, by as much as 25 per cent.

"Since some of today's heavily-traveled pavements are already considered to be slippery when wet, it is obvious that any additional loss in traction because of the studs, particularly at high speeds, could lead to a most hazardous situation," Whitehurst said.

"In the meantime," Whitehurst added, "until some of these questions are answered, the council continues to recommend regular snow tires for use during mid-to-medium snow and ice conditions, and advises that studded tires are more effective than regular tires on ice and that reinforced tire chains are best for severe snow and ice conditions.

"No matter what traction aid you employ," he concluded, "slower-than-normal speeds are an absolute must on slippery pavements."

Blizzard Sunday Follows -35 Cold

Weather conditions during the past week have been of the variety that might give a resident of northwestern Minnesota the distinct impression that he is located somewhere between the North Pole and the Arctic Circle. High winds, snow and extremely low temperatures have characterized weather in the area since Thursday afternoon.

Since Thursday, blizzard conditions have occurred on two days due to the passing through of two arctic high-pressure ridges. Snowfall was not excessive compared with previous snowstorms, but was phenomenal for such low temperatures. Friday was the coldest day of the winter, and of most recent winters, with a high of -20 degrees and a morning low of -35. The unofficial thermometer at the KTRF transmitter reach a low of -39 that morning. These reading made Thief River Falls the "icebox of the nation."

Winds suddenly switched to the south late Friday night, bringing a flow of warmer air. The thermometer jumped from -33 to 6 degrees between Friday night and Saturday afternoon. Relatively mild winter weather prevailed Saturday, but northwesterly winds gusting up to 50 miles per hour swept the area Sunday, whipping the dry snow into drifts and causing the mercury to take another nose-dive. This morning's low at 7 a.m. was -17 degrees. On two occasions during the period, the combination of wind and temperature reduced the exposure time at the Grand Forks Air Base to eight minutes, meaning that exposed flesh would freeze in that length of time. During Sunday's blizzard, the Red River Valley experienced its peculiar phenomenon called "snirt", which is a mixture of snow and dirt.

Pennington county highway department reports that snowplows are out to clear rural roads after Sunday's heavy drifting. Roads running east and west are believed to be mostly open but the department expects some north and south roads to be blocked. Drifts are extremely hard due to the force of the wind.

Forecast calls for mostly fair skies today and tonight with diminishing winds. Colder temperatures are predicted for northwestern Minnesota today, spreading over the state tonight. Increasing cloudiness and slightly warmer temperatures are expected tomorrow. High today will range from 2 to -8; lows tonight from -10 to -25.

Temperature and precipitation readings recorded by North Central Airlines at the municipal airport are as follows: -3 and -12 on Wednesday; -12, -20 and two inches of snow containing .06 inch of water on Thursday; -20, -35 and .4 inch of snow containing .02 inch water on Friday; 6, -33 and a trace on Saturday; 10, -3 and a trace on Sunday; and a low this morning of -17.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q—May a 100 per cent disabled veteran take out a loan on the new GI "J" insurance, and if so, how much may he obtain?

A—After a veteran has held the policy for at least one year, he can borrow up to 94 per cent of the cash value of the policy. However, if not repaid, it will reduce the face value of the policy by the amount borrowed, plus interest.

Q—Will dividends be paid on the new GI "J" insurance as on the original NSLI policies issued during World War II?

A—No, the new "J" insurance is not issued as a participating type policy and does not pay dividends.

Q—My pension was discontinued when I received an extra large dividend which put me over the ceiling. Does this mean I am no longer to receive a pension?

A—If this was a one-time payment, your pension will only be discontinued for the current year. Next year you will again be eligible, providing your income reverts to the status it was prior to being discontinued.

Conservation of Water Cited by Governor Rolvaag

Governor Karl F. Rolvaag in a proclamation issued today proclaimed 1966 as "Minnesota Water Conservation Year."

"If there is one great need in Minnesota today", Rolvaag declared, "it is the need for leadership in the promotion of a state-wide comprehensive water conservation program. Water has been taken for granted too long. A water crisis is confronting the nation and the world.

"Since such a program requires public understanding and support if it is to meet desired objectives, I earnestly request all individuals, youth and adult groups, agencies, counties and communities, actively to join in and support this top-priority undertaking.

"For this reason", Rolvaag announced, "I propose to name a planning or executive committee in the near future to map the program, to conduct an independent study, to serve as a clearing house for current water studies and to prepare recommendations for legislative action.

"For my part, I propose to recommend that the natural resources program of tomorrow be designed to give major emphasis to our water conservation program."

Rolvaag further declared, "It is high time we get down to conservation fundamentals in Minnesota and place a top-priority status on this our most precious, most neglected and most abused natural resource."

State Outdoor Recreation Meet Set in St. Paul

Representatives from counties, cities and towns throughout Minnesota will meet in St. Paul Thursday at a state-wide conference on financial assistance to local units of government for outdoor recreation. Governor Karl F. Rolvaag has announced.

The meeting will be held in the National Guard armory located in the State Capitol approach, 600 Cedar Street, beginning at 9:30 a.m. The all-day session will acquaint county commissioners, mayors, planning commissioners, recreation boards and others interested in recreation development with provisions of the federal Land and Water Conservation Fund act.

Under the act, grants are made to the states for the planning, land acquisition and development of recreation areas and facilities. The states may allocate a portion of their share to local government units.

Minnesota's grant for 1965 and 1966 is $1,672,268. The state will distribute one-half of this sum ($836,134) to local governmental units.

Grants under the land and water act will provide up to 50 per cent of the cost of planning, acquisition and development of outdoor recreation projects within the limits of the state allocation. The act is administered nation-wide by the bureau of outdoor recreation and in Minnesota by the department of conservation.

Governor Rolvaag will address the meeting. Chairman of the meeting will be conservation Commissioner Wayne H. Olson. Regional director Roman H. Koenings and other officials of the bureau of outdoor recreation will explain the requirements and procedures of the act and answer questions.

State officials from the departments of conservation, business development and administration will explain how the state and its political subdivisions may participate in this and other federal and state recreation programs.

The conference will include a review of the preliminary state outdoor recreation plan, guidelines for counties and municipalities and county recreation planning.

Approximately 900 invitations to attend the meeting were sent to counties and municipalities by the conservation department.

Appearing in newspapers of the Minnesota Editorial Association through the cooperation of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture

Sturdy trees that help put the brakes on the howling prairie winds are being planted as part of community projects in Northwestern Minnesota.

In the past five years, some 328 miles of trees have been planted by groups representing the Northwestern state bank of Hallock, the U. S. Soil Conservation service, the Kittson Soil and Water Conservation district, the Agricultural Extension service and the county commissioners.

Siberian Elms have been the favorite species for most plantings, according to David Anderson, SCS conservationist.

Most planting is done in the spring, although fall plantings of Siberian Elm have been successful, and may be expanded in the future to ease the spring work load. Both mechanical and chemical wheat control measures have given good results.

Anderson points out that Kittson county is typical of the Northern Great Plains, with climatic extremes of high summer temperatures, cold winters, generally low rainfall and strong winds.

Wind breaks not only stabilize the climatic extremes, but also produce other benefits. Wind breaks cut wind velocity and therefore wind erosion, especially on lighter soils. Without them, soil structure may be damaged and fertility may be lost by wind erosion. Ditches may fill in and new seed may blow away.

Heavier soils need wind breaks too, but for somewhat different reasons. They have poor internal drainage and have a need to control the problems of big snow drifts, fill ditches and spotty snow accumulation on the fields. Wind breaks can make soil moisture more uniform over large areas.

"God had infinite time to give us: but how did He give it? In one immense tract of a lazy millenium? No, but He cut it up into a neat succession of new mornings, and, with each, therefore, a new idea, new inventions, and new applications."
—Ralph Waldo Emerson

One Man, One Vote

Ruling by the U. S. supreme court that state legislatures must be apportioned on a population basis has caused consternation to a number of states. Now the ruling has spread to a more local basis, as three Rochester residents have brought suit claiming that Rochester, with two-thirds of the population of Olmsted county, is not fairly represented on the Olmsted county commission. The suit is now before the Minnesota supreme court.

Should the courts decide that the "one man, one vote" principle applies to smaller units than state government, there will be real confusion in Minnesota and most of the other states of the union. General geographic areas have long been considered as a basis for county and local governmental divisions.

It could mean—if the courts carry their interpretation to the extreme—that not only county governments but municipal governments as well would have to be redistricted. If the courts do not carry their ruling to the local level, they would certainly be inconsistent. In fact, they would be as inconsistent as the federal court which has not decreed that U. S. Senators should also be elected on a population basis.

Lyndon's Blessing

United States Steel corporation announced a "selective" increase in the price of structural steel shapes, and the federal administration said the increase was acceptable under wage-price guidelines. It is to be presumed that the government also set up the guidelines by which it made this evaluation.

It was only a short time ago that the Whitehouse slapped the wrist of the aluminum industry which also wanted a price increase. U.S. Steel's increase of about $2.75 per ton was slightly more than half the increase announced last week by Bethlehem Steel corporation. President Johnson has asked Bethlehem and Inland to drop their price boosts back to the same level as USS.

We believe that American industry has a responsibility to its stockholders before it has a responsibility to observe the directives of Presidential edict. Industry has a right to show a profit—indeed, it must show a profit for our economy to maintain continued growth.

We wonder if President Johnson has considered that the price per ton for steel is no based on a static amount of dead weight. Steel has been improved in recent years. It is highly possible, even probable, that higher strength has been built into lighter steel so that fewer tons will make more product. In this event, is a price increase per ton really a price increase to users?

Should it be necessary for every move of U.S. Industry to be officially sanctioned by Lyndon's blessing?

Dodd At It Again

American sportsmen and others interested in the fundamental right of Americans to keep and bear arms will apparently be faced with another battle in the legislative halls in 1966. This time they may have to fight Presidential endorsement of gun control legislation, and the victory may not be so easily won.

Last year Sen. Thomas Dodd of Connecticut introduced a strong bill to control sale of firearms, but the bill fortunately got tied up in committee. There was no real Presidential support and a number of other matters with administration approval were given preferential treatment. This session things may be entirely different.

It has been reported that President Johnson has assured Senator Dodd of steady and strong Presidential support for a powerful measure. There are some possibilities that the President may seek an even stronger bill in the coming session. It is seen as a major complement to his anti-crime package in 1966.

We are sure there are still enough Senators and Representatives in Congress who, in spite of their apparent lack of mentality, realize that restricting firearms ownership is no logical way to prevent crime. They would defeat a bill on its own lack of merit. If such a bill is incorporated into an omnibus legislative package, however, it could slip into law through the unwritten laws of compromise and sentiment-testing which mark the national political scene.

Sportsmen in the nation not only fear that unwitting and unwarranted restrictions on firearms might well curtail their sport, they are seriously concerned about the actual loss of liberty which such control might well bring. An unarmed populace with no means to defend their homes and families is much easier to subdue and conquer than an armed population which was defensive strength in its armament.

The nation's people are beginning to get pretty sick of the self-assumed "thou shalt" and "thou shalt not" attitude of the federal government. Firearms control is only one part of the restrictive action which may be expected from the 1966 Congress, but it is an important part and one which should be most strongly opposed.

We don't know Senator Dodd. We can't say if he actually believes his bill would solve crime problems in the nation or if he is seizing on such a vital topic simply to gain headlines. If he belives the former, he is mis-informed, mis-guided and mistaken. If the latter is true, he is not deserving of public trust and should be soundly trounced if he seeks reelection.

Our nation now has stringent laws against the use of firearms in criminal action, and severe penalties for such use. Possession should not constitute a crime and should not be further restricted. It should be no more illegal to possess a gun than to own household ammonia or other items in common use which are also capable of deadly effect.

There are thousands of Americans who find untold hours of pleasure in possession of guns, in collecting, trading, shooting and studying them and their history. Only a very few use them for violence, and no one has been able to prove that these persons would not find a substitute if guns were not available to them. For that matter, those persons who want firearms for crime would get them anyway. Lack of ability to make a legitimate purchase of a gun would not deter them in the least.

Senator Dodd's contention is based on a faulty foundation of fallacy. It is too bad that so many people with so many better things to do must give consideration to his wild desires and expend time, money and energy to be sure his attempts to pressure his plan on the American public are thwarted before it is too late.

If you believe in freedom, write your Senators and Congressman and tell them what you think of the restriction of firearms sale and use. And don't hesitate to use any adjectives you think are appropriate—most of them will fit.

The Deeper Roots

As incredulous as draft card burning and demonstrations have been on the surface, it is the deeper roots of the situation which have caused most concern within the nation today. Patriotism has gone the way of the horse-drawn carriage in our nation and such should not be the case. We appreciate the following comments from the Truman "Tribune":

Quintus advised his brother Cicero that men prefer false promise to a flat refusal and isn't this about what we get from our political orators today? Democrat candidates (Wilson, Roosevelt, Truman, Johnson) stated on no uncertain terms that American sons would not fight on foreign soil. And each time there was an election. And each time the Democrats won. And each time America's sons were fighting on foreign soil. Perhaps the false promise was not intentional, but it most certainly was false. On the other hand, Goldwater accurately appraised the situation and for his foresight and honesty he got his political teeth kicked in. So, maybe Quintus had something.

But what has happened to the devotion, the respect and the love for our way of life—for America? Minority groups are carrying on demonstrations and shouting slogans that would have been considered first rate treason one generation ago. The burning of drafts cards is looked upon by some as a free expression of disagreement.

Twelve years ago a U. S. Senator suggested some pro-communist books in American overseas libraries be burned, and he was almost put to the stake for even suggesting such a thing. Having been a part of a Selective Service Board for several years, we saw a lot of draft cards but none that needed burning nearly so much as some books we have seen. Yet one act is the free expression of disagreement while the other is the misdeed of a black-hearted, book-burning-minded, evil man. Why?

We are told the United Nations is good and that we cannot exist without the organization. UNESCO, a subcommittee of the UN, was able to put their booklet "In the Classroom" into some California schools and in that book you will find the recommendation that the picture of George Washington, Abe Lincoln, Thomas Jefferson and other American greats be removed from the walls of our schoolrooms. Such mementos inspire an unreasonable amount of patriotism in our youth—we are told. The UNESCO book also recommends that the U.S. abolish its national anthem. Well, some irate patriots got the book kicked out of the schools, but could the spirit of the book have lingered on?

Liden Field Goal Wins Fosston Cage Contest

Following their 51-31 loss to the defending Region Eight basketball champion Bemidji here on Friday night, the Prowlers on Saturday night moved over to Fosston for an inter-district game against the Greyhounds and coach Whitey Olson's squad tallied a 48 to 46 win. It was a come-from-behind effort for the Prowlers who trailed at all the period stops, and it was on Wayne Liden's field goal with a couple of seconds to play that the Prowlers recorded their two-point win.

The Prowlers will meet the Bagley Flyers from District 30 on Saturday night on the Lincoln high school court. The Flyers are rated as one of the stronger teams in the district, and on Friday night the Flyers scored a 77 to 57 win over McIntosh.

In Friday night's game against their traditional rivals the Bemidji Lumberjacks, the Prowlers were "in the game" until the final minutes of the second period when a pair of field goals by Dan Christenson, a field goal by Doug Schwartz, and a two-pointer by Richie Glas gave coach Fortier's squad a 27 to 18 lead at the intermission.

Except for the play off the offensive board, and which found the Prowlers scoring several tip-ins, the Jacks were proving the stronger team.

In the second half, the third period was played on near-even terms with Bemidji notching 10 points and the Prowlers nine. But the locals were limited to but four points, on field goals by Mark Stromberg and Tommy Cummings, in the fourth period. The Jacks employed a man-to-man defense, and Howard Hogunson, assigned to Stromberg, and Christensen, covering Cummings, turned in fine defensive efforts.

At Fosston on Saturday night the Prowlers trailed by a 13 to 10 score at the end of the first period, and a 34 to 27 margin at the intermission. Fosston held at 41 to 36 edge entering the final period, but in this period Fosston could garner but five points, with Jim Lohmeier getting a field goal and a free throw and Larry Roed adding a pair of free throws. The Prowlers tallied six field goals with Cummings and Liden getting a pair each, including Liden's gamewinning effort, and Karl Poppenhagen and Mark Stromberg adding single field goals.

Gov. Commends Commission for Sugar Beet Work

Governor Karl F. Rolvaag today commended the Governor's commission on the sugar beet industry at a meeting held at the Leamington hotel. The commission was cited for the positive approach members have taken in finding solutions to problems of the industry, which will be of direct benefit to the agricultural economy of Minnesota, Gov. Rolvaag said.

Governor Rolvaag further expressed his appreciation for the progress to date in establishing sub-committees on legislation, research and education, transportation and labor, finances and public relations and promotion.

"These sub-committees have an essential task, the accomplishment of which will result in the betterment of this vital agricultural industry. The results of the Commission to date have been gratifying," Governor Rolvaag said.

The average investment in agricultural programs by Minnesota's 14,236 members during the past twelve months was $519.00 per member.

The Flu Bug

I spent New Year's day, and several succeeding days, in the hospital receiving treatment, successfully, for the flu. When I first felt the aches and pains, and the chills of fever, I hoped that I was coming down with some exotic or status disease, a virus or something. But diagnosis indicated that I had the plain old everyday flu. And proper antibiotics put these bugs to rout.

Junior College Basketball

While there is an abundance of athletic activity around here, with high school basketball, wrestling, hocky, and grade-school hocky on Saturday mornings, the Midget and V.F.W. hockey at various times during the week, sports fans should make a note that the local junior college basketball team is playing a schedule of games.

Coach Al Adams is coaching the newly-organized squad, and this evening, Monday, the locals will meet Itasca Junior college from Coleraine on the Lincoln high school court. Tip-off time is slated at 7:30 p.m.

A junior college tournament is scheduled to be played here on Friday night, February 11, and Saturday afternoon, February 12. Four teams will participate in the tourney.

This was an Instance

Over the years coach Bun Fortier has developed some fine basketball teams at Bemidji. Squads which were able to rack up victories regardless of the all-out efforts of the Jacks' opponents. In other instances Bemidji has scored victories and in these games the Jacks' job has been made easier by the fact that their opponents have been "beating themselves". And it was such an instance on Friday night here when Bemidji pulled away to a 51 to 31 win.

On Friday night the Prowlers kept pace with the Jacks for a couple of periods, and at one time in the opening minutes of the second period the locals held a 16-15 lead. But the Prowlers were guilty of numerous misplays, faulty ball handling, and lack of consistent shooting. Bemidji, on the other hand, was showing fine shooting, with Howard Hogarson looping in several field goals from the baseline to the left of the basket, and Dan Christensen also revealed a propensity for hitting the hoop from the baseline.

But a game which could have been nip-and-tuck until the final buzzer, became a Bemidji-controlled affair when the Jacks gained a 10-point margin and then took advantage of Prowler misplays to romp to the 51 to 31 win. I've seen this happen on too many occasions to believe that it is just luck. Bun and his staff may plan it that way.

Did you know that four of Bemidji's starters were wearing glasses? From the sidelines it was evident that one player, Doug Schwartz, was wearing glasses, for he had on spectacles. But forward Hoganson, center Bob Johnson, and guard Richie Glass were also wearing glasses, but these three boys were fitted with contact lenses.

Incidentally, Schwartz, only a sophomore, is a transfer student from Sleepy Eye. And he will be of great help to the Jacks' by tournament time. Another transfer student, who saw limited action at center on Friday night, is junior John Swanson. Swanson, a transfer from Alexander Ramsey high school in St. Paul, is a standout football player. He was a first-string quarterback for Ramsey, but was sidelined by a knee injury that required surgery. He limped slightly on Friday, but he should be first-rate by tournament time, and should provide Red Wilson with some fine football material next fall.

Prowlers 5th in 8-Team Tourney

Coach Ed Krystosek's Prowler wrestlers gained two individual championships, and fifth place in the team standings in the eight-team invitational wrestling tournament held at Grand Rapids on Saturday. The team totals were as follows: Grand Rapids, 101; Aitkin, 87; Bemidji, 66; Brainerd, 51; Thief River Falls, 45; Coleraine, 11; Hibbing, 25; and Warren, 16.

On Friday night the powerful Park Rapids Panthers, a contender for Region Eight honors, will meet the Prowlers in the Lincoln high school gymnasium. Park Rapids, with a regional champion in Jim Carey, and a pair of regional runners-up in Dennis Cheney and Charles Pike, is expected to provide the Prowlers with their toughest competition of the season. The B squad matches will begin at 6:30 p.m., and the varsity matches at 7:30 p.m.

The Prowlers' Myles Olson, in the 103-pound class, and Steve Furuseth, in the 112-pound division, were successful in defending the individual titles they won last season. Olson defeated Bemidji's Terry May, 4-0, in a first-round match; beated Melvin Beier of Coleraine by a pin in a second-round match; and then scored a 1-0 decision over Brainerd's Hugh Warner in the finals. Furuseth opened his defense by defeating Charles Torkelson of Warren, 4-0; edged out Coleraine's Jim Fideley, 4-3, in a semi-final match; and then decisioned Roger Howard of Aitkin, 4-2, in the finals.

Rocky Wilson, wrestling in the 120-pound class, gained a third place in the individual ratings. Wilson scored a 3-2 decision over Jeff Anderson of Brainerd in a first-round match, and lost to Bob Lamson of Aitkin, 5-2, in a semi-finals match, Lamson won the division title.

The Prowlers had a pair of fourth place winners in Tom Miller in the 165-pound class, and Don Hanson in the 175-pound class. Miller won his first match, defeating Gaylord Johnson of Warren, 5-4; but in a semi-finals match, Miller was pinned by Bemidji's Jim Ritchie, who won the class title. In consolation competition, Miller was pinned by Brainerd's Mike Fordyce. Don Hanson defeated Brainerd's Jim Christenson, 3-1, in an opening round match. Steve Reinhardt, named the top wrestler of the tournament, pinned Hanson in a semi-finals match. And Bemidji's Bob Martinson gained a pin over Hanson in a match for third place.

The Prowlers were without the services of Dick Brown, who has been lost for the season due to shoulder dislocation; and Rod Colliver who was nursing an injury. Colliver is expected to be available Friday night's encounter against Park Rapids.

Young Gun Owners Urged to Receive Firearm Training

Firearms safety chief Don Murray of the Minnesota conservation department today urged youngsters who received guns as Christmas gifts to enroll in a firearms safety training class this winter.

"There are over 3,000 volunteer instructors in the state conducting firearms safety classes, so there should be no problem in enrolling in a class," said Murray.

A firearm, whether it is used for hunting or target use, is a fine gift and a prized possession for any youngster, he said. It should be the source of countless hours of safe recreation.

Murray pointed out that under the law any youngster who wishes to hunt without being accompanied by a parent or guardian must have a certificate showing he has completed a course in a state-approved firearms safety training program.

A law passed by the 1965 legislature makes firearms safety training mandatory starting in 1968 for all persons under age 16 who desire to hunt.

"Any parent who has presented a firearm to his youngster has the responsibility of seeing to it that the boy is trained in the principles of safe gun handling," Murray said.

LHS Hockey Team Has Shutout at Baudette

Following Saturday night's 4-0 win over the Baudette Bears in a game played on the arena ice, coach George Schlieff's hockey Prowlers are four wins and no losses in Region Eight conference play. Overall the Prowlers' have a season's mark of four wins and three losses.

This week the Prowlers will be "on the road". On Tuesday night the locals will make the short jaunt to Red Lake Falls for a conference game against Mike Hajostek's Eagles; on Friday night the Prowlers travel to Roseau for an important regional game against the defending champion Roseau Rams; and on Saturday night the Prowlers will play the Grand Forks Redskins at Grand Forks, meeting coach Sergio Gambucci's team on the ice of the winter sports buildings on the UND campus. The next home game for the locals will go against Hallock Bears here on Tuesday night, January 18.

In a preliminary game on Saturday night, the Baudette B team scored three goals in the first period, and then held off the ever-trying efforts of coach Jerry Westby's Prowler B squad, winning by a 3 to 1 score. Arlen Overbye tallied the lone goal for the Prowlers.

In the varsity game, the Prowlers entered the scoring column 3:20 mark of the opening period. With Merle Sampson serving a penalty, the Prowlers were skating shorthanded. Baudette "iced" the puck in the Prowler zone, and a face-off was held off to right of the south goal, the Baudette goal. Billy Poole gained the draw and passed out to Jerry Droppo, who was out in front of the net about 20 feet, and his hard and quick shot beat goalie Glynn Cole.

Late in the second period the Prowlers racked a pair of quick tallies. Chuck Bedard took a centering-out pass from Billy Dicken and scored from close in at the 9:50 mark. And at 10:30, Merle Sampson, with Dicken assisting, beat Cole on a long shot.

The game's final tally was notched in the final minute of play when Billy Poole, recovering the puck behind the Baudette net, came out around to the left of goalie Cole and scored from just off the goal crease, the tally coming at the 1:35 mark, giving the Prowlers, and goalie Jeff Noel, a 4 to 0 shutout win.

Care Required Installing Stove In Fish House

Carbon monoxide—the silent killer—is lurking in every ice fishing shack, but it will never strike if proper precautions are used in the installation and operation of the heating unit.

The warning was issued this week by the state game and fish division which called attention to the danger of carbon monoxide poisoning in ice fishing shacks when the heater has not been vented and where no provision is made for fresh air to enter the shelter.

Ted Shields, state game and fish director, pointed out that it makes no difference whether the heater burns gasoline, oil, grease, manufactured or natural gas, coal, coke, organic matter, paper, wood or charcoal. The burning of any fuel containing carbon releases carbon monoxide gas which is dangerous if it is not vented harmlessly into the outside air.

Tests have shown that as little as two-tenths of one per cent carbon monoxide present in the atmosphere of a room can result in asphixiation. It is oderless, tasteless and gives the victim little or no warning before he is rendered

Every year, said Shields, there are cases of death resulting from carbon monoxide poisoning in cabins, campers or other shelters. These senseless tragedies can be eliminated completely with the proper installation, maintenance and operation of the heater," he said.

Didn't It Rain, Children . . .

Year of '65 Marked by Weather Phenomena

by Jim Wills
Times Reporter

"Well, back in '65. . . ." This phrase will undoubtedly be used by many present-generation northwestern Minnesotans in years ahead in recalling some of the most violent, destructive, rigorous and generally lousy weather in recent years which occurred during the past year. The year was not completely without its days of fine weather, but the records show that 1965 was in general every adverse weather phenomenon known to this part of the country crammed into one year. Floods, blizzards, extreme cold, thunderstorms, endless wet spells and tornadoes, all play a vital role in the history of 1965 in Thief River Falls.

The three winter months of January, February and March all had one thing in common—they were all colder than normal. Later, the sod-soaking "April showers" caused quick melting of the snow which had accumulated in March and brought about the worst flood the Red River Vally has seen since 1950. From then on, every month of the year with the exception of August recorded above-normal precipitation. Total precipitation for the year was 31.11 inches—compared to 24.39 as an average for the past several years.

Highlights of the 1965 weather scene in the Thief River Falls area include two -38-degree readings in January; the crippling St. Patrick's Day blizzard; the April rain which caused a violent ice breakup in the river followed by flooding; a tornado in June which crumpled the Sjoberg TV tower and damaged two barns west of town; and electrical storms in July and September. Many other weather events of less dramatic character occurred during the year.

January

Minimum temperature readings of -38 degrees were recorded on the 14th and the 29th. Many other nightly lows only slightly less extreme were reached. The mercury skidded below zero on all but four nights and stayed there on 11 days. On only one day, January 3, the thermometer rose above freezing, to 34. Mean temperature for the month was -3.4, or four degrees below normal. Three days of snowfall accumulated four inches of snow which melted down to .25 inch of water.

February

This was another cold month, with a low of -30 degrees on the 4th and seven days with lows in the -20's. Blizzard conditions ocurred on the 20th and 21st, with an inch of new snow whipped along by northwesterly winds with a

Short Course on Property Tax Is Set in Bagley

Local assessors will have an opportunity to extend their knowledge of assessing real and personal properties through a property tax short course offered by the University of Minnesota's Institute of agriculture.

LaVern Freeh, head of the institute's department of agricultural short courses, says the course will be presented at eight locations in Minnesota during January and February. The session for this area will be held today as well as January 26 and February 2 at the American Legion hall in Bagley.

More than 900 persons enrolled for the property tax short course last year, says Freeh, and even more are expected to attend this year.

The course is designed to achieve three important objectives:

Aid local assessors in understanding their job.

Demonstrate tools for assessing real and personal properties in rural and urban areas and to emphasize cooperation with the county assessing officer.

Familiarize local assessors with valuable sources of information to improve tax assessment work.

The fee is $10 per person for the complete three-day course or for two days of attendance. For single-day attendance, the fee is $5 per person.

Fees are to be paid when a person registers at the course location and are not due in advance.

All persons enrolling and paying a fee of one day or more will receive an abstract containing the presentations of all speakers participating in the course.

CHAIRMEN and members of the general committee for the state Jaycee Outstanding Young Farmer meeting convened Monday at the Oakland Park road residence of Richard Bjorkman to discuss and plan the event. The meeting will take place February 12 in the Thief River Falls National Guard armory with about 250 people expected to be present. Pictured left to right are Dr. Donald Goodrich, Jon Larson, Rick Contos, Neil McEwen, Sander Tureson, Richard Bjorkman, Marvin Lundin, Gene Beito, Roger Person, James Dale, James Carlson and Silas Glere. Chamber of Commerce Sets Annual Banquet

SPEAKER at the 30th annual Elks father and son banquet held Tuesday night at the Thief River Falls armory was Coach Billy Martin (center) of the Minnesota Twins. Before a crowd of approximately 400, Martin related some of his experiences as a player for the New York Yankees and as a coach for the Twins. He expounded on the past season, particularly the World Series. "We would have won," he said, "if Yom Kippur had lasted a week longer." He was referring to the Jewish holiday which kept Sandy Koufax out of action for the first game. Following his talk, he answered questions and signed autographs. Pictured at left is Bruce Hall, exalted ruler of Lodge 1308. At right is Irv Wilson, past exalted ruler, who introduced Martin.

Ticket sales for the 52nd annual banquet of the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce are now underway under the direction of Allan Torkelson, ticket chairman. The banquet will be held Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the American Legion club rooms.

Ticket salesmen are Dr. W. P. Kaisler, Glenn Peterson, Phil Hess, James Frey, Orin Green, Donald M. Olson, James Dale, Orville Hanson and J. R. Smillie. A turkey dinner will be served and tickets are $2 each.

Gene Guer, general chairman of the banquet, asked members to note that wives are invited to attend. He also encouraged employers to bring their employees as guests to the annual affair.

Of special interest this year will be the presentation of an outstanding citizen award by the Chamber of Commerce to a person whom the board of directors believes is deserving of special recognition. The award is not an annual one and is made by the board whenever they believe that such recognition is in order. Several honorary life memberships will also be awarded at the event.

Rev. Merrill Harris, pastor of Community Methodist church in Thief River Falls, will given the invocation at the evening banquet. Dr. O. D. Beich will serve as master of cermonies and comments will be given by J. J. Womack, 1965 president, and Donovan Narverud, 1966 president. Directors of the organization will also be introduced.

Special entertainment will be presented by Danny Klayman, young comedian from Minneapolis, who is billed as "Henry Youngman's Comedy Protege". Youngman took Klayman under his wing at 13 years of age, and has since been tutoring and inspiring him as a "comedy apprentice".

The young comedian was scheduled on a Steve Allen television program and had commitments for entertaining in Las Vegas, Nev. His monologue style is considered to be much like Youngman's, and he uses a saturation system for his appeal—tell enough jokes fast enough and dead pan enough and he is sure to connect often enough to keep any audience in constant laughter.

March of Dimes To Start Tuesday

Pennington county's annual March of Dimes campaign gets underway next Tuesday with the Mother's March scheduled to be conducted in the city of Thief River Falls. County quota in the campaign is $1,300, according to Dell Christianson, county chairman.

Conducting the Mother's March will be members of the BPO Does, Eagles auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars auxiliary and American Legion auxiliary, plus several other volunteers who will canvass designated areas. Cathy Wysoski is chairman of the teen program of the March of Dimes, and a special dance is being planned with proceeds going to the county campaign.

Richard Mabey is serving as campaign chairman in the city and Mrs. Harold M. (Mae) Johnson is treasurer of the county fund.

March of Dimes funds are used in research and education in an effort to conquer birth defects in the nation. Each year in the United States alone more than 250,000 babies are born seriously defective in some way.

"This means that about one family in 10 is touched by the tragedy of an abnormal child," Christianson said. "It means that almost every second child in a hospital for treatment is there because of a birth defect.

"In some the abnormality is as obvious as a misshapen foot or hand or a missing arm. In others a chemical defect, although hidden from the eye, so obstructs the body's functions that the child is crippled in other ways. But whatever form a serious birth defect takes—and there are hundreds of possibilities—blighted minds and bodies and blighted lives are the result.

"The pain and frustration for the child, the anguish of its parents, the cost of society in terms of waste and custodial care constitute a health problem that affects us all," the county chairman said. "The wonder is that we have done so little until now to find out what causes birth defects and what can be done to prevent and repair them.

Now that the extent of the problem has at last been recognized, there is great hope that its many mysteries can be solved. Already some birth defects, previously thought to be insoluble puzzles, have become well understood. And with the understanding of some has come the possibility of conquering others.

"Having achieved the victory over polio," Christianson concluded, "the National Foundation-March of Dimes is putting its tremendous energies into this effort."

Two Auto Mishaps Noted by Police Monday, Tuesday

Two automobile accidents were reported today by the Thief River Falls police department. Damage was estimated at $10 to the truck and $120 to the car.

On Thursday at 2:30 p.m. a car driven by Robert Brekke Jr., Nellsville, was leaving the post office parking lot and struck a panel truck driven by Raymond O. Olson, city, which was going north in the alley between Main and LaBree avenues. The impact caused the truck to slide into a steel fence post on the other side of the alley. The panel truck was considered a total loss and the Brekke car was damaged to the extent of about $275. Brekke was charged with failure to yield the right-of-way.

Farm Program To Be Explained at County Meeting

Educational meetings regarding the 1966 farm program—including the cropland adjustment program - have been scheduled in Marshall county during January, according to A. E. Strandquist, office manager of the Marshall County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee.

Objective of these meetings, Strandquist said, is to present basic information about the program so that farmers may be better informed concerning the possibilities and alternatives on their individual farms. Persons attending will be given the opportunity to ask questions regarding the program.

Meetings to be held in this area include the Newfolden town hall, 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, January 18; Viking school gymnasium, 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, January 18; Grygla school gymnasium, 2:30 p.m., Wednesday, January 19; Gatzke school gymnasium, 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, January 19; and Middle River high school, 1:30 p.m., Friday, January 21.

Motor Vehicle Penalty Begins

Penalty of $1 on motor vehicle registration has now gone into effect and will be increased to $2 on January 21, according to Mrs. Marjorie Hanson, deputy registrar of motor vehicles in Thief River Falls. Final maximum penalty of $2.50 will go into effect February 1.

Registration stickers for 1966 need not be displayed until March 1 but may be applied immediately upon purchase. Since state deadlines vary, however, persons who plan to travel out of state are advised to apply their current stickers before leaving Minnesota.

Miss LeMay Marquis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Marquis of Goodridge and Alec Moe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moe of Grygla, exchanged marriage vows recently at the Grace Lutheran church at Grygla. The Rev. S. J. Sigurgelrson officiated at the double ring ceremony attended by 225 guests. Organist Mrs. Dick Marquis, aunt of the bride, played the traditional nuptial music and Jeanette Stenvick sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Lord's Prayer".

For the afternoon wedding, bouquets of mixed flowers graced the altar and the pews were marked by ribbon bows and foliage.

Escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of Chantilly lace over taffeta fashioned with a fitted bodice, square neckline, long sleeves and a full skirt. A coronet of pearls and crystals held the fingertip ell of silk illusion and she carried a cascade arrangement of roses and carnations.

Monica Marquis of Minneapolis attended her sister as maid of honor. Bridesmatron was Mrs. Wallace Byklum, also of Minneapolis. They wore peacock blue floor-length gowns, matching veiled headpieces and elbow length gloves. Each carried a bouquet similar to the bridal bouquet.

Flowergirl, Donna Moe, niece of the groom, was attired in a white brocade floor-length dress and head piece, fashioned similar to the other attendants, and she carried a basket of mixed flowers. Ringbearer was Earl Marquis II.

The groom chose his brother, Edward Moe of Grygla as best man. Duane Lian of Grygla was groomsman and the ushers were Monti Marquis, brother of the bride and Wayne Moe, nephew of the groom. They wore dark business suits with white carnation boutonnieres.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Marquis was attired in a two-piece dress of willow green lace over taffeta. The mother of the groom wore a two-piece beige suit. Both wore identical corsages of mixed flowers.

Honor guests attending the wedding were grandmothers of the bride Mrs. Adah Marquis and Mrs. Bessie Race, both of Goodridge, and Mrs. Annie Cuno of Grygla, grandmother of the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was given in the Grace dining room by the parents of the bride with Mrs. Leonard Moe of Grygla, sister of the groom as hostess. Centering the serving table was a four-tiered wedding cake decorated with yellow roses and topped with a miniature bride and groom. Cutting and serving the cake were Mrs. T. O. Lien of Oklee, aunt of the groom, and Mrs. Edward Moe of Grygla, sister of the groom. Mrs. Orville Diesen of Gatzke, sister of the groom, poured while aunts of the bride, Mrs. Alvin Fjeld of Goodridge served the punch and Mrs. Rozanne Thorson of Minneapolis, registered the guests. Waitresses were Sharyl Severe, Clair Ann Dahlen and Mrs. Ray Moe and those arranging the gifts were Mrs. Allen Carlson of Pencer, Mrs. Lloyd Sorenson of Plummer and Delaine and Renne Fjeld.

State Farmers Produce 4th Largest Record Crop

Minnesota farmers produced the fourth largest crop on record during 1965 with total production nearly eight per cent larger than 1964, but 10 per cent below the 1963 record crop year and one per cent below the 1959-63 average.

State Commissioner of Agriculture Russel Schwandt made this report based on year-end compilations of the Minnesota Crop and Livestock Reporting service.

F. J. Graham, chief of the crop and livestock reporting service, said that in spite of the abnormally cool and wet spring and summer, yields of small grains and hay were better than average. The corn and soybean crops here hurt by unfavorably cool weather, especially during maturing time, and later by an early freeze. Consequently the quality of much of this year's corn crop was relatively poor and some soybeans failed to make normal size.

Commissioner Schwandt said that he was encouraged to note that crop production showed an increase in 1965 but pointed out that the 1964 crop total was below average largely because of drought conditions in several sections of the state. However, the state's 1965 crop output was 10 per cent smaller than the record year of 1963 and largely because the corn crop was 24 per cent smaller.

The 1965 harvest of Minnesota's principal crops was valued at $803,270,000, practically the same as the value of the 1964 crop. Total production for this year was greater than last year but lower prices, particularly for corn, soybeans and potatoes, kept total value of production at about the same level as last year. The lower prices of these three crops are the result of poor quality caused by an early freeze.

Acreage of the principal crops harvested in 1965 totaled 17.7 million acres, only 60,000 acres less than 1964 and three per cent below the five-year average of 18.3 million acres. Field crop acreage at 17.5 million acres showed a small decrease following the downward trend in harvested acreage. Seed crop acreage (except bluegrass) was below last year but above the five-year average. The acreage of vegetables for fresh market and processing was eight per cent above last year.

Field Crops

The major grain and oilseed crop index of 99 (1957-59—100) is four points above the 1964 index. Most of the increase is the result of greater small grain yields and a new record production for soybeans. Larger crops were also realized for oats, all wheat, barley, rye, flaxseed and potatoes which more than offset the decreased corn production. The value of Minnesota's field crop production (excluding fruits, vegetables and seeds) in 1965 is estimated at $782,155,000, only slightly below the $785,319,000 in 1964. Based on value of production, corn continues to be the state's number 1 field crop by a large margin followed by hay, soybeans, oats, all wheat and barley.

Vegetables

Minnesota's tonnage of vegetables for fresh market and processing totaled 477,760 tons, eight per cent above the 443,380 tons harvested last year. The increase in production is mainly the result of larger crops of sweet corn and green peas for processing.

Total value of vegetables in 1965 was $18,066,000 or 20 per cent above last year. Price increases for the two main processing crops, sweet corn and green peas, are the major factor in the increased total value.

Fruits and Nuts

Minnesota's commercial apple production of 290,000 bushels was 33 per cent below the record crop of 430,000 bushels produced last year.

The value of fruit and nut crops in 1965 totaled $832,000, 17 per cent below last year.

Livestock and Poultry

While final figures on livestock and poultry are not yet available for the entire year, a larger income is expected in 1965 than in 1964. Minnesota hog producers have marketed fewer hogs this year but prices have been significantly higher and may well result in a higher income. Marketings of cattle are down from 1964 although prices were slightly higher. Laying flocks in Minnesota are expected to produce somewhat fewer eggs this year. Turkey production is estimated at 15.0 million birds, up three per cent from 1964. Total milk production during the first 11 month was slightly smaller in 1965.

Cash Tips Now Tied to Social Security Income

Approximately 25,000 Minnesota employees will receive increased social security and railroad retirement benefits for themselves and their families when they are retired.

This is due to a change in the law which includes for wage benefit purposes the amount of cash tips received by an employee, together with his regular pay. Waiters, taxicab drivers, barbers, porters and others who receive part of their income in tips are in this group.

Every employee who receives cash tips of $20 or more in any calendar month after December, 1965, must report the amount of his tip income to his employer, according to George O. Lethert, district director of Internal Revenue. These reports must be made on or before the 10th day of the following month, and should include only tips received by the employee.

IRS Form 4070 may be used by employees for these reports, Lethert indicated. These forms may be obtained from revenue service offices by employers or employees. Individual employers may require their employees to report their tips more often than once a month, Lethert said, for example, report every payroll period.

Tips required to be reported to employers constitute wages for social security and railroad retirement tax purposes, and also constitute wages for income tax withholding purposes, Lethert declared. In those cases where an employees wages consist almost entirely of tips, and the regular wages are nominal, and the tax owing is more than the regular pay, the employee may voluntarily pay the tax money to his employer.

If the employer cannot deduct, and the employee does not pay the full amount of tax on tips reported, the employee will be required to pay the uncollected tax directly to the revenue service when he files his income tax return.

Weed and Seed Conference Set Here January 31

Annual weed and seed conference for Pennington county will be held Monday, January 31, beginning at 10 a.m. in the Thief River Falls city auditorium, according to Charles Will, Pennington county assistant agricultural agent. All town board members, mayors and appointed inspectors are required by law to attend.

Conducting the conference will be Paul Hauser and John N. Campbell Jr., district agronomy services inspectors; Frank Fanberg, supervisor of the section of seed inspection; and Clare D. Floyd, entomologist. County agricultural agents and county agricultural inspectors will also take an active part in this conference.

Conference leaders will instruct the local officials as to their duties as weed inspectors. Latest information on chemicals and their proper use, methods of controlling insect pests and plant diseases and the requirements for selling agricultural seed by dealers, farmers, sales clerks, auctioneers and others will also be presented.

"It should be of interest to everyone to know that every acre of cropland can be planted to a crop in 1966 regardless of the seriousness of the weed problem, provided the proper methods of control are carried out in connection with the cropping program," Will said.

Information which will be presented at the conference will be of much value to local officials and others who may have weed, seed, insect or disease problems with which to contend. The public is invited to attend.

1965 Weather Is Filled With Many Unusual Events

peak gust of 70 miles per hour. High wind and drifting snow also occurred on the 13th. Mean temperature of 5.0 was 2.8 degrees below normal. Snowfall totaled 5.7 inches with a water content of .76—.16 inch above normal.

March

This month came in and went out like a lion. The lion roared loudest, however, in mid-month. On St. Patrick's Day, the 17th, the worst blizzard of the winter closed in on the state. Two inches of new snow, along with recently-accumulated snow, was whipped into deep drifts by extremely high northwesterly winds, and virtually all schools in the area were closed. This storm, which was even worse in southern Minnesota, caused an approximate 50 per cent winter kill of the state's pheasants. Mean temperature was 11.8 and total snowfall was 16 inches containing 1.18 inch of water.

April

When it came to miserable and destructive weather, this was probably the champion month of the year. It started out with snow mixed with rain, followed by five days of rain with some pea-soup fog thrown in for good measure. A warming trend together with the almost continuous rain, caused the ice in the river to go out suddenly and violently the morning of April 13. Spectacular ice jams occurred at the Third street bridge and at the municipal power plant dam. Some flooding took place in Thief River Falls, but much more hard-hit were the Red River Valley communities of Grand Forks, Crookston and Oslo; where thousands of sandbags were used to turn the rising water. Total precipitation for the month was 3.92 inches; mean temperature was 39.8.

May

The month of May may be merry in song, but certainly not in fact in 1965. Cloudy skies and chill winds ruled the weather picture, and 18 days of rain kept the soil swampy. Precipitation came to a total of 4.96 inches, topping the May average of 3.28 by 1.68 inches. Foul weather hit the area hard during the latter part of the month. Opening day fishermen who journeyed to Lake of the Woods were met with a strong north wind. Two days later a south wind gusted up to 70 miles per hour. An intense cold front brought a strong northerly wind and a mixture of snow, sleet and rain on the 27th. Mean temperature was 53.2, a nearly average figure.

June

A variety of weather conditions characterized this month. Temperatures remained generally cool; highest mark reached was 85 degrees on the 19th. Precipitation which totaled 3.79 inches, fell during two 10-day wet spells at the beginning and end of the month. The dry period of mid-June was a boon to field work. Highlight of the month's weather was a tornado which narrowly missed this city. The twister collapsed the steel tower owned by the Sjoberg Cable TV company, destroyed buildings on two nearby farms and overturned a mobile home. Mean temperature was 63.1—1.2 degrees below normal.

July

Northwestern Minnesota was spared the excessive heat that usually accompanies July. Temperatures never reached the 90's. A brief spell of uncomfortable weather began on the 22nd, when the temperature reached 87 and the relative humidity rose to a sweltering 95 per cent. The rain continued to fall, this time reaching a total of 4.74 inches. A violent electrical storm on the 12th dropped 3.6 inches of rain at the airport weather station. At about this time, the southeast section of the city was largely excavated, and deep water accumulated in streets and ditches. Mean temperature was 66.7—.6 degree below normal.

August

Relief from the continuous wet weather of spring and early summer was felt in this area during August, when no rain fell until the 24th. The dry weather was generally pleasant, but was marred by 97-degree heat on the 13th. The last week of the month brought a return of cool, wet weather. The month's rainfall totaled 1.31 inches or 1.96 inches below the August average of 3.27. Mean temperature was 65.3, which was below normal by 1.5 degrees.

September

Rainfall totaling 6.47 inches during September gave the knockout punch to the annual fall harvest. Rain fell in measurable amounts on 17 days, and the sky was heavily overcast on almost all days. Close on the heels of a cold, wet Labor Day weekend, a fierce electrical storm dropped 1.59 inches of rain and resulted in a lightning bolt setting fire to a local residence. Temperatures came to a mean of 48 degrees. About the only bright spot in the month was the action of the Twins in winning the American League pennant.

October

Indian summer finally began with the coming of October. Rainfall was scanty, skies sunny and temperatures generally mild. The "bluebird" weather was caused by duck and goose hunters, who found that most of the birds had gone south during the September monsoon. Mean temperature for the month was 46.7. The fact that this is a lower figure than the September mean was due entirely to lower nighttime temperatures. Precipitation totaled 1.67 inches, or .34 inch above the October average.

November

Winter took northern Minnesota "by storm" in the most severe November in recent years. The area was blanketed by nearly 27 inches of snow during the month, which melted down to 1.18 inch of water. The snow stood 18.5 inches deep at month's end, as a result of 12 days of snow. Deer hunters found plenty of snow on opening day, but had to dress for arctic weather due to near-zero temperatures and high winds. The month was climaxed by a blizzard in which 15½ inches of snow fell in four days and was blown by 35-mile-per-hour winds. Mean temperature was 23.9—2.4 degrees below normal.

December

Relatively mild wintertime temperatures were the general rule during this month, and snowfall was not excessive. All was not beer and skittles, however; the area was socked in by fog for five days beginning Dec. 7. The fog was no sooner gone than the area was hit by snow mixed with freezing rain. The weather again turned pleasant for the Christmas holiday, but two days later the mercury took a nose-dive, reaching a low of -18 degrees. Snowfall totaled 15.3 inches which melted down to .88 inch of water. Mean temperature was 18.0, which topped the December average mean of 8.6 by 9.4 degrees.

The Puzzle Isn't the Problem

JIGSAW PUZZLE poses no problems for Marty Mim Mack, 4, Santa Clara, Calif., born with most of both arms missing. He picks up puzzle pieces with greatest of ease. His mother, Gloria, a volunteer worker for the March of Dimes which finances 57 birth defects centers throughout the nation, says Marty eats and dresses himself more tidily than any of his five older brothers, all born normal. Each year 250,000 babies are born in the U.S. with major birth defects. Moreover, birth defects are the nation's second greatest destroyer of life when prenatal loss is included. You can aid scientific research into these tragedies and support patient care by giving in January to the March of Dimes.

Traffic Violators May Be Required To Attend Class

Traffic law violators upon conviction may now find themselves attending classes at a drive improvement clinic to make them better drivers, under a law passed by the 1965 state legislature.

In lieu of or in addition to other penalties, the court may require a convicted person to attend and satisfactorily complete a driver improvement clinic course, so long as the clinic is not more than 20 miles from the person's residence.

Any person who fails to comply with such an order may be adjudged in contempt of court. The commissioner of highways also has authority to require a person whose driver license has been revoked or suspended to attend and complete a course at a clinic as a condition of relicensing.

The law authorizes establishment of a driver improvement clinic by any court, municipality, association of municipalities or any regularly established safety organization. The administration and conduct of the clinics is the responsibility of the Minnesota highway department.

The court or other agency may establish reasonable tuition for the course, not to exceed $15, and not to exceed the actual cost of the course. Also, the course of study may not exceed nine hours and no single class session may last more than three hours.

Driver improvement clinics, as such, are not entirely new to Minnesota. They have been in operation on a limited scale since 1962 under the direction of some of the courts.

The new law not only gives the court power to require attendance but also establishes a controlling authority for the clinics.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q—Are veterans of World War I eligible for GI home loans?

A—No, but they may be eligible for housing benefits under the new housing act of 1965 administered by the Federal Housing administration.

Q—May a veteran who has no service-connected illness enter a Veterans administration hospital and pay for his care?

A—No. VA hospital benefits are free to veterans with service-connected disabilities and to veterans with nonservice-connected disabilities who cannot afford hospital care. All other veterans are expected to use non-VA hospitals.

Q—How can a veteran selling his home be relieved of liability on a VA guaranteed loan?

A—One method is to require the purchaser to pay off the GI loan with his own resources or to obtain a new loan. Another method is to have the purchaser assume all the veteran's liabilities on the home and have the VA approve the assumption agreement and specifically release the veteran from further liability to the VA.

Q—In 1946 my ten per cent disability was reduced to zero per cent. The reduction to zero per cent made reinstatement possible if my disability reoccurred. Does my zero per cent entitle me to reinstate my National Service Life Insurance which I dropped in 1946?

A—Since it appears that you have a service-connected disability, you may apply for the new insurance which is being sold by the Veterans Administration. Application must be made before May 2, 1966.

Q—My application for insurance under the law which permits service-connected disabled veterans to apply for insurance until May 2, 1966, was rejected because I had a nonservice-connected disability. This nonservice-connected condition has improved and is no longer disabling. Will the insurance now be granted?

A—You should make another application for the insurance as soon as possible based on your present condition of health.

Follow Expert Advice For Winter Weather

You can be a good winter weather driver if you follow the advice of the experts, declares Harry H. Porter Jr., manager of the traffic department of the National Safety council.

"It is tragic that so many motorists are killed and injured each winter because they do not know, or have forgotten, that safe driving techniques in winter are far more demanding than those needed for other seasons of the yar," Porter said.

"The basic survival rules for safe winter driving have been developed by the safety council's committee on winter driving hazards," Porter pointed out. "After years of study and actual testing, this group of experts has found that there are two principal hazards of winter driving not generally encountered at other times of the year—inadequate traction and reduced visibility.

"Motorists make more driving errors in winter simply because they fail to recognize that dangers inherent in these conditions," the safety specialist said. "A common blunder, for example, is following too closely. Few drivers realize that stopping distances on snow and ice are from three to twelve times greater than those on bare pavements.

"Whenever there's any question about how slippery a road may be, it makes sense to apply the brakes carefully or to 'gun' the engine occasionally to see whether there's any tendency to skid. If there is, reduce your speed and drive accordingly," Porter warned.

For severe snow and ice conditions, Porter recommended the use of reinforced tire chains.

"The committee's tests have shown that snow tires give half again as much pulling power in snow as regular tires, but for deep snow and glare ice conditions reinforced tire chains provide four to five times as much traction as regular tires. Every motorist driving in the snow-belt states should carry a set of chains in the trunk for use when needed," he declared.

To insure better visibility during winter storms, Porter recommended a thorough check-up of the heater-defroster system, headlights, tail lights, directional signals, windshield wipers and windshield washers.

"And even though all these items are functioning properly, your headlights and tail lights can't do an effective job if they are plastered with slush and road-muck. So don't forget to clean them frequently during foul weather. Likewise, your windshield wipers can't wipe without streaking and smearing if the life has been baked out of the rubber by the sun," the traffic authority said.

"Motorists who follow these safety tips will come back alive," Porter concluded. "To ignore them is to court serious trouble".

In October of 1964, 14.1 million young people, 16 to 24, were out of school. Some 5.1 million, or 36 per cent of them were school drop-outs.

Freezing of Pork Suggested When Price Is Special

When the local market offers a special on pork loins, homemakers may be wise to take advantage of the good buy and freeze some pork for future use, suggests Verna Mikesh, extension nutritionist at the University of Minnesota.

She advises having the meat cut into the size roasts and the number of chops to be used. Package the chops according to the number needed for each meal, separating individual chops by a double layer of the freezer wrap. Wrap the roasts and the chops closely in moisture-vapor-proof wrapping material such as freezer foil. Label the packages with date, cut and number of servings.

Fresh pork will keep at zero degrees Fahrenheit or lower for about four months.

For the benefit of consumers who may wonder about the amount of fat in pork, Miss Mikesh points out that thanks to the development of meat-type hogs, the pork on today's market yields more edible meat per pound than was the case several years ago. That also means fewer calories per pound.

For example, a good-sized pork chop—3½ ounces—has about 240 calories compared with 377 some years ago. An average serving of cooked pork today provides 57 per cent less fat, 36 per cent fewer calories and 22 per cent more protein than indicated in food composition tables in use for many years. In addition, pork supplies a generous amount of all the B vitamins.

Plummer Drops Two Basketball Games Last Week

Coach Shorty 'Perkins' Plummer Cardinals dropped a pair of basketball decisions during last week's play. On Tuesday night in game played at Plummer, the Erskine Comets, led by the 20-point effort of Allen Jensen, defeated the Cardinals, 63-38. And on Friday night, in a game played at Red Lake Falls, the Eagles defeated the Cardinals, 61-50.

This week, on Friday night, Plummer will travel to Fisher for a game against coach Norm Wagner's Flyers.

In the game against the Eagles at Red Lake Falls, the Cardinals, with Larry Juneau and Darrel Martell pacing the scoring, romped away to a 14 to 5 lead at the end of the first period, and 23-16 margin at the intermission. But in the second half, and particularly in the third period during which the Eagles outpointed Plummer, 23-12, Red Lake Falls gained control of the game. Big Paul Walker, who gained high-point honors with 23 points for the Eagles, was a bulwark on the boards. Martell, with 16 points, and Juneau, with 17 points, led the Cardinal scorers.

How's Your Health?

(Prepared in the public interest by the Minnesota Medical Ass'n)

According to the Minnesota State Medical association, underachievement is one of the most unrecognized problems in our homes and schools. Neither home nor school can deny responsibility for these children who are not working to their full potential; both must cooperate to solve this problem.

The home and school are two very important influences in the life of a child. The attitudes of parents and teachers, whether permissive or strict, may cause a reaction in the child which is not easily detected.

The child of average or above-average intelligence who is not expected to do more than the least capable student in his class, can readily justify his own mediocrity by the attitudes of the adults with whom he associates. Bored by repetition and a lack of challenge, he will lose interest in both his school work and extracurricular activities. This child may become the high school dropout.

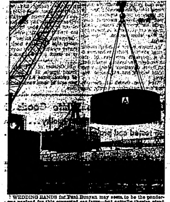
Doctors say the reasons for underachievement are often complex. The relationship of a child with his brothers and sisters, the attitude of the parents toward each other, teachers insensitive to the needs of the child could have a more emotionally upsetting effect on the child than the parents are aware. Physical disabilities, such as poor eyesight or hearing, could also limit a child's ability to work up to his capacity.

Solutions to the problem of underachievement can and must be found. In some cases the sincere interest of an adult in a one-adult to one-child relationship may be an inspiration for the child. Many schools are experimenting with special honors classes for those children who would not be challenged by less difficult subject matter.

The adults with whom the underachieving child associates must create an environment which still will stimulate his creativity and intellectual curiosity if this child is ever to attain the satisfying sense of accomplishment in doing his very best.

"Ring around . . . Minnesota"

Giant Kiln Shells Shipped to Mesabi



WEDDING BANDS for Paul Bunyan may seem to be the ponderous payload for this converted car-ferry—but actually they're giant kiln sections from Allis-Chalmers West Allis, Wis., plant. The Port of Milwaukee heavy crane lifted more than 630 tons to load the 30 shells aboard. The sections were unloaded at Superior, Wis., and trucked to two iron ore pelletizing plant sites in Minnesota: for the United States Steel plant at Mountain Iron; and for the Hanna Mining plant at Nashwauk. There they will be assembled into kilns. Some of the metal rings measure 20 feet in diameter, the largest "Grate-Kiln" sections ever shipped by the company.

Appearing in newspapers of the Minnesota Editorial Association through the cooperation of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture

Minnesota's booming fertilizer business has gone hand in hand with one development ignored by many people—the establishment of drainage on more than half of Minnesota's 18 million cropland acres.

Between 1950 and 1960, according to the agricultural census, some 1.2 milliln acres were added in drainage projects. And currently, about 40 million feet of tile or more are being manufactured every year.

Soil resource specialist Lowell Hanson at the University of Minnesota points out that drainage has had a marked effect on the location of cropland in the state. He has found a noticeable shift from hilly and drouthy soils, to lower, more level and formerly wet soils.

Furthermore, these lower lands are more productive and their potential is brought out in many cases by effective drainage. Thus, this new land being brought into cultivation is better in water holding capacity and fertility than the naturally well-drained land around it.

Eight Minnesota counties had drainage districts established in the 1950-1960 period which involved acreages in excess of 50,000 acres. They include Renville, Sibley, Redwood, Lac qui Parle, Swift, Kandiyohi, Yellow Medicine and Freeborn counties.

Although soils which in the past were too wet for production are often thought of as quite fertile, they are still a good market for fertilizer. In fact Hanson points to increasing evidence that the largest yield improvements in corn, from fertilizer, are on moderately and somewhat poorly drained soils.

Hanson concludes that since much inadequately drained land still exists, future fertilizer increases are likely to come in these areas.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Questions and Answers

by Charles E. Fahlberg
Field Representative

Q—Can a person's social security benefit rate be raised after they have started receiving monthly social security checks?

A—Yes, if they have enough additional earnings after they first start drawing social security checks. Each year in July and August, the social security administration automatically checks the amount of each person drawing social security to see if their previous years earnings were high enough for them to be able to get a raise. If a raise is due, it is automatically added to the person's checks.

Q—Is it possible for a person to be eligible for Medicare even though they have never worked under social security?

A—Yes, most people who are or will be age 65 before 1968 will be eligible for Medicare even though they have never worked under social security?

Q—Can a person who is age 65 or older and still working qualify for Medicare even though his earnings are too high for him to receive monthly social security checks?

A—Yes; earnings and other resources do not prevent a person from coming under the Medicare program.

Hockey Prowlers Win 4-0 at Red Lake Falls

Coach George Schlieff's Prowlers continued undefeated in Region Eight conference play as they scored a 4 to 0 win over the Red Lake Falls Eagles in a game played at Red Lake Falls on Tuesday night. The Prowlers will meet the Roseau Rams at Roseau on Friday night in a conference game; and on Saturday afternoon, with the face-off slated for 3 p.m. in the Winter Sports building on the UND campus in Grand Forks, the Prowlers will meet the Grand Forks Redskins.

On Tuesday night, in a preliminary game, coach Jerry Westby's Prowler B squad broke a two-game losing streak by rolling up an 8-0 win over the Red Lake Falls B squad. Arlen Overbye, Dana Stromberg and Rich Holmes garnered two goals apiece, and Gary LaValley and Scott Dowers added singletons.

In the Varsity game, which found the Eagles' goalie Tim Audette turning in a fine game for coach Mike Hajostek's squad, the Prowlers gained a 2-0 lead in the first period, with burly Monte LeMoine being the trigger-man on the scores.

After a scoreless second period, the Prowlers came back with a two-goal cluster in the third period to win by a 4-0 score. With the Eagles' Lon Seeger serving a penalty early in the third period, Billy Poole, with Monte and Kent LeMoine assisting, scored at the 2:57 mark. And the game's final tally was registered by big Billy Dicken who finished off a combination play from John Olson and Chuck Bedard to score at the 5:53 mark.

A Difficult Choice

Local sports fans, especially the enthusiastic high school fans, will be faced with a dilemma on Friday. On Friday night coach George Schlieff's hockey Prowlers, unbeaten in Region Eight conference play, will travel to Roseau for a game against coach Oscar Almquist's Region Eight champions.

Roseau is unbeaten this season, and last week the Rams, on a two-game road trip, defeated the St. Paul Johnson Governors, 3-2 in overtime in St. Paul; and playing at Duluth on Saturday night, the Rams edged Duluth East, 3-2 also in overtime. And on Friday night, in the Lincoln high school gymnasium, the Park Rapids Panthers, the defending Region Eight wrestling champions, will meet coach Ed Krystosek's Prowlers, who are unbeaten to date in dual match competition.

What to do? Last year it will be recalled, the hockey Prowlers, playing at Roseau, surprised the Rams by scoring a 1 to 0 win in a crowd-pleasing game. Roseau, though, in the Region Eight tourney finals, defeated the Prowlers, 3-1. It's a cinch that the die-hard hockey fans, and there is quite a contingent here in town, will be making the trip to Roseau regardless of the weather conditions.

The hockey fans are a particularly hardy brand of sports followers. With many of these fans-and if you had noticed their actions and enthusiasms as long as I, you would agree-there is something about hockey that can likened to religion, and hockey is a cult. This may be because there are a number of particular skills a boy must have in order to play in a capable manner.

But as for Friday night I think I will opt for the Wrestling matches at Lincoln high school. It's the only time that we'll have an opportunity to see the panthers in action, and on their record to date they will be given an edge to break the Prowlers' winning streak.

And don't forget that on Saturday night the Bagley Flyers will meet the basketball Prowlers on the Lincoln high school court.

Special Attraction

Weather permitting Saturday, a special attraction will be offered to fans attending the Bagley basketball game here. The Orioles Community club at Winnipeg will present a 15-minute halftime performance with 21 majorettes and five drummers participating.

This attraction has been scheduled on two previous years and both times has been canceled by bad weather. Less Crockett of the community club has informed Athletic Director Ralph Skay that the group will try again on Saturday.

Included in the show will be pom pon acts, go-go dancers, kick line, drummers and a finale by the majorettes. This will take place between halves of the "A" squad game between the Flyers and Prowlers.

The Making of Curlers

During the Christmas and New Year's holidays just concluded, the 27th annual Manitoba schools' bonspiel was held in Winnipeg. And the George Wilson rink from the Charleswood area of Winnipeg, scoring a 9-8 extra-end victory over Barrie Reagan of Flin Flon, won the Manitoba title.

In February this rink will carry the colors of the Province of Manitoba into Newfoundland and compete in the Dominion of Canada high school curling tournament.

And it's no wonder that Manitoba provides top-grade curling competition in the senior division when they have such a high school curling program as the 'spiel just concluded. In this year's event, 312 rinks participated, including a foursome-the Dave Schumacher rink - from Grafton, N. D. The Schumacher rink, of course, wasn't eligible for the Manitoba title, but they did gain valuable experience.

So you see that it isn't by accident that Manitoba senior curling rink, the British Consols winners, is always a contender for Canada's top curling honors, the McDonald Brier. The Province has an excellent "farm" system in its high school bonspiel, and many of the boys engaging in the competition develop a life-long devotion for the "roaring game".

A Curling Encore

The American Legion's annual bonspiel was held at the fairgrounds curling club on Saturday and Sunday, and the first event finals proved to be an encore of last year's 'spiel with the Ardell Liden rink meeting the Wally Tunberg foursome. Liden won the finals by a 14-4 score after nine ends, and gained the Legion trophy for another season. Ardell had brother Duane Liden at Third, Bob Ekeren at second and Marv Olson at lead. For the Tunberg rink, Wally threw the skip rocks, Len Furuseth was at third, Ev Amundgaard at second and Leo Nelson at lead.

In their five matches the Liden rink defeated the Glen Haugen rink in a first-round match, bested Al Thompson in a second-round match, defeated Russ Embury's rink skipped by Jon Larson in the third round, and then defeated Ed DeLap in the semi-finals.

Twenty rinks participated in the annual bonspiel. A foursome from Rainy River won the second event finals, defeating the Reuben Jorde rink for the honors. And the Don Liden rink, defeating the Glen Haugen rink, won the third event title.

This week, on Saturday and Sunday, at the fairgrounds curling club, a mixed bonspiel will be held.

SPRAWLED on the ice Saturday night, goalie Glynn Cole of the Baudette Bears was hard-pressed to stop the pressing Prowler hockey team. In the top photo, Cole has made a save as Rod Carlson (left) of the Prowlers and Jerry Holte of Baudette dig after the rebound. In the bottom photo, Chuck Bedard of the Prowlers flies over the prone goalie to roll a pass from Billy Dicken into the open net. Bedard's momentum carried him into the goal after the puck, but his goal gave the Prowlers a 2-0 lead in the second period on the way to a 4-0 win on the Bears' home ice.

SPEARFISHING of northern pike in the Red Lake River has remained good. These two young fishermen, Gary Sabo, 15 (left) and Tom Bruggeman, 14, nailed this 8¾-pound pike early Saturday afternoon from an ice house near the Eighth street bridge. The water depth was about four feet, they reported, not counting the approximately two-foot thickness of ice. The boys lost their wooden decoy, but considered the catch worth the loss.

Twice canceled by bad weather in previous years, the Orioles Community club at Winnipeg, Man., will present an entertainment program in Thief River Falls Saturday. The show will be staged between halves of the "A" team basketball game between the Lincoln high school Prowlers and Bagley Flyers.

Ralph Skay, Lincoln senior high school athletic director, was notified Tuesday that the Orioles group is making definite plans to present the entertainment program here Saturday. Two previously-scheduled appearances of the Canadian group at Prowler basketball games in 1965 and 1964 were canceled by snow storms.

Saturday night's 15-minute program will be presented by the Orioles group of 21 majorettes and five drummers. It will include pom pon acts, go-go dancers, a kick line, participation by the drummers and a finale by the majorettes.

The Orioles have appeared at WDAY band day parades in Fargo, University of North Dakota homecoming parade in Grand Forks, Red River Exhibition parade at Winnipeg and the Provincial Exposition at Brandon, Man., in addition to presenting a number of stage shows.

As the winter season continues, the skiing, sledding, skating and ice fishing enthusiasts participate in a full season of sports and fun—Minnesota style. At the same time, hospitals can anticipate their usual influx of people who do not take proper safety measures, warns the Minnesota department of health. As more people engage in winter sports activities, the number of persons suffering accidental injuries mounts each year.

Sledding

The high hazards of sledding are not generally recognized. Some authorities have stated that for the four to five-month season, sledding is a greater hazard than the bicycle. The most frequent cause of an accident involves collison with an automobile.

Sledding is best done in a roped off area or on a hill reserved only for sledding. In any case, there should be a large clearing at the bottom of the slope. Check the slope before going down the hill for protruding objects such as mailboxes, fence posts, tree stumps and barb wire fences. Never end the slide on frozen rivers, ponds or lakes where the ice may be thin.

For safe sledding every child or person should be familiar with the have practiced safety techniques that help control the sled. To make a quick stop, stay on the sled and swing your body around to form an angle. A slow, easy stop can be made by steering into a snowbank.

To stop fast on an icy hill, tip over on one side and hold onto the top of the sled with your left hand. The side of the sled and the runner should be pressed against the ground. A quick stop can be made by dropping your hat under a runner, but be prepared for a spill. Watch your fingers so they don't get caught under the runner. Dragging your feet will break your speed. Dragging your right foot will make a quick right turn.

Skiing

Success in skiing depends to a large degree on pre-season preparatory exercise. Exercising should begin at least a month before a ski trip. Regular exercise to strengthen your leg muscles includes half-knee bends, toe walking and toe touching.

Beginners should receive coaching from a certified ski instructor. Expert advice in selecting ski equipment is just as fundamental as learning how to control your skis and how to check your speed quickly if necessary.

Skating

Beginning skaters should keep to the inside areas of a rink for their own safety and to reduce the hazard of injury to other skaters as the result of a collison. Beginner or veteran skater, when you feel yourself falling, relax to reduce the possibility of injury. Many falls are caused by dull skates. Sharpen your skates but to avoid cut fingers remember they are sharp. Carry them strapped together with guards to cover the sharp edges.

Skate in the same direction as other skaters. If you want to speed skate, use the speed skating areas only. Such games as crack the whip and tag are unsafe games for congested skating areas.

Amateur hockey playing should be under the supervision of competent coaches. Players should use full protection, with shin-knee pads, elbow pads, shoulder pads, padded gloves, hockey pants and mouth piece.

Ice Fishing

The first hazard in ice fishing as well as skating and other ice recreation is starting the season too early on thin ice. Beware of honeycombed ice. If the shoreline ice seems fragile, soft or broken up, stay off it. Beware of inlets and outlets to lakes and certain areas in spring-fed lakes where currents and other factors retard or prevent ice formation. Driving on ice is dangerous at any time of the year. If you do drive on the lake, keep your windows open and be alert to the possibility of having to leave the car.

Generally, ice is not safe for groups of people until it is more than six inches thick. Vehicles on ice are not safe until the ice is even thicker to allow for a wide margin of error.

Unvented heating devices in ice houses are a very real hazard. All heating devices used in ice houses or homes must be vented so that deadly carbon monoxide gas will be carried to the outside. Carbon monoxide is a colorless gas given off by the incomplete combustion of fuel.

Income Provision Raised for 1966

In 1966, a social security beneficiary may earn as much as $1,500 without losing any social security benefits, says Clifford Kittleson, district manager for social security.

For beneficiaries filing annual reports of earnings for 1965, however, the $1,200 limitation applies.

A beneficiary who works for wages and earns over $1,500 this year may lose his social security benefit for months in which he earns over $125. Regardless of total earnings for the year, he will not lose his benefits for months in which he has earned $125 or less.

The $1,500 rule applies to self-employed beneficiaries also, but the test of how much work they may do (substantial services) without losing benefits remains unchanged.

A person 72 or older in all months this year will get all his social security benefits no matter how much he works or how much he earns.

Any beneficiary under 72 in any month in 1965 who earned over $1,200 last year will have to file an annual report of his earnings. Beneficiaries who stopped their social security checks last year will receive this report form by mail in future weeks. April 15 is the deadline for filing this report.

Beef and Dairy Advice Given by 'U' Economists

Demand for beef looks strong for 1966, say University of Minnesota agricultural economists Paul Hasbargen and Ken Egertson. Continuing population growth, higher consumer incomes and increasing preference for tablecut beef will add about three to four per cent to the total demand for beef.

Hasbargen and Egertson expect beef, pork and lamb should add another two to three per cent to total demand. Poultry supplies will be up, however, and cut into beef demand somewhat. The agricultural economists expect total demand for fed beef in the first half of 1966 to hold at least six per cent above year earlier levels. And they expect no increase in the beef supply for the next nine months, unless slaughter weights increase sharply.

A scoop or bucket is very inaccurate as a feed measure for heavy wet corn or dried corn which may be low in test weight. Bill Mudge, University of Minnesota extension dairyman, says farmers should use scales for checking feed weights to individual cows and for mixing batches of grain. Farmers who feed with a grain scoop or bucket should check the weight of a full container often. Moisture content of the different batches of corn may cause the weight to vary greatly.

Corn silage is very low in protein, Mudge said. Dairymen should adjust protein levels in the grain mix according to type of forage fed. Feeding more than 70 pounds corn silage and less than 10 pounds of hay per cow per day, the grain mix should have 18 per cent protein.

With 70 pounds of silage and no hay, the grain mix should contain 20 per cent protein. If 30 to 40 pounds corn silage is fed per day with full feed of good legume hay, a 12 to 14 per cent protein grain mix is needed. With 30 to 40 pounds of silage and only fair quality hay or mostly grass, the grain mix should have 15 to 16 per cent protein.

Veterans Receive Dividend Checks On GI Insurance

Nearly 154,000 veterans will receive checks this week as the first payments are made in distribution of a 1966 GI insurance dividend totaling $224,200,000.

In reporting this today, William J. Driver, administrator of veterans affairs, said some 4,600,000 veterans are eligible to receive the dividend payments which will be made throughout the year on the anniversary dates of the individual policies.

Driver said that although the amounts due individual veterans will vary considerably, depending on the veteran's age, the amount and type of insurance in force, and other factors, the amount to be paid in 1966 averages out at $47.50 for World War II policyholders and at $73.75 for World War I policyholders.

Of the total dividend, $209,000,000 will be paid to 4,400,000 veterans of World War II who hold National Service Life Insurance policies, and the remaining $15,200,000 will be shared by 206,000 World War I veterans who have U. S. Government Life Insurance policies.

Korean conflict veterans hold low-cost, non-participating type policies that do not provide for payment of regular annual dividends.

Driver said that the dividends represent primarily a return to the policy holders of part of their premium payments since the death rate of insured veterans continues to be lower than the mortality rate upon which premium payments are based by law.

Driver said the payments would be made automatically on monthly anniversary dates and that no application is required.

Looking Ahead

Thief River Falls board of education is doing some crystal gazing in taking initial steps toward a separate identity for the area vocational-technical school which has enjoyed such terrific success here. That success and progress could well come to a grinding halt and begin to stagnate unless community action is taken to assure its continuance.

Board members do not need to understand hieroglyphics to see the handwriting on the wall in regard to vocational education. The decision made by the district a number of years ago to start the vocational school was a wise one. Many, many youngsters have been helped by the training offered there and the variety of course offerings has increased over the years.

This growth has now come to an end unless a few hurdles can be surmounted.

The Minnesota department of education—which has a heavy hand on the controls which operate the vocational education system in the state—has informed the local districts that no new courses will be approved unless changes are made. Cramped quarters have resluted in a number of courses being offered in several rental facilities, and the state department is not entirely sympathetic to such a situation.

The alternative to stagnation of the vocational program here is to construct new vocational facilities. It is the obligation of the board of education to determine how this can be best done—with the most economical means consistent with long-term building quality and enrollment projections. And consideration must be given to the junior college program in the state and its relationship to vocational education.

Vocational education here has been a most important part of the area's total education program. With new vocational schools being built in surrounding communities such as Moorhead, Detroit Lakes and Bemidji—and the technical institute to start next fall at Crookston—it would seem imperative that Thief River Falls keep its wheels rolling in order to set the pace.

Board members believe they have about $200,000 available at present for vocational school use. This includes approximately $100,000 in cash on hand and a similar amount likely available in funds administered through the state department of education. In all likelihood, it will not be enough to do the job that it would seem must be done.

One should not be critical of the past, but it is too bad that the original vocational school here was not detached from the high school. It would have made things simpler at this stage, although it probably was the logical step when the vocational school addition was built.

Thief River Falls has gained area-wide status as an educational center. Children reared in this community and surrounding towns have excellent opportunity for learning because of facilities available here. We believe they are entitled to continued growth and progress in the educational field. Education is one right which must not be compromised.

Inconsistency

The following editorial appeared in a recent issue of the Truman Tribune:

The inconsistency of the liberal politics is probably one thing that has made us lean more heavily to the conservative side. These inconsistencies seem to be always popping up with the most recent example monopolizing the metropolitan headlines.

The New York Transit Union has gone on strike for a 32 hour week, a 30 per cent increase in pay and a six weeks annual vacation after the first year on the job. If silence gives consent, and the law says it does, the LBJ administration must be embracing the union's conduct and its demands as non-inflationary.

On the other hand. . .Bethlehem Steel Co. has announced a $5.00 per ton increase for structural steel, and the Defense Secretary, the General Services Administrator and the President's Council of Economic Advisers have been bombastic in their shouts of "inflationary".

We can imagine the rationalizing of the Economic professors, the Political Science profs and the Law school teachers that there is nothing either black or white but we live in a society of grayness. Hogwash! The two actions are both black or they are both white. . .or, to compromise with the classroom caliphs, they are both gray. They are certainly alike and in kind, and are certainly inflationary no matter what color anyone chooses to call them. Why should one be embraced, and the other condemned as inflationary?

Aside from the inflationary factor, the act of the Transit Union is contemptuous and in the words of Supreme Court Justice Geller, causing "incalculable damage to the people in the city of New York." Union leader Quill has announced that he would "rot in jail" rather than comply with the court's injunction. I move he be given the opportunity, but why should Suill obey a court injunction while Congressman Adam Clayton Powell has been thumbing his nose at the courts for nearly two years?

The increase in steel prices is also unpleasant news, but industry is governed by that unimpeachable law of profit or loss. If industry makes a profit, 48 per cent of that profit goes to Uncle Sam to help provide for the running of our government and the multi welfare programs. Out of the remaining 52 per cent stockholders are paid dividends on their investment capital. Remove the dividends and you remove the investor. Remove the investor and you remove the industry. Remove the industry and you remove the tax to the government and millions of jobs.

It is incredible to think that industry can come up with one round of raises after another to meet union demands without raising the price of their products.

Of course these things are inflationary, but the most inflationary monster in the world today is the United States Congress and the Johnson administration. They are perpetuating a pattern set centuries ago and should not expect business or labor to produce an ever-increasing tax dollar without increasing their receipts to meet government demands.

His Own Victim

Many cities in our nation are having water shortage problems—not because there is a shortage of actual water but because there is not enough water which is fit for human use. Pollution caused by countless careless individuals, communities and industries has severely hurt our nation's water resources.

Sen. Walter Mondale commented in his "Report to Minnesota" on the serious problem of water pollution:

"For a long time, the waters of our country have been crying out for protection. These waters are in danger because of pollution—they are in danger of being despoiled for generations to come because we have refused to face the fact that our waterways can no longer be used as sewers.

"In the Northeast, 23 million people are short of water while billions of gallons of fresh water are sullied and allowed to flow unused into the sea.

"Along Lake Erie, which is the main water supply for 10 million Americans, pollution closes beaches to our children, and damages the commercial fishing industry.

"On our farms, chemicals drain off leaf and land to pollute streams and lakes and rivers and destroy aquatic live. In applachia, acid from mines pollutes thousands of miles of streams, making them useless and ugly."

The senator commented on other known pollution problems and the Water Quality act which establishes a new federal water pollution control commission. The role of this new agency, according to the senator, "will be to concentrate and direct the combined efforts of federal, state and local agencies and of public and private institutions. . .in the fight for clean water."

Then he adds," It is astonishing and dismaying to realize how slowly we have moved in the past in building needed treatment plants. In this year of 1965, there are still 1,845 American communities discharging raw sewage into neighboring waterways. There are at least 1,300 other communities which treat their wastes inadequately, endangering their downstream neighbors. In all, the wastes from 28 million Americans are discharged raw or inadequately treated into the neighboring waterways."

The government has taken its normal approach to this problem—the extension of federal money to communities to assist them in providing adequate treatment for wastes. This is the same money as all federal money, first extracted from the public in taxes and then returned after heavy administrative costs have been removed and costly red tape added.

As a result, residents of those communities which have sacrificed to provide adequate sewage disposal and have dutifully fulfilled their obligation to their downstream neighbors will now, in effect, subsidize those who have made no such sacrifice and have turned their heads away from the problem—the problem which they themselves have created. This is not fair or equitable. It should be the obligation—enforced by law and penalty if necessary—for every community to prevent pollution of water supplies in its area. And it should do this with its own funds, like other communities have seen fit to do.

The government should concern itself with assisting to find less toxic chemicals which will be effective in agriculture, giving more consideration to erosion control and pollution from mines and quarries, providing technical assistance in planning and types of proper pollution control and developing better techniques for water purification so that impure water can be used in health and safety.

Man has brought this problem on himself; he is his own victim. Now it is up to him to free himself from this problem he has created, and solve the problem he must. There is no alternate course. As long as man lives, he will need water. It is one of the most necessary ingredients of life itself.

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

In the crowded railroad station, at 6 in the evening, a woman sat wiping her eyes and answering the questions a man was asking in a low tone. Suddenly the man rose and faced the crowded room.

"Good people," he said, "here is a poor woman who wants enough money to take her to visit her family in Salt Lake City. I myself am not wealthy, but I am willing to contribute $10. How many of you will add something?" Off came his hat, and inside it, added to the $10 bill, there was soon a considerable pile of money with which the woman hurried to the ticket window.

A man on the the fringe of the crowd came up to the man who had started the collection. "Bill Smith, aren't you?"

"I am."

"And isn't that your wife?"

"She is," he admitted shamelessly. "And why shouldn't I give my wife a $10 bill to help her off on a visit?"

Come in and take on a tiger!

The only way we could make a Catalina look even better would be to show you its price tag.
Because stretching back for nearly 18 feet behind that dashing front end is everything that would make pricing a Catalina the next logical step: A 389-cu. in. V-8. Wide-Track wheels. Nylon carpets. A package of safety features including seat belts front and rear. And one of the roomiest trunks in the field. Come in, take on and price out a tiger at your Pontiac Dealers—a good place to buy used cars, too.

What's A GARNISH

SUSAN'S mother is a wonderful cook. She'll teach her little girl all about garnishes and dumplings and conserves . . . and about dozens of other skills that will help Susan to be a talented homemaker herself, one day.

WE pass our own store of knowledge on to our children because we want to make things easier for them in the future. They will need all the preparation we can give them in order to cope with a life that grows ever more complex.

ABOVE all, we owe our children the opportunity to learn about their best Friend, God. Awareness of His loving presence will give them confidence and courage whatever they do, wherever they go. Through regular church attendance, they can absorb the inspiring principles of Christianity . . . the most valuable recipes for modern living that exist.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL
ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Written testimonials are excellent, but often the endorsement of a long-lasting association is more meaningful.

Through the years, Minnesota Farm Bureau has relied on Minnesota Blue Cross to provide their approximately 20,000 group members with comprehensive protection against the cost of hospital bills. Since 1961 when MII became the medical, surgical-obstetrical program for Farm Bureau Members, this same endorsement has been earned time and again.

So written testimonials have their place, but Blue Cross and MII feel that a reputation for performance and loyalty are just that much better.

GTA Community Meeting Series To Open in T.R.F.

A series of town hall-type community meetings sponsored by Farmers Union Grain Terminal association in six cities in North Dakota, Montana and Minnesota will open Tuesday in the Thief River Falls city auditorium, GTA officials announced.

The Thief River Falls opener will be followed by meetings at Moorhead, January 19; Valley City, N. D., January 20; Sydney, Mont., February 1; Dickinson, N.D. February 2; and Bismarck, N.D. February 3.

"Community businessmen and local co-op personnel will sit down together at every meeting to discuss interlocking problems and opportunities as they relate to today's rural and urban affairs," said B. J. Malusky, GTA assistant general manager, who will preside at the gatherings.

The 1966 town hall series is patterned after the highly-successful pilot meetings held for the same purpose last year in a half-dozen other Upper Midwest localities, Malusky said.

Managers and directors of co-op elevators affiliated with GTA, managers of GTA line elevators and delegates from those elevators to GTA's annual meeting, some additional farmers, local business people, vocational agriculture teachers and county agents in each community trade area have been invited.

"The people in this board cross section of Upper Midwest community life have common problems and challenges," Malusky said. "We want to continue our investigation of how today's cooperatives can best fit in with this community pattern, so that GTA and the farmers it represents can be as helpful as possible in finding some of the solutions to these economic and social challenges."

In February of 1965, the GTA town hall meeting series attracted capacity attendance at a program of gatherings across the northern tier of North Dakota counties, and brought an enthusiastic response from both urban and rural representatives.

"Preservation of the main street business and social community is the central theme of these meetings," Malusky said. "This means, of course, that the perpetuation of the family-farm system must be a hand-in-hand proposition. One cannot exist without the other, and we want to know more about how this interdependence can be nourished and strengthened."

In addition, portions of each meeting will be devoted to detailed study of cooperative problems and opportunities. Local cooperative personnel will have the opportunity to visit with GTA representatives in matters of merchandising, bookkeeping, taxation, insurance, financing, public relations, marketing and modern techniques and practices within the whole range of co-op business operatons.

Last year's meetings were so successful, Malusky said, that in addition to the current meetings, plans already are being made for another series in 1967 at other locations in the GTA area.

"And when the 1967 series is finished, we'll start all over again," Malusky said. The reason for the three-year sequence, he said, is because most local co-op directors usually are elected for three-year terms, and the three-year booking plan will thus expose the town hall gatherings to new groups of community leaders each year.

"GTA recognizes its responsibility as a unifying force," Malusky said, "and we are open to suggestions as to how and where we can do a better job for our farmers and their neighbors."

Directors of the Pennington County Fair association, Inc., met Thursday evening to discuss plans for the 1966 exposition, according to Morris Goddard, secretary.

Silas Hanson was elected as delegate to the state meeting of the Minnesota association and Everett Amundgaard was named to work with the agriculture committee of the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce in regard to the tractor-pulling contest.

The board is also planning details of a farmstead award to be presented at the fair to a county resident who has expanded considerable effort to make his farm attractive, clean and neat in appearance.

Wheat Farmers Will Get Better Prices in 1966

Wheat farmers who participate in the 1966 voluntary wheat program can expect a better return per bushel of wheat than in 1965, according to Marcel Dahl, chairman of the Marshall County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee. The increased return can be expected because wheat produced for domestic food consumption is supported at 100 per cent of parity, the chairman said.

Under provisions of the new program, 45 per cent of the projected yield production of the allotment of a participating farm will be eligible for domestic marketing certificates and a price-support loan. The marketing certificates will be valued at the difference between the national average loan rate of $1.25 per bushel and parity on July 1, 1966, Dahl said.

In addition, all wheat produced on allotment acres of participating farms is eligible for price-support loans.

Full details of the 1966 wheat program may be obtained from the county ASCS office. Dahl said farmers who wish to participate in the program should sign up with the county office before April 15.

He will also discuss recent legislation which has altered the role of the veterinarian regarding federal meat inspection.

A number of other speakers will also be featured. Dr. Jack G. Flint, secretary and executive officer of the Minnesota Livestock Sanitary board, and Dr. Daniel Werring, veterinarian in charge, U.S.D.A. Animal Health division field veterinarians in Minnesota, will report on the status of brucellosis, bovine tuberculosis and sheep scabies eradication programs.

A first hand report on gains made in the fight against mastitis, a disease with far-ranging effects on the Minnesota dairy industry, will be made by Dr. Arlan R. Smith, Wisconsin department of agriculture.

Possible toxic effects on livestock fed low grades of natural feed grains will be discussed by Dr. A. A. Case, college of veterinary medicine, University of Minnesota at Columbia. FIREMEN of the Thief River Falls fire department were called to two locations Friday morning, which dawned a cool 27 degrees below zero. At the Oscar Ranum home at 622 Duluth av. N., an overheated furnace in the basement caused floorboards above the furnace to catch fire. Answering the fire call at 7:20 a.m., firemen extinguished the fire by running a hose through a basement window and wetting down the boards. Damage was mainly caused by smoke. Just seven minutes prior to this call, the men were called to the L. B. Hartz warehouse where a car owned by James Stromsmoe had caught fire. Damage was confined to the car's wiring.

C of C Banquet Slated Tuesday

Entertainment will be the key word Tuesday evening when the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce presents its 52nd annual banquet meeting at 6:30 pm. in the American Legion club rooms. Danny Klayman, young comedian from Minneapolis, will be the feature attraction on the entertainment program.

Special recognition to an outstanding citizen will also be given when the Chamber of Commerce presents its infrequently-awarded "Outstanding Citizen" award. This award is presented upon selection by the board of directors and is not made on an annual basis. According to Gene Guer, chairman of the banquet committee, the winner of the award must have an outstanding record of community service.

In addition to this award, several honorary life memberships in the organization will be presented at the banquet meeting. Participating in the award presentation, as well as commenting on the past and future of the organization, will be J. J. Womack, 1965 president, and Donovan Narverud, president for 1966.

Directors of the organization will also be introduced. They include James Winjum, first vice president; S. E. Sinding, second vice president; Arnt Aune, treasurer; Dr. Leo Herber, Phil Kays, Justus Larson, Sid Lieberman, Kenneth Onken, L. L. Tygeson, John Wold and Roy Lee.

Tickets for the turkey dinner to be served as the banquet meal have been on sale for the past 10 days and are being called in today. Persons who do not have tickets for the event may secure them at $2 each from the Chamber of Commerce office today (Monday). Allan Torkelson was ticket chairman with Dr. W. P. Kaisler and Glenn Peterson assisting on the banquet committee.

Dr. O. D. Belch will serve as master of ceremonies for the Tuesday evening banquet program. Rev Merrill Harris, pastor of Community Methodist church in Thief River Falls, will give the invocation.

Comedian Danny Klayman has received enthusiastic reception wherever he has appeared and has been billed as "Henny Youngman's Comedy Protege". Youngman has been tutoring Klayman since the youngster was 13 years old, and their styles are somewhat the same—tell a barrage of stories and some of them are bound to "connect" with everyone in the audience at one time or another.

Guer emphasized that Chamber of Commerce members are encouraged to bring their wives and employees to the annual banquet.

Bjertness Heads Marshall Board

Sofus H. Bjertness of Grygla was elected chairman of the Marshall county board of commissioners at its recent organizational meeting, succeeding Herbert Pagnac of Stephen. Oscar O. Rokke of Newfolden was named vice chairman.

Wheat and Feed Grains Signup Starts January 31

Signup for the 1966 programs for wheat and feed grains will start January 31, according to Winton Knutson, chairman of the Pennington County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee. Signup deadline will be April 15.

For the long-term Cropland Adjustment Program (CAP), the signup will begin on the same date as for the commodity programs, January 31; the signup deadline for CAP will be announced later. Producers who file intentions under CAP but do not enter into final agreements will have 15 days to file applications to take part in one or more of the annual commodity programs after applicants withdraw or after the county committees notifies them that no agreement will be available.

The chairman explained that, for 1966, a flexible schedule of signups has been adopted throughout the country, with each ASC state committee determining the most appropriate period for the activity. In most states, the signup period is uniform in all counties.

In general, both the commodity programs and CAP call for diversion of crop acreage into an approved conserving use. By meeting provisions of the programs, farmers become eligible for various benefits in the form of payments and also for loans under the commodity programs.

However, Knutson reminded farmers that participation in the various diversion programs is not automatic—filing an application which shows the operator's program intentions is the first necessary step in qualifying for program benefits. All the signup are conducted at the ASCS county offices.

2,079 Passengers Board Planes at TRF City Airport

With a record number of boardings in December, North Central Airlines at Thief River Falls set a new passenger boarding record in 1965, according to unofficial figures provided by North Central personnel at the municipal airport. A total of 227 boardings was noted in December, pushing the yearly total to 2,079.

December was only the second month in the 12-year history of Thief River Falls airline service to surpass the 200 mark in monthly boardings. A total of 202 passengers boarded North Central planes here in July. Previous high for an annual total was 1,911 boardings in 1964—marking 1965 the first had surpassed the 2,000 mark.

North Central set its new record here in spite of a number of days of heavy fog in November when a number of scheduled boardings had to be canceled when planes could not land at the airport. The company had posted 1,660 boardings through October and then added 192 in November and 227 in December for the 2,079 total.

Since North Central began its operations in Thief River Falls in 1953, a total of 17,393 passengers have boarded the planes out of Thief River Falls. Boardings climbed steadily from 420 in 1952 to 1,785 in 1960, dropped to 1,648 in 1961, and then have increased annually to the 1965 record total.

The local record coincides with the overall 1965 statistics for North Central. In 1965 North Central broke all traffic records for passengers and cargo carried, according to Hal N. Carr, president of the Minneapolis-St. Paul-based carrier.

The record 1,616,900 passengers boarded was almost 20 per cent ahead of 1964, Carr said. North Central flew 273,209,300 passenger miles in 1965, a gain of 19 per cent over the previous year.

A new daily record was set July 2 when 6,330 passengers were carried. In August, North Central established a new monthly record for the regional airline industry, with 166,697 passengers.

Cargo gains were even higher. Some 2,073,559 freight ton miles were flown, 37 per cent ahead of 1964; 1,023,685 express ton miles carried, for a 32 per cent increase; and 710,433 mail ton miles flown, a gain of 21 per cent.

In 1965 the airline also achieved an outstanding operating performance record, Carr said. Of the company's 15,611,988 scheduled miles, 15,296,725 were flown for a completion factor of 98 per cent.

Through December 1965, North Central had broken its own monthly record for 41 consecutive months in passengers and passenger miles flown, and 46 successive months for freight.

Carr stated that the company provided 586,492,415 seat miles in 1965, an increase of 14 per cent. This is in line with the airline's

Fire Burns Barn On Kuznia Farm Near Florian

Fire gutted a 50 x 60 foot barn on the George Kuznia farm near Florian Friday afternoon, January 7. The fire was first noticed by Mrs. Kuznia, who summoned the Argyle fire department. Due to the -25-degree temperature the outlets on the Argyle truck were frozen when the truck arrived, and the Stephen and Warren fire departments were called to assist.

At the time of the fire, 40 head of cattle were in the barn. They were all released and driven from the burning structure and are now undergoing treatment. Some of the cows contracted pneumonia.

The fire departments saved the outside of the barn but it was heavily damaged. Flames broke through the roof, and firemen had to chop holes in the roof in several places to get at the flames. Some hay that was stored near the barn was also lost.

Kvikstad-Wheeler Vows Spoken at Minnetonka

Miss Susan Adele Kvikstad, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor R. Kvikstad of this city, and John H. Wheeler, son of Mrs. Vera Levad Wheeler of Wayzata and Mike E. Wheeler of Forest City, Iowa, were married Saturday November 27, at a candlelight service at the Oak Knoll Lutheran church in Minnetonka. The Rev. Warren Heggem officiated at the double ring ceremony attended by approximately 150 close friends and relatives.

Organist Mrs. Lillian Madsen played a program of nuptial music as the ushers escorted the guests to their seats. She also accompanied Nancy White of Wahpeton, N.D., a student at Concordia college, Moorhead, as she sang "The Twenty-third Psalm" before the processional and "The Lord's Prayer" as a couple knelt at the altar.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a regal floor-length gown with detachable satin train. Styled of ivory satin brocade, the gown featured elbow length sleeves and a slightly scooped neckline. Her jewelry was a single strand of seed pearls and an heirloom bracelet which had previously been worn by her mother and grandmother at their weddings. A peak semi-crown lace headpiece secured the elbow length veil of silk illusion and she carried a crescent styled bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

The maid of honor, Miss Patricia Brown of Thief River Falls, a student at St. Cloud State college, and the bridesmaids, Miss Nancy White of Wahpeton, N.D., and Jeanette Haugen of Duluth, wore floor-length gowns of red velvet with scoop necklines, elbow length sleeves and controlled pleated skirts. Matching headpieces secured their veils of silk illusion and each carried a crescent bouquet of pink carnations.

The groom was attended by his brother, Michael Wheeler, as best man, and Dennis Schwichtenberg and Randy Armstrong, all of Wayzata, as groomsmen. Serving as ushers were Steve Bolstad and Ronald Kvikstad, brother of the bride and a student at the University of Minnesota. They wore black tuxedos and white carnation boutonnieres.

The mother of the bride wore a blue brocade two piece dress with mink buttons and a matching hat of mink. Her corsage was of pink orchids. The mother of the groom was attired in a beige lam' chiffon dress with matching accessories and the honored sponsor of the groom, Miss GretchenFalb, wore a green lame' sheath, also with matching accessories. Their corsages were green orchids. Other honored guests attending the wedding were the bride's brother, James Kvikstad, and his wife who flew in from New York.

A reception was held in the church parlors with Mrs. Ruth Wheeler as hostess. Decorations were in the bride's chosen colors, pink, red and white. The square, three-tiered wedding cake, surrounded by pink carnations and ferns, was topped with a golden cross symbolizing marriage in Christ. Cutting and serving the cake was Mrs. Harold Skunes of St. Paul, cousin of the bride, while aunts of the bride, Mrs. J. E. Kurowski and Mrs. Milton E. Kvikstad of Fargo, N.D. poured. Miss Eileen Mademan served the punch and Mary Bennes of Thief River Falls, a student at the University of Minnesota at Duluth, presided at the guest book. Arranging the gifts were Toni Jacoby and Sheila Thomas.

Out-of-town guests attending were from Sioux Falls, S.D.; Forest City, Iowa; Fargo and Wahpeton, N.D.; Thief River Falls, Moorhead, Mahnomen, Loretto and Duluth.

The bride is a 1962 graduate of Lincoln high school and is employed by the Sioux Valley hospital at Sioux Falls, S.D. The groom, a graduate of Wayzata high school and the Minnesota School of Business, is a court reporter and is employed by the Thiewes and May agency in Sioux Falls where the newly weds are at home at 2410 Kenwood Manor.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

MRS. WILLIAM PENNING

Variety in the menu adds interest not only for the members of the family but for the homemaker who is faced with the constant problem of what to serve at the next meal. As is so often the case, the homemaker is apt to make only the foods that are the family's favorite. If in doubt, one new dish served at a meal is more apt to be enjoyed than serving a whole meal of untried foods.

Senfgelle, the second recipe from the homemakers annual party, has a German background and is better known as a Mustard Relish mold. This salad, made for the party by Mrs. William Penning and Mrs. Orin Green, is expecially good when served as a relish with meat.

SENFGELLE
(Mustard Relish Mold)

- ½ cup cold water
- 2 envelopes plain gelatine
- 6 eggs slightly beaten
- 1½ cups sugar
- 1½ tablespoons dry mustard
- 2 teaspoons monosodium glutenmate
- 1¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups vinegar
- 1 one pound can green peas, drained
- 1 cup grated carrots
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley

Method: Sprinkle gelatine over water and let stand five minutes. Combine sugar, mustard, monosodium glutenmate and salt. Add eggs and gradually add vinegar. Cook over simmering water, stirring until thick. (This mixture will not get thick like a pudding—more on the order of a thin custard) Remove from heat and stir in gelatin. Cool until mixture begins to thicken and add remaining ingredients and mold.

Mrs. William Penning has been a member of the AST (A Show and Tell) homemakers group since coming to this area in the fall of 1960. Not as formal a group as some, the AST members meet the fourth Tuesday of the month with Mrs. Al Adams as counselor. At Christmas time the group sponsors a cookie exchange with each one of the 12 members bringing one dozen cookies, all of the same kind, for each member of the club. Thus each member returns home with a variety of 12 dozen different kinds of cookies.

The Pennings have six children, ages from two to 12 years old. With four children in school and two at home, Mrs. Penning, lists her sewing machine as one of her necessary appliances. She enjoys sewing and receives a special satisfaction in remaking a garment. She is a member of the Women's chorus at Trinity where the family attends church.

Mr. Penning is the former Pennington county agent and is at present Northwest extension agent in farm management for the University of Minnesota and is in charge of four counties in the area.

Wheat Program Offers Several Farmer Options

Voluntary wheat program for 1966 offers several options to farmers so they can best plan their individual operations, according to the ASCS county committee.

Options include planting wheat on all allotment acres, diverting allotment acres from production to conserving uses for payment, overplanting the allotment by up to 50 per cent and storing the excess production for bad crop years, substituting wheat for feed grains or feed grains for wheat, and substituting wheat for oats and rye.

Farmers should investigate each of the options to see which is best for their own farms, the county office said. Full details of the program are available at the ASCS office. The signup period extends from January 31 to April 15 in Minnesota.

continuing program to improve its service to the traveling public. During 1965, six more pressurized Convair 440 aircraft were added, bringing the airline's fleet to 29 Convairs and 17 DC-3's. Currently, North Central is operating 85 per cent of its seat miles with Convairs and, by April, this will be increased to 90 per cent.

The agreement with the Douglas Aircraft company includes an initial purchase of five of the new 100-passenger, twin-jets, including parts, at a cost of $20 million and an option for five additional aircraft.

Since beginning scheduled service in February of 1948, North Central has maintained a perfect safety record. The airline has carried nearly 12 million passengers and flown 1,918,000,000 passenger miles without a single fatality or injury to passengers or crew members.

North Central serves 9 cities in 10 Midwest states and Canada over a 7,000-mile route system.

Dr. Aasgaard, 89, Father of Mrs. Chommie, Dies

Funeral services for Dr. Johan Arndt Aasgaard, 89, the father of Mrs. Hans Chommie of Thief River Falls, and for 28 years the spiritual leader of America's Norwegian Lutherans, will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the Central Lutheran church in Minneapolis. Interment will be in the family plot in Eau Claire, Wis.

Dr. Aasgaard died of pneumonia Thursday in Cokato, where he had lived since his retirement in 1954 as president of the former Evangelical Lutheran church. That church, which in 1960 became part of the American Lutheran church (ALC) was called the Norwegian church of American when Dr. Aasgaard became its president in 1925. Under Dr. Aasgaard's leadership, the church which was eight years old at the time and had 480,000 members, became an English-speaking Americanized body with a membership surpassing 900,000. Before his retirement, he was active in early negotiations that led to the formation of the 2.5 million-member ALC bringing together churches with Norwegian, German and Danish traditions.

He was born in Albert Lea, the son of poor Norwegian immigrants. Though he dropped out of school at the age of 12 to become a "printer's devil", he resumed his education and graduated in 1898 from St. Olaf College, Northfield, eventually becoming its oldest living graduate.

After receiving additional degrees at Luther Seminary, St. Paul and Princeton (N. J.) Seminary, he became president of Concordia College, Moorhead. Serving from 1911 to 1925, he guided Concordia's growth from junior to senior college status.

Dr. Aasgaard served on the executive committees of the Lutheran World Federation and the National Lutheran council. He also was national president of American Relief for Norway, which raised $23 million from 1940 to 1948.

He maintained a lifelong interest in his heritage, exchanging hundreds of letters with two kings of Norway and serving as president of the Norwegian-American Historical Association.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. W. Theodore Greenfield, Cokato, Mrs. Hans Chommie of this city and Mrs. Carroll Hinderlie of Minneapolis.

Prowlers Win on Brodin's Basket

Bob Brodin's close-in shot, into the east basket with 10 seconds to play, gave the Prowlers a come-from-behind 54 to 53 win over Bagley in a basketball game played here Saturday night. The Bagley team, with seven seconds to play, rushed down the floor and had a pair of hurried shots at the west basket, but the tries caromed off the board and time ran out before they had any further scoring opportunities.

The Prowlers will play the East Grand Forks Green Wave here on Friday night, January 21, and on Saturday night, January 22, the locals will play Ada at Ada.

Except for the opening period of play when each team racked up a succession of points, Friday night's was "up for grabs" all the way. Bagley, on a pair of field goals by Dave Rivera and Ron Johnson, and two free throws by Greg Olson, gained a 6-0 lead in the first two minutes of play. Tommy Cummings, with 5:19 of the period to play, hit on a jump shot, and then followed with three successive field goals, all from the outside on jumpers. A pair of field goals by Brodin, and a free throw by Karl Poppenhagen boosted the Prowlers into a 13-6 lead. Bagley came back to pare that lead to 18 to 13 at the end of the period. And in the second period the Flyers outpointed the locals 18-12 to gain a 33-30 advantage at the intermission.

The Prowlers outscored Bagley 16-14 in the third period, with the Flyers' Greg Olson, on a last-second basket, giving Bagley a 47-46 lead entering the fourth period.

Brodin scored on a left handed layup with 7:35 to play; but Olson, from the lane, looped a field goal into the west basket. Poppenhagen, with 6:44 to play, made a pair of free throws, and Cummings hit on a jump shot. Warren Netland hooked a field goal into the Bagley net, and when Harlan Highberg scored on a jump shot with 2:35 to play, Bagley held 53 to 52 lead. Several time outs were called in the final minutes of play as last-shot strategy was plotted. And with ten seconds to play, Brodin dropped in the game-winning basket.

Cummings, with 15 points, was the game's high-point performer. Bagley's Greg Olson tallied 14 points.

Navy Recruiters Enlist Seabees At High Grades

Navy recruiters are now authorized to enlist men into the Seabees with no previous military experience and at pay grades higher than the usual recruit level.

These men can be brought in, under regulations just issued to recruiters, as high as second class petty officers, provided they have completed certain levels of their apprenticeship in civilian life. New regulations parallel those used during World War II when the Seabees were originated.

Need for more Seabees, has grown rapidly as the Viet Nam action expands and the forces there find need for more airfields, harbors and other construction work. Requirements have grown so fast that direct recruiting into the higher pay grades has now been authorized.

Prowlers Undefeated In Region 8 Hockey

The hockey Prowlers gained the distinction of being the lone undefeated team in Region Eight conference play when, on Friday night at Roseau, they defeated the previously unbeaten Roseau Rams, 2 to 1. Playing at Grand Forks on Saturday afternoon against coach Sergio Gambucci's North Dakota state champion Redskins, the Prowlers dropped a 5 to 2 decision.

This week's play will find coach Larry Gilbertson bringing his Hallock Bears here Tuesday night for a Region Eight conference game. And on Saturday night, January 22, the Fort Frances, Ont. high school squad will play here, meeting the Prowler A and B squads. The Fort Frances team is rated nearly on a par with the International Falls Broncos.

In Prowler B team hockey this past week, coach Jerry Westby's team lost to the Roseau B squad, 3 to 2, on Friday night, with Arlen Overbye and Bob Kleinvachter scoring forthe locals. And on Saturday afternoon the Prowler B's defeated the Grand Forks B's, 4 to 1. Overbye tallied a pair of goals for the Prowlers, and Rick Holmes and Mark Haugen scored singles.

In the week's feature game, at Roseau, the Prowlers gained a 1 to 0 first period lead when burly Billy Dicken skated in on goalie Jim Nelson and beat the Roseau netminder at the 4:48 mark, sending a hard drive into the east goal.

The Prowlers maintained that 1 to 0 lead throughout the second period, and then, at the nine minute mark of the third period, following a faceoff in the Roseau zone, Billy Poole, getting the draw, gave a pass to Kent LeMoine, and then converted LeMoine's rebound into a goal.

The Prowlers, receiving a couple of penalties in the final minutes of the game, were hard-pressed to hold off the Rams. With the Prowlers having Dave Wegge and Merle Sampson in the penalty box, Roseau, with six skaters on the ice, scored at the 11:25 mark, with veteran Bryan Grand getting the tally. The Prowlers, in the final 35 seconds were able to thwat the Rams' scoring efforts.

Playing at Grand Forks on Saturday afternoon, the Prowlers gave up some early goals, to the Central Redskins, and were unable to regain control of the game. Grand Forks, on goals by Rick Nelson, Bob Bethke and Mark Paulson, gained a 3 to 1 lead, with John Olson getting the Prowlers' first period tally.

Nelson added a Grand Forks goal in the opening minutes of the second period, and it was 4-1 for the 'Skins, Monte LeMoine, on an assist from Jerry Droppo, scored at the 5:41 mark to pare the lead of Grand Forks to 4-2. But Bob Bethke's tally at the 4:33 mark of the third period "insured" the game for Grand Forks.

This crazy little invention has made your snow tires old fashioned. Even if you bought them last year.

Trade them in for U.S. Royal's Winter Patrols. With the new studs to stop you on ice.

These studs are little tips of tungsten carbide, about the toughest metal you could find for the job. When you hit the brake, they reach out and claw the ice and hard-packed snow.

When you hit the brake, you don't have to miss a couple of heartbeats. When you're getting off from a standstill, you can practically forget about spinning your wheels and slithering off the road.

And if the road's dry? (Which it is 90 percent of the time.) Then these Winter Patrols can do 80 miles an hour. And keep at it.

There are Winter Patrols without studs, built to do 90. For 100 miles at a stretch. They're snow tires approved for highway patrol cars.

Their Peak Effort

Regardless of what the future hockey fortunes of the 1965-66 Prowlers may be, it must agreed that their 2-1 win over the Roseau Rams at Roseau on Friday night, was their peak effort. Entering that game, coach Oscar Almquist's defending Region Eight champions were boasting an undefeated record, and rated, rightly, as the state's number two team. The International Falls Broncos have been holding down the number one spot.

The Roseau squad had just returned from a successful road trip, having defeated St. Paul Johnson in St. Paul, and Duluth East in Duluth, and were in a game-winning momentum when they met coach George Schlieff's Prowlers on Friday night.

Most of the drama in the Rams vs. Prowlers game was crammed into the final minute and a half of play. The Prowlers, on an unassisted goal by Bill Dicken in the first period, and a goal by Billy Poole at the nine minute mark of the third period, held a 2 to 0 lead over the Rams. At the 1:47 mark Dave Wegge was given a penalty, and Roseau, taking their goalie out of the nets, sent six skaters on the ice.

At the 11 minute mark the Prowlers' Merle Sampson was waved into the penalty box, and Roseau held a two-man advantage, and a three-man skating edge. Bryan Grand, on an assist from Austin Wallestad, scored for the Rams at 11:25, and the Prowler lead was pared to 2-1. The Prowlers, although still a man short, held off the Rams in the final 35 seconds to gain the win.

In conversation in the Times office the other day, Clarence Mattson made the comment that this year's edition of the Prowler varsity hockey team must be one of the finest, physically, that has ever represented Lincoln high school. And that's pretty much of a fact.

Having seen all of the Prowler hockey teams since back in the days of 1945 when Bob Baker was captain of the squad, I must agree that this season's squad has fine all-round size. Sure there have been big Prowler hockey teams in years past, such players as Jack Erickson, Freddy Dablow, Glenn Carlson, Archie Schneider and others; but this year's club, with Monte and Kent LeMoine, Billy Dicken, John Olson, Wayne Smith, Merle Sampson, Dave Wegge and Jerry Droppo, has weight and size. The only boys who are on the "light" side are Chuck Bedard, Billy Poole, Roddy Carlson and goalie Jeff Noel.

With the Bulldogs

Elroy Froiland, son of the Bill Froilands, is a sophomore at the Duluth Branch of the University of Minnesota and a member of the Bulldogs varsity hockey squad. Elroy, a co-captain of the 1963-64 Prowler hockey squad, and also a member of Bill Herzog's Prowler football and tennis squads, spent just a couple of days of his Christmas vacation at his home here. The bulldogs hockey team was entered in the Brown University Invitational hockey tournament at Providence just before the New Year. UMD gained the finals of the tournament, losing to the host team, Brown, 4 to 3, in the championship game.

Elroy, who continues to play the hustling type of hockey that he exhibited as a Prowler, has been hampered by a shoulder injury the past 10 days. He did not see action in the Bulldogs vs. Minnesota game, and which found the Gophers, on a pair of goals late in the third period, edging out the Bulldogs, 5-4.

And speaking of hockey, Paul Peterson, one of the tri-captains of last season's Prowler Region Three state tournament squad, is a freshman at the University of Wisconsin. The Badger school intends to move into Big Ten hockey next season, and to that end are searching for a top-flight coach. Paul is playing City League hockey down there and expects to try out for the varsity next season.

Rolf Wangberg, a junior at Luther College and former Prowler track and cross-country star, was a member of Dick Halvorson's Luther cross-country team this past season. Rolf was rated as the number two runner on Luther's well-regarded cross-country team.

And there are a number of former Prowler athletes attending Bemidji State college. Roger Wilson is a member of the Beaver wrestling squad, and is in his second year on the varsity. Buzz Olson, a tri-captain of last year's Prowler hockey squad, and a member of the Prowler football and baseball teams, is a freshman at BSC. Buzz intends to play hockey and baseball for the Beavers. Rick Jensen is also attending Bemidji state college this year, having transferred from Gustavus Adolphus. He, too, intends to make an effort to play varsity baseball for the Beavers.

Some Big Points

Coach Whitey Olson's basketball Prowlers have won five games so far this season, and do you realize that in four of these victories the margin of difference between winning or losing has been a total of seven points?

Here's a run-down of those four games: the Prowlers defeated Crookston, 38-37; edged out Ada, 52-49; defeated Fosston, 48-46; and on Saturday night, eked out a 54-53 win over Bagley. And three of these wins, against Crookston, Fosston and Bagley, came in the final seconds of play. And it appears that another "cliffhanger" is due here on Friday night when the East Grand Forks Green Wave invades the Lincoln gymnasium for an important District 31 game.

Fisher Defeats Plummer Cagers

Coach Norm Wagner's Fisher Flyers, one of the top-ranked teams in sub-district play in District 31, scored a 58 to 49 win over the Plummer Cardinals at Fisher on Friday night.

Plummer's Gary Arlt, with a 25-point performance on 11 field goals and three free throws, gained the game's high-point honors.

Plummer will meet the Oslo Bobcats at Plummer on Friday night.

Park Rapids Wrestlers Break Prowler Streak

The wrestling Prowlers dual match winning streak, which had reached five straight, was broken on Friday night by the Park Rapids Panthers who scored a 23 to 19 win over the locals in a match held in the Lincoln high school gymnasium. Coach Ed Krystosek's varsity squad and coach Dale Folger's Prowler B squad will travel to Fertile on Wednesday evening, January 19, for a dual match against the Fertile Falcons of District 30.

Coach Darrel Larison's Park Rapids squad, led by their veteran wrestlers—Barry Blanchard, Dennis Cheney, Jim Carey, Charles Bishop and Charles Pike—all seniors, overcame an early Prowler lead to score a four-point win on Friday night.

Following the completion of the 145-pound class match, which found the Prowlers' Gary Olson scoring a 4-0 decision over the Panthers' Bruce Wagner, the Prowlers held a 17-12 lead. But Carey, the defending Region Eight champion, scored a 4-0 win over Luke Kaushagen in a 154-pound match; Bishop, a Mid-state conference champion, decisioned Dan Kaushagen, 8-0; and Charles Pike, Region Eight runner-up last season, edged out the Prowlers' Don Hanson, 6-5. The heavyweight match between the Prowlers' Bruce Parnham and Park Rapids' Jerry Cullen ended in a 2-all draw.

For the Prowlers, Bill Besch scored a 3-1 decision in a 95-pound class match; Myles Olson marked up a 4-2 decision over Roger Pihalaja in a 112-pound match; Steve Furuseth decisioned the Panthers' Grant Nunn, 6-0; Les Nordhagen wrestled to a 2-2 draw with Barry Blachdrd; and the Prowlers' Rod Collver scored a 1-0 decision over Don Safratowich.

In a preliminary match, the Park Rapids B squad piled up a convincing 34 to 6 win over the Prowler B squad, with the local B's collecting its six points in three drawn matches.

The Summary:
95-pound—Bill Besch (TRF) decisioned Gene Sabin (PR), 3-1.
103—Pat Shearer (PR) pinned Dale Comstock (TRF), 1:23.

Prowler 'B' Team Defeats Bagley

A strong second half performance, with Paul Ihle scoring four field goals in the third period and Stan Sjoberg adding four field goals in the fourth period, moved coach Lee Swanson's rangy Prowler B squad to a 60-45 win over the Bagley B team in a preliminary game played here Saturday night. Neil Josephson of the Prowlers, with six field goals and a pair of free throws, and Bagley's Marc Olson also with six field gials and two free throws, shared the game's high-point honors.

Governor Says Health Services Open to All

Governor Karl F. Rolvaag today called for a "child health care alert" campaign. "Every child in our state can now have the services needed to ensure good health, but it is up to each one of us to make sure that each child gets the full advantage of the program," the governor said.

"As of January 1, Minnesota has become a party to a new federal-state-country medical care program which makes it possible for every child from a low-income home to have ready access to complete health care," the governor announced.

"Just as we are now putting on 'medicare alert' campaigns, to get our senior citizens to take advantage of the supplemental health benefits available to them, we should also seek broad public understanding and awareness of this new and far-reaching children's health care program," the governor said.

He pointed out that under the new program the federal government will pay 60 per cent of the costs of such child health care. The remainder is shared equally between the state and the county.

Previously health care for these children, including dental, medical and surgical care, has been financed primarily from relief funds, which are raised by a local tax levy. The new federal participation in the program supplements these local efforts and permits a more liberal policy of coverage.

At the same time that the new program went into effect, the governor said, the state removed all residence requirements for this type of assistance. Formerly, a child might have been found to be ineligible because of regulations which required a year's residence in the state.

"Other eligibility factors have also been liberalized," the governor said, "in order to make sure that every youngster gets complete health care."

Previously, eligibility was determined on the basis of relief standards. The new eligibility requirements are less stringent. For example, in a family of four, if the family income does not exceed $3,000, the children are eligible for this type of assistance, the governor said.

"This is a milestone in Minnesota's program to achieve top-quality health care for all citizens," he added.

"Our studies of handicapping conditions which affect children have shown clearly that many a youngster—crippled, retarded, visually or hearing handicapped, emotionally disturbed—is now undiagnosed or is going without adequate medical attention in some back room in his own home or in some crowded group care facility.

"Now, at least the factor of inadequate financial resources will no longer prevent these children from getting the corrective and remedial surgical, medical and dental health care they need and deserve," the governor declared.

The governor pointed out that the state will continue to face a serious health manpower shortage. He stressed his determination to expand medical and pari-medical education and training programs in order that Minnesota will have a sufficient supply of practitioners in health and health-related fields.

The mechanics of the new child health care program call for the issuance of identification cards by county welfare departments to eligible persons. Holders of a valid identification card may then take their children for needed medical care to the doctor or dentist or clinic of their own choice, the governor said.

Warroad To Vote Again on School Bond Proposal

Warroad board of education, in a special meeting Wednesday, January 5, voted to hold an election on $595,000 the school building proposal January 27. The board had been advised by the architect that building costs from the summer of 1965 to the summer of 1966 would rise about eight per cent, raising the cost to $620,000. The board decided to take the bus garage out of the proposal, making the new proposal $595,000. Present plans are for the bus garage to be built from reserves in the general fund.

The building program includes 12 elementary classrooms; a kindergarten, speech therapy and remedial reading room; teachers workroom; library; multi-purpose lunch room with a kitchen; a music facility; sick room; and office space. The proposal also includes extensive renovation of the old high school building.

NW Bell Extends Reduced Rates In State Calling

Northwestern Bell Telephone company has announced another reduction in long distance costs for Minnesota telephone users which will mean a savings of $365,000 annually.

Tom Perrier, local manager, said that starting Sunday night rates for station-to-station long distance calls within Minnesota started at 8 p.m. instead of 9 p.m. on week nights and are in effect all day on Sunday.

In addition, the evening rate will be in effect Saturdays from 4:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Perrier said this will make the reduced-rate calling periods for intrastate long distance calls (within the state) identical with those which have been in effect for interstate calls (between states) since the last rate reduction in February, 1965.

Under the new, uniform arrangement, day-time long distance station to station rates will be in effect from 4:30 a.m., to 6 p.m. week days; the somewhat lower evening rate from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. week days and all day Saturday; and the lowest night rate from 8 p.m. to 4:30 a.m. week nights and all day Sunday.

County Welfare Offers Tests for Social Workers

Ronald D. Mooers, director of the Pennington County Welfare department, reported today that examinations for social case worker and social welfare supervisor positions will be given on February 19 by the county welfare merit system.

More than 200 new Case Workers were hired by the 87 county welfare departments in 1965 and a greater number is needed this coming year, Mooers said. In addition to normal turnover, new anti-poverty projects and the loss of young men case workers to military service will increase the demand for new personel. Best employment opportunities exist for persons who will work anywhere in the state at the basic beginning salary of $450 per month.

Applicants must be college graduates or seniors who will complete their degree requirements by Sept. 1, 1966, and must have or be willing to obtain a car for use in the work. Mileage is paid for necessary travel.

Mooers said that no openings in the Pennington county office are currently anticipated, but that opportunities may exist in nearby counties for those who cannot accept employment throughout a broader area of the state.

Applications for the examination must be submitted to the merit system office in St. Paul. Application forms may be obtained at the Thief River Falls or at the local State Employment service office.

Autos Demolished On Township Road Near Newfolden

Two new automobiles were demolished in a head-on collision on the crest of a slight hill on a narrow township road in Marsh Grove township of Marshall county Friday, January 7, at about 4:45 p.m. Occupants of the two cars were not injured seriously.

Driving one of the cars was Mrs. Florian Druray and coming from the opposite direction was Joe Blawat. Neither were driving fast as the road was narrow and snow-swept.

The drivers were taken to the Warren hospital where Mrs. Druray was treated for cuts and bruises and released. Blawat was kept overnight at the hospital for observation, treated for numerous cuts and bruises and released. The Marshall county sheriff's office reported that both cars were damaged beyond repair.

Tempt Teenagers At Breakfast Is U of M Advice

Studies show that, for young and old alike, a good breakfast is necessary for maximum mental and physical efficiency, especially during the late morning hours. Yet teenagers are notorious breakfast skippers and as a result are subject to a midmorning slump or midmorning fatigue which deprives them of alertness and makes it difficult for them to concentrate.

But how can teenagers be encouraged to eat breakfast? Verna Mikesh, extension nutritionist at the University of Minnesota, has a suggestion for mothers: "Fry some bacon, ham or pork sausage links," she said. "The tantalizing aroma of the meat wil tempt them to eat—even if on the run. Served with often-neglected eggs, the meat will provide the kind of stick-to-the-ribs breakfast teenagers need.

Pork and products like bacon, ham and pork sausage, all good breakfast meats, provide needed energy for the morning hours and, combined with eggs, contribute the protein necessary for growth and for maintenance of body tissues, Miss Mikesh says.

Pork is a good source of all the B vitamins—and one of the best sources of thiamine, important to growth and to proper functioning of the heart, nerves and muscles, the university nutritionist adds. Pork also provides substantial amounts of riboflavin for good vision and niacin for healthy skin. And for mothers who wonder about digestibility of pork, it is one of the most digestible of all foods, ranking about 98 per cent in digestibility.

Rope Artists To Present Acts in Goodridge School

Don and Patty Strong will bring their western rope show to Goodridge high school January 26 at 3 p.m. for students in the Goodridge schools. The two champion rope and whip artists are replacing the former Strong team which consisted of Don's parents.

Don was born in Miles City, Mont., and learned rope tricks from his father at an early age. He first appeared in rodeos at the age of five and later entered competition as a Brahma bull and bareback bronc rider. Together, Don and Patty have appeared on television, at state fairs and in a number of foreign countries.

The upper midwest tour of the Strongs has been arranged by the University of Minnesota program service, a division of the department of concerts and lectures.

Better Be There

We are sure you will be sorry for your absense if you do not attend the annual meeting of the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening. The committee headed by Gene Gaer has arranged for special entertainment in the form of Danny Klayman, a young comedian from Minneapolis who has gained much favorable publicity as an up and coming comic.

Klayman was long an admirer of comedian Henry Youngman; and has been tutored by the popular gagster since he was 13 years old. When his high school friends talked about their baseball idols, they would ask Danny who his idol was. "Henry Youngman", he would reply. Then his friends would inquire, "What's his batting average?"

Klayman has been batting a pretty fair average as a comedian in the tough world of show business in spite of his tender years. He gets his jokes wherever he can and he tells them at the rate of about 100 to a 20-minute performance. Aspiring toastmasters better bring a pencil and paper to do a little gag-stealing of their own.

Aside from the comedy entertainment, however, the banquet session will offer the announcement of an outstanding citizen award and the presentation of several honorary life memberships. It should be a most enjoyable envening. Better plan to be there.

Food Is a Bargain

Rising prices bedevil great numbers of American families. Inflation has cut deeply into the dollar's purchasing power and continues to cut. Yet, there are essentials that all of us buy which can be regarded as bargains today. And one of them is food.

A publication of an eastern food chain system tells the story. In 1912, the average family had an income of $11 a week and spent 40 per cent of it for food. Today, that average income exceeds $125 and only $25 of it goes for food—and it is more and better food.

Comparisons with other countries are revealing, too. The American worker's food bill runs to about 19 per cent of his earnings. In England, the figure is 29 per cent; in France 31 per cent; in Italy 45 per cent—and in Russia, a staggering 58 per cent!

The productive power and efficiency of the American farmer must be given much of the credit for this. But other factors play a major role as well. That is the case with American retailing. Working on the mass distribution principle, typical retailers operate at a profit that is almost unbelievably low. The chain store publication points out that the average family spends $1,170 a year for its food—and the average retail profit on that sum is just $15. Yes—food is really a bargain.

Marketing Trends

Each month the Minnesota department of agriculture publishes the "Minnesota Marketing Messenger", a bulletin which provides information of interest on the agricultural marketing scene in Minnesota. The January issue contains a projection of marketing trends foreseen by the department in 1966.

The projection is as follows:

WHAT'S AHEAD—

Gross National Product expected to continue steady advance.

Military build-up to keep employment increasing, consumer spending heavy.

Total volume of farm marketings may go up slightly in 1966, average prices received for all farm products down a little, resulting in about same cash receipts as 1965.

Gradual expanding economy may increase expenditures for food, but less than the six per cent gain in 1965.

Disposable income increasing faster than advance in food prices.

FARM PRODUCE PRICES

For beef and pork—expected to continue near present levels. Retail prices will be higher.

For some fresh fruits and vegetables, such as potatoes and apples, prices will be lower than 1965.

Many canned fruits and vegetables will cost more.

Dairy cash receipts may increase slightly.

Egg prices may be higher first part of 1966, lower in last part, average about same as 1965.

Soybeans—low previous carryover and continued strong domestic and export demand expected to keep prices within narrow range but perhaps slightly lower than 1965.

Modern Robin Hood?

The following editorial appeared in the Walsh County Record at Grafton, N.D.:

MAYBE IT'S TIME WE TOOK another look at the Robin Hood legend. All these years we've been led to believe that Robin Hood and his gang were heroic figures while the Sheriff of Nottingham and his deputies were unspeakable wretches. What are the facts?

The Robin Hood mob went in for highway robbery, kidnapping, mayhem and murder. They operated on the principle that if you didn't like the law it was your civil right and duty to break it. As for Nottingham, it is obvious that he was given the same shabby treatment accorded to modern law enforcement officials—no cooperation from the public, riots when an arrest was attempted, and constant yapping about alleged police brutality.

Robin Hood and his party built up a strong following among underprivileged Britons, by promoting the idea that they were stealing from the rich and using the money in an anti-poverty program. Actually, Robin Hood and his boys never had it so good. They kept getting fatter and their numbers kept growing at a fantasic rate.

To maintain his popularity, Robin Hood practiced an early form of public relations. He cultivated the minstrels. He treated these wandering warblers as he peers, tipped them off when he was going to hijack a bishop or a caravan, and let them know he was going to pass out a few quid to folks in depressed areas. Periodically he invited them all to Sherwood for one of his fabulous vension barbecues washed down by good brown ale.

The legend fails to mention how much of Robin Hood's loot ended up in the hands of the poor. It couldn't have been much because the poor stayed that way.

The Robin Hood indeed has its parallel in many happenings in this present day and age.

The Force of Events

From the Industrial News Review comes this factual evaluation:

It now seems entirely clear that concern over more inflation has entered the highest administration levels. This is the locical deduction that can be made from President Johnson's order of December 10 to all civilian agencies and departments to reduce their spending wherever possible.

The primary reason for that order is given as the costs of the war in Viet Nam. These are now estimated to be some $16.5 million a day, which works out to about $6 billion a year. And there is every probability that the war will be continually accelerated—or "escalated" to use the presently preferred word. Then the costs—measured in men and material—will rise to an extent that cannot now be accurately predicted.

Reductions in spending, say reports from Washington, will force a slow-down in programs, largely of a welfare state nature, which were approved during the last session of Congress. This means that, at last, we are beginning to come face to face with an inescapable fact: Even this government, rich as it is, and in a time of economic boom, cannot do everything. And this nation's strength cannot be maintained unless the strength and integrity of the dollar is maintained.

Why Don't We . . .

There are a number of questions which the American people have a right to ask that seem to have no ready answers. The government gets so involved in what it is doing that it seems the bureaucrats are short on reasons for doing things that way. Here are some of the questions we would like to have answered:

Why is the United States bursting with progress and riding the crest of a burgeoning economy in one Presidential speech and wallowing in poverty and lack of human rights in the next?

Why doesn't the United States tell the British to worry about her own problems in Rhodesia unless she halts trade with the communists and sends some troops to assist with preserving freedom in Viet Nam?

If guerilla tactics of the Viet Cong are so effective in South Viet Nam, why aren't South Vietnamese trained to employ some of the same tactics in the North to harrass the communits there?

How come the United States doesn't insist that United Nations members pay their dues before being allowed to vote as the U. N. charter provides? Has the U. N. ever actually accomplished anything toward creating a lasting peace in the world and relieving world tension?

Why are foreign aid funds being continually appropriated when there are enough unused funds from previous appropriations to continue a strong program for some time to come?

If passage of the civil rights act was such a cure-all for discrimination as the administration claimed, why are minority groups so dissatisfied and restless at the present time?

Why doesn't Congress inform the Supreme Court that it is a judiciary and not a legislative body before the actions of the federal judges corrupt the lower courts?

Why is the land conservation program of the present U. S. Department of Agriculture any better than the soil bank program which was denounced by the Democrats when Republicans ran the USDA?

When will governing bodies realise that deficit spending can not last forever and that the taxpayers ability to pay has a saturation point?

And how long will it take for the American public to realise that federal funds are nothing more than their own tax dollars, and that saying "No, Thanks" to government offers can preserve both their money and their freedom?

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

Weeping tears of female outrage, the lady driver insisted she had given a signal just before her car was struck by one driven by a male.

"Lady," said the man patiently, "I saw your arm go up, then down, then straight out, then into circles. You tell me that's a signal?"

"For Heaven's sake!" screeched the woman. "The first three signals were wrong; didn't you see me erase them?"

6 TIPS FOR SAFER WINTER DRIVING

By Prof. A. H. Easton
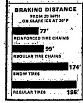
Director, Motor Vehicle Research Laboratory
University of Wisconsin

1. Get the "feel" of the road. Accelerate carefully at low speed and away from other traffic to see if the wheels spin, then brake to see if they skid. Reduce speed accordingly, steer gently and smoothly, use gas and brake pedals sparingly.

2. Increase your following distance. It takes three to twelve times as far to stop on snow and ice as on dry pavement, so lengthen your following distance to suit road and weather conditions.

3. "Pump" your brakes to slow or stop—don't jam them on. Proper pumping technique is to apply and release the brake pedal rapidly once or twice a second. This intermittent pumping action keeps the wheels rolling and helps maintain steering control.

4. Have good tires with good treads. Good tire treads are always superior to smooth treads on slippery pavements. Even better for snow are snow tires, which provide half again as much pulling power as regular tires.



5. Always carry reinforced tire chains in the trunk of your car and use them for severe snow and ice conditions. They provide four to five times as much traction on snow or ice as regular tires.

6. Keep your windshield and windows clear at all times. Replace streaking wiper blades that may have been baked dry by summer sun. Be sure that your windshield washer solution contains adequate anti-freeze.

Appearing in newspapers of the Minnesota Editorial Association through the cooperation of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture

Total acreage of cropland in Minnesota has changed by less than 2 per cent since 1945—but that fact tends to obscure the shifts in land now being farmed in the state.

In general, cropland acreage has shifted to the more productive glacial till areas of southern and western Minnesota. These soils can be drained, but were too soggy for good crops before modern technology came along.

Soil resource specialists Lowell Hanson at the University of Minnesota studied cropland distribution from 1945 to 1959 in 55 townships in Minnesota.

He found that changes in farm numbers and changes in farm population were not necessairly linked to crop yields in a given area; out migration has occurred in both production and marginal areas.

However, the kind of soil made a big difference in land use.

Cropland acreage has changed little in the Fayette Tama soils along the Mississippi River Valley, and has dropped in sandy areas of Central and Northern Minnesota.

Meanwhile, Cropland acreage in the Skyberg—Kasson soils in southern Minnesota, and just west of the Fayette Tama area, increased in the same period by a third.

Similarly, the Ansted—Flom soil of western Minnesota had a cropland increase of nearly 23 per cent.

Skyberg—Kasson and Austad—Flom soils are level lands with a drainage problem. But they have higher production potential if the farmer puts in some type of a drainage system.

Where the soil does not have some potential for increasing production, cropland acreage stayed about the same or actually decreased. The biggest drop found by Hanson was in the Esterville—Wadena—Hubbard soils of central Minnesota, where acreage dropped about a fourth. Similarly, the Malaca—Brainered soils of North Central Minnesota dropped by about 8 per cent.

The vast majority of this drainage in Minnesota, creating new cropland, has not been at the expense of waterfowl habitates, Hanson says. Duck ponds, for example, were never common in the Skyberg—Kasson soils area.

Some individual townships in Hanson's study had cropland increases of as much as 44 per cent; these were in the Skyberg—Kasson area of southern Minnesota.

These shifts in location of cropland acreage have a variety of implications for community planning and development, Hanson says. They may have implications for land taxation, for land prices, and for community changes. Hanson found that the sharper and local changes in land use, the greater the inequities in local real estate taxes.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q—I receive a pension from the VA and also social security benefits. I would like to know if a veteran such as myself has any preference for housing being built with government funds.

A—Any information on preference in obtaining housing must come from the local housing board in the city or town where the veteran resides.

Q—My husband is a veteran of World War II. He is 40 years old and receiving compensation from the VA for a disability which is service-connected. I would like to know if he is still eligible for a 30-year mortgage on a home loan.

A—He may well be. An eligible World War II veteran's entitlement for a GI loan expires 10 years from the date of discharge from his last period of active duty, any part of which occurred in World War II, plus one year for each three months of active duty in World War II. In no case will entitlement extend beyond July 25, 1967. The nearest VA regional office can establish his deadline date.

Q—The VA considers me permanently, totally disabled as a result of an accident during peacetime military service. I was originally informed that my child is not entitled to VA educational assistance since my injury was not the result of the performance of an act of duty. Is this still true?

A—The law has now been changed and your child will be eligible for educational assistance. It is no longer necessary that the totally disabling condition (or death) result from the performance of an act of duty. It is only necessary that the permanently, totally disabling condition be service-connected.

Happy New Year to you! And to Japan, where beer consumption increases some 20 percent per year. Beer now tops the output of Sake, the rice wine once considered Japan's national drink. Lately a campaign of "snob appeal" is attempting to convert young Japanese adults to a new lighter Danish-type beer instead of popular heavy lagers.

CONSERVATION News & Notes

by Bob Farmes
Area Game Manager
Division of Game & Fish—Minn. Conservation Dep't.

Waterfowl damage to small grain crops is one of the tougher problems facing game men in this area. Losses of small grain to ducks have been taking place for many years but with the change in harvesting methods from stack-threshing and shock-threshing to swathing-combining in the last 20 years the problem has become worse. The development of new varieties of oats, such as Rodney which the ducks seem to especially like, has also contributed to the problem. The drainage of marshes resulting in larger concentrations of waterfowl on those remaining has been an important contributing factor.

Most of the damage occurs in August and September when excessive moisture causes a delay in the harvest of barley, wheat or certain varieties of oats. When these grains are lying in the swath next to waterfowl concentration areas it is like setting the banquet table for them. Damage also occurs from trampling and just the sheer weight of numbers on the swaths.

The ducks will seldom enter standing grain and there is no problem until it is cut. The mallard is the main grain eater of the ducks in this area. In other parts of the United States and Canada pintails and baldpates cause serious problems.

Most of the trouble in Minn. is in the area of historical duck use—the vicinity of the Agassiz refuge, Thief lake and Roseau river Wildlife management areas, Roseau lake and Lake of the Woods. Grain fields within five miles of these areas are apt to sustain most of the damage. The problem is not peculiar to just northwestern Minnesota, however, as certain parts of the prairie provinces of Canada, the Dakotas and California have an even more serious problem.

The problem became serious enough by the late 1950's so that game managers became convinced that more had to be done to try to combat the problem. Thus in 1960 and 1961 a series of meetings was held between game personnel in the Minnesota Conservation department and the Federal Fish and Wildlife service. As a result of these meetings, a plan for coordinating waterfowl depredation problems in northwestern Minnesota was prepared and a five-man waterfowl depredations committee appointed to help carry out the plan.

The plan consists of two parts: a feeding program on the managed areas and a scaring program on this private lands. The feeding of grain is carried out on prepared feeding sites on the three major management areas: Agassiz, Thief Lake and Roseau river. Most of the grain has come from the Commodity Credit corporation as a result of federal legislation passed in 1956 which makes this grain available where there is a threat of waterfowl depredations. Some grain grown on the units themselves has also been used and it is hoped that eventually we may grow enough on the units to supply the need.

The scaring program is designed to help the land owner by demonstrating scaring techniques, and use of scaring devices and by lending the scaring devices when they are available. The automatic exploding devices are the best scaring method yet developed. While they are not perfect, if they are used as soon as birds start feeding in a field and in conjunction with scare crows, they do work.

While both the state and federal agencies lend these exploders to landowners having trouble, we can never own enough to fulfill the need in years when depredations are most serious. Thus it would pay land owners having frequent troubles with ducks in grain to purchase an exploder for themselves.

While the feeding-scaring program does not completely eliminate depredations in years when we have excessive moisture and prolonged harvesting such as we have just experienced the past two years, it does do much to minimize losses and in the "normal" year the program practically eliminates all losses adjacent to managed areas. Let's hope that we can return to some of these normal years again.

The feeding program held the birds on the managed areas exceptionally well this past fall when 34,700 bushels of grain were fed to a peak population on the feed sites of 115,000 ducks. When the feeding program was termininated in late September, birds immediately moved into adjacent grain fields, but it was not until this time that any significant flights out of the areas were noted. The law requires that feeding must be stopped 10 days prior to the opening of the waterfowl season in the case of CCC grain and three days prior in the case of grain that we ourselves grow.

While the feeding-scaring program has helped a lot, we are not completely satisfied with it and we will continue to look for ways and means of minimizing waterfowl depredations. Some promising work is being done on units which induce birds to utter distress calls, driving other birds away.

Community Theater Seeks Members, Plans Program

(Editor's Note: The following article on the theater group being formed in Thief River Falls was written by Mrs. Earl (Virginia) Gjernes, publicity chairman of the community organization.)

"Calling all talent!"

Hurrah! Hurrah! The "theatre" is coming to town—to stay! A new city recreation department development—"Thief River Falls Community Theatre"—is in the forming stages. Jim Foley, director of the park and recreation department, plus interested citizens, met recently in the city auditorium to make tentative plans for the new project.

Bill Jensen, current acting chairman, outlined the aims of the new recreational-cultural activity. He stressed the needs for all types of talent—Thespian, business, artistic stage hands, wardrobe masters and mistresses, carpenters, ticket-sellers, ticket-takers, ushers, musicians and prop men. In other words, it doesn't matter much wherein your talents lie. . .. your new "Community Theatre" needs you!

Jensen and Foley also stressed that all age groups should definitely be represented. There is not a person too young, nor one too old, who cannot add something to any production.

All plays to be produced will be professionally written. Royalties will be paid from the proceeds of the stagings. The "theatre" will be managed according to a regular constitution and by-laws. Officers will be elected at the meeting to be held January 24, so it is vitally important that all those interested in the new project to be in attendance so they may have a voice in their governing body.

This new project should prove to be one of the most stimulating of all the city recreation department activities. No specialists required—just interest—for there will always be something for all members to do. No dues will be paid by members (which is certainly an incentive—what other organization do you know of that doesn't require your money as well as your time?)

The formation of the new "Thief River Falls Community Theatre" will prove to be one of the most encompassing community projects yet undertaken. By the way, "community" does not mean only those living within the city limits are eligible for membership. Those from the surrounding area and from other towns should feel free to step forth and join the recreational group.

No matter what you're seeking in the form of recreation, you'll be able to find it if you join the "Community Theatre". . . . . .so makes no difference if you wish to emote in back of the footlights or bang a hammer or paint faces with grease paint or comb hair with a rake or paint walls with gusto. . .you can do it—just become a member of one of the newest of your community projects.

Remember to come to the city auditorium, basement, Monday, January 24 at 7:30 p.m. And leave your purse or your wallet at home. . .no dues! Just fun-for-all!

Your new "Thief River Falls community Theatre" has the emphasis on "community", for without the "community" there will be no "Theatre". And we need it; don't you think we do?

Dr. Jacobson Is Named As Outstanding Citizen

Award Presented Tuesday at C of C Annual Meeting

Dr. A. E. Jacobson was presented with the "Outstanding Citizen" award by the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce at the annual banquet meeting held Tuesday evening at the American Legion club rooms. Presentation of an engraved silver tray was made by J. J. Womack, 1965 president of the organization.

In making the presentation talk, Womack cited Dr. Jacobson's untiring efforts in behalf of education in the community and his dedication to community service. "Doc Jake" is a past member of the Thief River Falls board of education, a past president of the state board of education, member of the local junior college advisory board, and is currently a member of the Thief River Falls city council. He has been active in Chamber of Commerce projects for many years.

Presented with honorary life memberships by the organization were George Kildahl, A. F. Holzknecht and Erling Torgerson. Honorary life memberships are voted by the board of directors of the organization. The outstanding citizen award is made by the board of directors only infrequently as the board determines a citizen to be deserving of the special recognition.

Donovan Narverud, 1966 president of the Chamber of Commerce, presented the honorary life memberships and also made presentation of a plaque to Womack, the retiring president. Womack commented on the past year's activity of the organization and Narverud told of plans for the coming year including a general membership meeting in February to discuss resource development.

Dr. O. D. Beich served as master of ceremonies for the program with Rev. Merrill Harris of Community Methodist church giving the invocation. Entertainment for the evening was provided by young Danny Klayman, comedian from Minneapolis, whose repertoire of humor drew bursts of laughter from a full house.

Klayman injected a number of local businesses and personalities into his routine, adding to his presentation. He noted that the motel at which he was staying was so exclusive that room service had an unlisted number. The room was small, he said. He put the key in the keyhole and broke a window.

A motor fell off the plane on the way to Thief River Falls, he said, and a woman passenger in front of him to do something religious. "So I started a Bingo game. . ." he quipped.

Jarvis Prichard led in the singing of "God Bless America" to close the meeting with Mrs. Max Jensen providing the piano accompaniment.

Agassiz Council Scout Membership Has Big Increase

A new year end high in Scout membership in the Lake Agassiz council was announced today by Grand Forks, chairman of the organization and extension committee.

On Dec. 31, 1965, 4,846 Cub scouts, Boy scouts and Explorers were registered in the 15-county area served by the Lake Agassiz council. This represents an increase of 6.7 per cent in boy membership. Thompson pointed out that the membership increase for the past two years totals 25 per cent.

Among the 16 scout councils in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and eastern Montana, the 6.7 per cent increase was the second largest gain achieved during the past year.

"Last year," Thompson said, "the Lake Agassiz council embarked on a 'Breakthrough for Youth' program of emphasis. Our goal, as well as that of every scout council in America, was to serve at least 5.5 per cent more boys at the end of 1965. We are delighted to be able to exceed that goal because it means that more boys are now having the opportunity to belong to the scouting program."

Thompson said that the "Breakthrough for Youth" emphasis will continue in the council for 1966. The council hopes to be serving 5,180 boys by the end of the current year, another gain of 6.7 per cent.

Answer Questions on Federal Income Tax

These questions most frequently asked by taxpayers on federal income tax matters with authoritative answers are provided by the office of the district director of Internal Revenue, St. Paul.

Q — I have a refund coming on my 1965 taxes. Where should I file my return?

A — Mail your return to the Internal Revenue service, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101. To insure quicker handling, be sure the return is complete—that you have reported all income, listed required social security numbers, enclosed all tax withholding statements and have signed your return.

Q — My son is in the armed forces serving in Viet Nam. Does he have to file a return?

A — Members of the Armed Forces must file federal tax returns. However, an enlisted man may exclude all service compensation for each month in 1965 during which he served in Viet Nam, as well as each month for which he was hospitalized as a result of such service. Commissioned officers may exclude up to $200 a month of their service compensation while in Viet Nam. For this purpose, any part of a month of Viet Nam service is considered a full month. If overseas on April 15th an automatic extension to June 15th is provided for filing the 1965 return.

Q — Where can I get additional federal income tax forms?

A — Additional forms may be obtained from any Internal Revenue service office and also at most banks and some post offices.

Q — I am 68 years of age. Will I qualify for the retirement income credit?

A — You may. The amount of retirement income used for the credit computation includes income used for the credit computation nicludes income from pensions, annuities, interest, rents and dividends. The maximum amount upon which the credit is based is $1,524, reduced by any social security pension received, and with certain adjustments for earned income received in 1965. The credit is generally 15 per cent of the retirement income, and applies against any federal tax owing.

Q — I do not see any place on Form 1040 to claim a divident credit for dividends received in 1965. Why not?

A — This credit has been eliminated entirely for 1965 dividend income. However, the exclusion has been increased. The first $100 of dividend income received in 1965 is tax-free. Husbands and wives, both of whom receive dividend income, can exclude $100 each.

Q — I received a Christmas bonus from my employer last year. Is this taxable?

A — Yes, it is considered additional compensation. You employer probably withheld income tax on this bonus.

Q — Are jury fees considered taxable income?

A — Yes, they are.

Q — I sent a check to my church late in 1965, and it was not cashed until 1966. What year can I claim my deduction?

A — You may claim this deduction as a charitable contribution for 1965, even though the church treasurer did not deposit the check until 1966.

Q — Who must file federal income tax returns for 1965?

A — Every citizen or resident of the United States, adult or minor, under 65 years of age who had $600 or more gross income must file a return. Eligible Students Must Apply for Social Security

Some students eligible for social security benefits will begin to lose benefits if they don't apply by the end of this January, according to Clifford Kittelson, district manager for social security in Grand Forks.

Students eligible are sons and daughters between 18 and 22 of parents eligible for retirement or disability benefits or of a deceased parent insured under social security on whom they can establish dependency.

Back benefits can not be paid for more than 12 months before the month of application. Therefore, a student 18 or older in January 1965 must apply before the end of this January to cliam full retroactivity.

A parent may apply to receive benefits on behalf of a student or he may have the son or daughter apply to receive his own benefits. By year's end, 678 students in the Grand Forks district had applied under this provision, said Kittelson.

Applications are still emming in at the rate of 15 to 20 each week.

Radio Speaking Contest for 4-H Members Planned

4-H'ers will be studying the rights guaranteed in the Constitution in preparation for the statewide radio speaking contest, according to 4H club leader at the University of Minnesota.

Each contestant must write an original speech five to seven minutes in length. Pennington county 4-H'ers are invited to enter their local club or county radio speaking contest if they are over 14 years of age but not over 19 on Jan. 1, 1966, adds County Home Agent Beverly Tveito. The county contest will be held Saturday, February 5, at 1:30 p.m. in the Pennington county courthouse.

There will also be a contest on the county level for the 4-H'ers under 14 years of age. The topic for these 4-H'ers is "What It Means to Me to Be a Citizen of the United States". Length of speech is from two to five minutes.

Members will analyze, in their own way, the topic, "Are the Rights Guaranteed by Our Federal Constitution Consistent With the Needs of Today's Society?" Interested members can receive background material from the county extension office.

4-H'ers are asked to consider whether current conditions in our society should dictate changes in the Constitution in part or in its entirety, states Mrs. Fisher. It is felt that the 4-H members will have a better understanding of the Constitution after doing the study necessary for a radio speech.

Wool Producers Asked to Hurry '65 Applications

Growers were urged today by Winton Knutson, Pennington county ASCS chairman, to file their applications for 1965 marketing year payments under the National Wool Act at the earliest possible date but at least by the end of January. The applications cover marketings of wool, lambs and mohair during the calendar year 1965 for which all sales details were completed not later than December 31.

Knutson points out that payments be necessary on mohair sold during 1965. The payments represent the amounts necessary to bring the national average prices received by growers up to the previously announced incentive levels under the National Wool Act. The levels for 1965 are 62 cents a pound for shorn wool and 72 cents a pound for mohair; the incentive price for pulled wool will be at a level comparable to that for shorn wool.

Since payments under the program are based on the national average prices for marketings during the entire year it is important that sales reports be as complete as possible before the average price determinations are made. That is why ASCS is stressing application filings before January 31.

Payments for the 1965 marketing year are scheduled to begin in pleted after Dec. 31, 1965 are considered as 1966 marketings and therefore will not be eligible for payments until early 1967.

Newfolden Wins Trophy for Play

Newfolden high school was awarded the Central Sub-district 32 one-act play trophy Thursday at Greenbush with its production of "The Ugly Duckling" by A. A. Milne. Other schools participating in the contest were Karlstad and Greenbush. The winning play will be entered in the district one-act play contests today (Wednesday) at Warroad.

ENLISTED recently in the U. S. Army was James Clausen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Clausen of Grygla. He left Sunday for Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo. for basic training. Clausen is a 1964 graduate of Goodridge high school.

Several From TRF At Retail Farm Equipment Meet

A record-breaking attendance of 2,142 persons registered for the three-day annual convention in Minneapolis of the Retail Farm Equipment Association of Minnesota and South Dakota held last week. Among those attending were Everett and Jerry Amundgaard and Marland Johnson of Thief River Falls.

Elected president and vice president of the organization for the coming year were Dean Fossey of Austin and Julian Newhouse of Alexandria. At the convention, the dealers viewed nearly 100 exhibits of 1966 farm equipment.

Key speaker was Louis M. Thompson, associate dean of the college of agriculture at Iowa State university, who challenged "the conventional wisdom of agriculture policies based on an explosion in technology."

Since 1960, Thompson told the dealers, many have felt that some 60 million acres of cropland must be removed from production—because of a "technology explosion". The world population explosion, however, he said, will have a far greater impact on our agricultural policies.

"We have systematically reduced our food reserves since 1960 by constantly reminding the general public of the high cost of storage when the cost represented less than five per cent of our national defense budget," Thompson said. "We should prepare farm people and the general public to look at our agriculture in relation to potentials in international economic development. The potential increased world demand for U.S. agriculture products is very great, especially in less developed countries."

Adventists Here Advised of Death Of Missionary

Members of the Thief River Falls Seventh-day Adventist church learned recently of the murder of their missionary stationed at Malaita in the Solomon Islands, site of the new Adventist hospital.

Owen A. Blake, undertreasurer for the denomination, stated that the missionary, Brian Mansfield Dunn, 25, had been treating a patient in the Malaita dispensary when he was struck in the back by a heavy iron spear which had been hurled through the window. He was transported by sea and air to Honiara hospital and died two days later. L. N. Hawkes volunteered to replace Dunne at the dispensary.

Winter Show Program For Valley Announced

Many people are busy making preparations for the nine-day run of the 56th annual Red River Valley Winter shows and Northwest School Farmers' Week. The Winter Shows and Farmers' Week meetings will be held at Crookston February 19-27.

The big change in the show this year is the movement of nearly all the major farm "youth activities" to the first day of shows week Saturday, February 19. The usual crops judging, livestock judging, potato judging and public speaking contests, and also the livestock futurity show will be held on February 19 at the Winter Shows arena as well as at the facilities of the Northwest school of agriculture. Additionally, all competing 4-H dairy demonstration teams and the 4H grain clinic will also be held on Saturday at the Northwest school. This will bring to the Winter Shows about 1,500 farm youth in all activities.

Sunday, February 20, is King Agassiz day when a new King will be crowned. King Agassiz is the official Red River Valley Winter shows ambassador and is selected each year from supporting counties who nominate a county King Agassiz for recognition at the Winter Shows.

Monday, February 21, is Dairy Day and Soils Day. The dairy show and sale and a number of activities involving dairymen, including recognition of "honored dairymen" at an evening program is scheduled. A soils seminar is scheduled for Monday and many specialists will participate in this program.

Tuesday, February 22, is Garden Club Day, when persons interested in flowers and other horticultural pursuits will gather at the Northwest school for their program. The judging of beef cattle and swine will begin on Tuesday at the Winter Shows arena.

Wednesday, February 23, is scheduled as Crops, Public Affairs : Higher Education Day. The Crop Improvement association will meet for business discussion. Program on public affairs has been arranged for the women of the Valley. Also, a special program has been arranged for citizen leaders and professional people interested in higher education in the Valley area. At the Winter Shows arena, the judging of cattle continues and the Hereford cattle sale and the hog sale take place.

Thursday, February 24, is Red River Valley Development Day. The educational feature of this day is a top-level industrial and resource development seminar which will bring in experts from the region to look at the industrial, agricultural and resource development opportunities and responsibilities in the Red River basin. Beef Shorthorn and the sheep sales are scheduled; also, there will be a sale of the meat animal show carcasses on Thursday.

Friday, February 25, is Sugarbeet Day with plans complete for the annual sugarbeet seminar. A statewide sale of purebred Angus beef cattle is also scheduled for Friday.

The show activities will continue through the late afternoon of Friday, February 25. The horse show will begin on the evening of the 25th and continue with a star-studded horse show through Saturday and Sunday, February 26 and 27.

MFT Local Hears State Executive

Harvey L. Otterson, executive secretary of the Minnesota Federation of Teachers, was guest speaker at a meeting of the Thief River Falls Federation of Teachers held Monday evening at the Rex cafe. Local faculty members who are members of the federation attended the session, as well as several teachers from other communities.

Everett Marshall, Lincoln senior high school speech teacher and debate coach, was elected temporary president of the TRF local. Jack Boyer, social studies instructor at Franklin junior high school, was elected secretary-treasurer.

Otterson reviewed the work of the federation during the past year and discussed legislation affecting teachers. He said that two controversial bills passed by the 1965 legislature were vetoed by Gov. Karl Rolvag largely due to the efforts of the federation.

One of these bills, the repeated probations bill, was opposed by the federation because it was punitive in nature and added mental illness as grounds for immediate teacher dismissal. The mental illness portion of the bill was considered "outrageous" by the federation, Otterson said, because mental illness "is to be treated as an illness and should not be treated as a crime".

The second bill, dealing with collective negotiations between teachers and school boards, was opposed by the federation because it was considered inadequate. The bill was also opposed by the state board of education.

The executive secretary reported that the MFT now has a membership of about 7,000 classroom teachers and is continuing to grow. Interest is being expressed throughout the state, he said, and noted that the state commissioner of education has stated that no one should interfere with the right of any teacher to join or not to join any teacher's organization. Any such interference should be reported to the commissioner's office in St. Paul, he said.

Local federation members were complimented on work done here and urged to continue expanding the local organization. It was noted that many schools in the state have active MFT locals.

Young Canadians To Play Hockey Here This Week

Youth hockey teams in Thief River Falls will meet Canadian competition Saturday and Sunday in games scheduled for the local arena ice. Playing here will be teams from the Transcona East Side Community club.

On Saturday at 1:30 p.m. the Eagles Peewees will play the equivalent age group from Transcona while the VFW Bantams will play at 2:30 p.m. On Sunday, starting soon after 12 noon, the teams will play again at the arena. There is no admission charge.

In games played the two previous years between the Transcona and Thief River Falls teams, the wins and losses are even for both clubs. Local skaters will go to Transcona for games later in the year.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our little son Dean Richard Bernard who left us on January 22, 1965.

In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of you are always near.
We who loved you, sadly miss you
At the close of one year.
Though your smile is gone forever
And your hands we cannot touch,
We shall never lose sweet memories
Of the one we loved so much.
If this world were ours to give,
We would give it all and more
Just to see the face we loved dearly
Come smiling through the door.

Sadly missed by mother and dad. Dale & Dolly Bernard. 1t6p

Prowlers Top Hallock In Region 8 Contest

The Prowlers will meet the highly-touted Ft. Frances team here on Saturday night. On Monday night, January 24, the Prowler B squad will play the Red Lake Falls B squad here with the faceoff slated for 7 p.m. And on Tuesday night, January 25, coach John Hopkins will bring his Warroad Warriors here for an important Region Eight conference game.

It was only in the third period of play in Tuesday night's game here that the Prowlers were able to pull away from the ever-trying Hallock squad. In this final period the locals racked up four goals, with Chuck Bedard scoring a pair and Billy Dicken and John Olson adding singles.

The Prowlers opened the scoring at the 1:28 mark of the first period when Billy Poole slapped a rebound shot into the north net after Monte LeMoine's try had hit the goal-post. At the 9 minute mark of the period, Poole added his second goal when the puck caromed off Monte LeMoine's skate and came out to Billy in front of the net. Kent LeMoine had set up the play on a pass from the east sideboard.

The summary:

WALLEYE weighing approximately seven pounds was hooked and hauled through a hole in the ice Saturday by 13-year-old Steven Espeseth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arne Espeseth of Thief River Falls. Fishing on the river at the north end of Merriam avenue, Steven caught this and four smaller walleyes. His father is a commercial fisherman who works off the coast of Alaska from spring until fall.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

…. Should Clear the Smog ….

Results of this weekend's schedule of games could do much to dispell the basketball smog that has enveloped the area, especially in District 31. On Friday night the Warren Ponies are at Climax, and the East Grand Forks Green Wave is at Thief River Falls. And on Saturday night the Crookston Pirates are at Warren. The outcome of these games should give an indication of the favorites among the District 31 class A teams. At present coach Whitey Olson's Prowlers are the lone unbeaten Class A team, but the blue-and-gold will be up against a toughie in coach "Larry Selk's" East Grand Forks Squad.

Last week, coach Irv St. John's Warren Ponies, with Bruce Ranstrom hitting at a 20-plus mark, defeated East Grand Forks, 59-57, at Warren. The following night, though, East Grand Forks bested a strong Ada Viking club, 49-45.

The odds are heavy that one of the district's five Class A teams—Thief River Falls, Crookston, Warren, East Grand Forks or Climax—will win the District 31 cage title. Since 1931, when the present arrangement of teams in the district was made, only two teams, Climax, a sub-district team in 1943 when the Vikings scored a 31 to 29 win over the Prowlers in the district finals; and last year, in 1965, when the Goodridge Huskies bested East Grand Forks 65 to 49, has the sub-district contingent succeeded in breaking the domination of the Class A schools.

During this span of years the Thief River Falls Prowlers have won 16 district titles; the Crookston Pirates have won seven championships; East Grand Forks has won six titles; and the Warren Ponies have won four district titles.

And a couple of important games are on the regional slate this weekend, too. On Friday night, at Bemidji, coach Bun Fortier's improving Lumberjacks, boasting a winning streak of seven games, will host the Henning Hornets, the defending Region Six champions. Bun scouted Henning in its win over a strong and big Minneapolis Roosevelt team, and he was impressed by the all-round finesse of the Henning team.

He said that while Dick and Bob Peterson, the two six-foot five-inch twins of the Hornets, are getting much of the publicity, Henning is not dependent entirely upon these two boys. I imagine Stan Cockrell will be giving 10 points and taking Henning in this game. Stan, you know, is Henning's publicity man for northwestern Minnesota and northeastern North Dakota.

And the Ada Vikings should be primed for the Prowlers on Saturday night. The locals, you know, upset the Vikings, 52 to 49, here a couple of weeks ago.

…. He's a Great One ….

States the article: "Virtually every hockey-playing college in the country has expressed interest in having Sheehy, a B-plus student, further his education in its classrooms. Further, representatives of the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey league have twice visited his home in hopes of signing him to a contract, a rare honor for an American."

Sergio Gambucci's Grand Forks Redskins, who have lost but one game this season, that a 4 to 2 game to the Broncos, is lavish in his praise of Sheehy. Gambucci indicated that Sheehy will enroll at some eastern school and play his college hockey out there. Sergio didn't believe that any of the Western Hockey College conference schools would be successful in recruiting Sheehy.

And did not you note the comment of coach Lefty Smith of South St. Paul following the 5 to 0 defeat that his Packers absorbed from the Broncos on Saturday night? "I've never seen a stronger six than the Broncos put on the ice this season. There's Ron Beck in goal, Steve Ross and Don Weum on defense, with center Tim Sheehy and wings Pete Hoag and Dan Mahle up front."

Added Smith: "We timed the Falls' first unit. In the first period, the first line played eight of the 12 minutes. In the second period, they skated nine of the 12 minutes. With the game under control in the final period, they worked six of the 12 minutes."

That's the method that Cliff Thompson used when he was having such success at Eveleth some years ago. He always kept his good skaters on the ice. I can recall an Eveleth team that played in a junior tournament here in 1941 that had a center, Ben Swarthout, who centered two pair of wings. He was tireless. And who can forget the Golden Bears of the late 1940's when, led by the play of Johnny Mayasich, Eveleth won four successive state titles. During his junior and senior years, Mayasich seldom left the ice. If he needed a rest he would move back on defense for a spell.

Oh, yes, coach Larry Ross of the Broncos states that the toughest games for the Falls this season have come from the Ft. Frances, Ont., team. And this Ft. Frances squad will be here on Saturday night for a game against the Prowlers.

Pollution Commission Studies State Problem

Minnesota Water Pollution Control commission will adopt general classifications and standards of water quality and purity for the state's waters sometime within the next six months. Public hearings began in January and will continue into March.

The commission is developing the general standards, in accordance with present provisions of the Minnesota Water Pollution Control act, as a basis for applying standards to specific bodies of water. The Federal Water Quality Act of 1965 also requires that the states establish standards for interstate waters by June 30, 1967. The proposed general standards are on file in the commission's office and are open to inspection by interested persons.

Public hearings will be held at Moorhead, February 2; Hibbing, February 16; and St. Paul, March 2. Earlier hearings were at Rochester and Marshall. Testimony may also be sent by mail to the commission's office at the State Board of Health Building, University Campus, Minneapolis, up to March 2. The commission will consider all information offered before making its final decisions. Classifications and standards, once adopted, will become a permanent reference.

The proposed overall standards cover certain requirements for all waters in the state, regardless of their classification, including the stipulation that untreated sewage cannot be discharged into any waters of the state.

As a minimum condition all wastes discharged into any waters of the state must be controlled to prevent nuisance conditions such as floating solids, scum, oil slicks, suspended solids, material discoloration, obnoxious oders, visible gassing, sludge deposits, slims or fungus growths.

Liquid substances which are not commonly considered to be sewage or industrial wastes which but could constitute a pollution hazard must be stored in a manner which will prevent their access to any waters of the state.

There are six general classes of water use in the proposed standards: those for domestic consumption, fisheries and recreation, industrial consumption, agriculture and wildlife, navigaton and waste disposal and other uses. Appropriate subclasses and standards of water quality and purity will be adopted within each class.

Administration and enforcement of state laws relating to pollution of the state's waters is the responsibility of the Water Pollution Control Act of 1945. However, it did not for many years consider it either necessary or desirable to classify the waters. Substantial progress was made in controlling both old and new sources of pollution by relying upon education and persuasion and, in a few exceptional cases, through abatement orders.

The commission's specific legal authority is to issue orders for the abatement of pollution, to require the submission of plans for waste disposal systems, to give permits for disposal facilities, to deny permits for disposal facilities where the facilities interfere with other legitimate uses of the water such as recreation, industrial, or domestic consumption, to adopt general water standards, to establish regulations for individual bodies of water, to require communities to provide disposal facilities to prevent pollution, and to require the storage of liquids such as oil in a manner that reasonably assures proper retention against pollution of water.

Even though the commission can set standards for waters in general and regulations for specific waters, it does not control nor can it forbid the actual uses of water except as to the location of disposal plants.

In considering the location of disposal plants, the commission operates on the basic premise that these facilities should be downstream or below major population centers. No known methods of treating sewage are 100 per cent effective and occasional breakdowns occur, either from internal mechanical causes or from outside disturbances, such as power failures or floods.

Treated wastes pollute waters to some extent, and sometimes raw wastes bypass plants and flow directly into rivers and streams. Another situation that exists in major population centers is the unavailability of waters suitable for sewage discharge in all of the communities within these centers. These factors make it necessary to consider sewage disposal on an area-wide, rather than on an individual community, basis.

The state's increasing urbanization is a complicating factor in the location of sewage disposal plants in Minnesota. Who pays for sewage plants, trunk sewers, maintenance and upkeep and who decides the basis for contract rates, personnel policies and the type of governing units over sanitary districts are matters which must be decided by local communities involved in the problem and the state legislature.

A current state law enables governing units, on a voluntary basis, to form sanitary districts to handle the financial and administrave aspects of area-wide disposal systems. However, in this and many similar problems, joint voluntary agreements are difficult to arrive at and require many years of effort before they can be achieved.

Fisheries and Wildlife Topics Of UND Seminar

A symposium on fisheries and wildlife problems, sponsored by the University of North Dakota biology department, will be held at UND February 3 and 4. The symposium will concentrate on [illegible] al problems in fish and wildlife diseases and pollution in aquatic environments, said Dr. Paul B. Kannowski, chairman of the UND biology department.

The regional event is designed for conservation agency and college personnel, students and the public. It will feature UND and area speakers. Participants are expected from North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Manitoba, Canada.

Dr. Joseph Hunn of the U. S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, fish control laboratory, LaCrosse, Wis., will deliver the opening talk February 3 at 9:30 a.m. in the University Center Lecture Bowl. His topic will be "Chemical Control of Fish Populations."

Registration will be from 8 to 9 a.m. February 3 in the Fireside Lounge of the University Center. A $5 registration fee will be changed. Panel presentations, workshops, lectures, general discussions, presentation of papers and a scuba diving demonstration make up the program format. Most sessions will be in the University Center.

Sheriff Reports Auto Accidents

Two automobile accidents, one of which resulted in a personal injury, were reported today by the Pennington county sheriff's office.

A two-car accident occurred Saturday at about 1:20 p.m. about one-quarter mile east of the bridge crossing the Red Lake River at St. Hilaire on SAR 3. A car driven by Clarence D. Boutain, rt. 1 was traveling west on SAR 3 following a bulk milk truck. Boutain began to pass the truck, which kicked up enough snow from the highway to limit visibility, and collided head-on with one driven by Robert A. Thompson, Thief River Falls, which was traveling east.

The Boutain car was considered a total loss, and the front of the Thompson car was extensively damaged. Thompson was treated for a head cut and injured knee at Northwestern hospital and released. Neither Boutain nor his passenger, Clinton Cosavan, were seriously injured.

A one-car mishap occurred Wednesday at 9 a.m. on the airport road. A car driven by Dean C. Johnson, Leeds, N.D., was traveling south on SAR 17 and ran onto ice on the highway, causing the vehicle to skid completely around the slide into the ditch on the west side of the road, hitting a mailbox owned by Ray Oen. The car's left front door was extensively damaged.

Perpetuity

Our battered and ragged dictionary (yes, we do have one!) defines perpetuity as "perpetual existence, duration; something perpetual or perpetually held or maintained." To this we add our own: That term of office to which every public figure in the U. S. Congress would prefer to be elected.

It was significant to note in President Johnson's "State of the Union" address to the Congress that his glowing predictions and proposals received only polite applause. At only one point did the crowd give sustained and spontaneous response—and that was when LBJ said he would seek to have the terms of office for Congressmen extended to four years.

There may be some good points to four-year terms for members of Congress. Campaigning takes a lot of time and money that could perhaps be used by Congressmen in better ways to help the nation.

In spite of the shabby treatment the public has received from government in the past few years, we are inclined to believe that Congressmen would neglect the voters even more if they only had to come around for support every four years. In fact, at the present rate in which Congress has been stealing our freedoms and spending our money, an election every six months might be advisable.

Politicians often speak of the "election year" and how it inspires caution in actions of government officials. If responsible action in one out of two years is all that can be expected now, why should the voters expect responsible action in more than one out of four years if the laws were changed. The motto of politicians seems to be: "Get Elected, Get What You Can, Be Neutral, Get Reelected."

There would be little doubt that Congressmen would like perpetuity in office. A little restraint at the President's suggestion of four-year terms, however, would have made a much better impression on the folks back home. If our Congressmen are all that anxious to have four years to fiddle, they better start showing that they can handle their delegated tasks for two years. That means this session of Congress has to be much improved over the gold rush of 1965.

Can Someone Explain?

We would like to have someone explain the reasons behind the ridiculous actions mentioned in the following comments made by Ronald Reagan last year at the annual convention of Kiwanis International in Los Angeles. Can people really have such absence of thought? Reagan commented as follows:

"We set up to help 19 war ravaged countries at the end of World War II. We are now helping 107. We have spent 146 billion dollars. Some of that money bought a $2 million yacht for Haile Selassie. We bought dress suits for Greek undertakers. We bought 1,000 TV sets, with 23-inch screens, for a country where there is no electricity, and some of our foreign aid funds provided extra wives for Kenya government officials.

"When Congress moved to cut foreign aid they were told that if they cut it one dollar they endangered national security, and then Senator Harry Byrd revealed that since its inception foreign aid has rarely spent its alloted budget. It has today $21 billion in unexpended funds.

"Some time ago Dr. Howard Kershner was speaking to the prime minister of Lebanon. The prime minister told him proudly that his little counry balanced its budget each year. It had no public debt, no inflation, a modest tax rate and had increased its gold holdings from $70 to $120 million.

"When he finished, Dr. Kershner said, "Mr. Prime Minister, my country hasn't balanced its budget 28 out of the last 40 years. My country's debt is greater than the combined debt of all the nations of the world. We have inflation, and we have a tax rate that takes from the private sector a percentage of income greater than any civilized nation has ever taken and survived. We have lost gold at such a rate that the solvency of our currency is in danger. Do you think that my country should continue to give your country millions of dollars each year?"

"The prime minister smiled and said, "No, but if you are foolish enough to do it, we are going to keep on taking the money."

"And so we built a model stock farm in Lebanon, and we built nine stalls for each bull. I find something peculiarly appropriate in that. We have in our vaults $15 billion in gold. We don't own an ounce. Foreign dollar claims against that gold total $27 billion. In the last six years, 52 nations have bought $7 billion worth of our gold and all 52 are receiving foreign aid.

"Because no government ever voluntarily reduces itself in size, government programs once launched never go out of existence. A government agency is the nearest thing to eternal life we'll ever see on this earth.

"The United States manual takes 25 pages to list by name every Representative and Senator, and all the agencies controlled by Congress. It then lists the agencies coming under the Executive Branch, and this requires 520 pages.

"Since the beginning of the century our gross national product has increased 33 times. In the same period the cost of federal government has increased 234 times, and while the work force is only 1 ½ times greater, federal employees number nine times as many. There are now 2½ million Federal employees. No one knows what they all do.

"One Congressman found out what one of them does. This man sits at a desk in Washington. Documents come to him each morning. He reads them, initials them and passes them on to the proper agency. One day a document arrived he wasn't supposed to read, but he read it, initialed it and passed it on. Twenty-four hours later it arrived back at his desk with a memo attached that said, "You weren't supposed to read this. Erase the initial and initial the erasure."

"While the federal government is the great offender, the idea filters down. During a period in California when our population has increased 90 per cent, the cost of state government has gone up 862 per cent and the number of employees 500 per cent. Governments, state and local, now employ one out of six of the nation's work force. If the rate of increase of the last three years continues, by 1970 one-fourth of the total work force will be permanently employed by government.

"Already we have a permanent structure so big and complex it is virtually beyond the control of Congress and the comprehension of the people, and tyranny inevitably follows when this permanent structure usurps the policy-making function that belongs to elected officials.

"One example of this occurred when Congress was debating whether to lend the United Nations $100 million. While they debated the State Department gave the United Nations $217 million and the United Nations used part of that money to pay the delinquent dues of Castro's Cuba."

Everybody Does It

From the Chicago Sun-Times comes this critique of the modern age:

When Johnny was six years old, he was with his father when they were caught speeding. His father handed the officer a five-dollar bill with his driver's license. "It's O.K. Son," said his father as they drove off. "Everybody does it."

When he was eight, he was instructed at a family council, presided over by Uncle George, on the surest means to shave points off the income tax return. "It's O.K., Kid," his uncle said. "Everybody does it."

When he was nine, his mother took him to his first theater production. The box office man couldn't find any seats until his mother discovered an extra two dollars in her purse. "It's O.K. Son," she said. "Everybody does it."

When he was 12, he broke his glasses on the way to school. His aunt Francine persuaded the insurance company that they had been stolen and they collected $27.00. It's O.K., Kid," she said. "Everybody does it."

When he was 15, he made right guard on the high school football team. His coach showed him how to block and at the same time grab the opposing end by the shirt so the official couldn't see it. "It's O.K. Kid," the coach said. "Everybody does it."

When he was 16, he took his first summer job at the big market. His assignment was to put the over-ripe tomatoes in the bottom of the boxes and the good ones on top where they would show. "It's O.K., Kid," the manager said, "Everybody does it."

When he was 18, Johnny and a neighbor applied for a college scholarship. Johnny was marginal student. His neighbor was in the upper three per cent of his class but he couldn't play right guard. Johnny got the scholarship. "It's O.K." they told him. "Everybody does it."

When he was 19, he was approached by an upper classman who offered the test answers for three dollars. "It's O.K., Kid," he said, "Everybody does it."

Johnny was caught and sent home in disgrace. "How could you do this to your mother and me?" his father said. "You never learned anything like this at home." His aunt and uncle also were shocked.

Real Opportunity

While the Economic Opportunity Oct provides for local committees, these people are finding out more and more that they really have very little power. About all they can do is try to give honest service to the program in their areas—and that is about all the public can expect of them

Such is not the case in all areas—and therein lies one of the major problems of such a vast federal program. For instance, the Anoka County Union credits one of the Anoka county commissioners with the following account:

"Near San Antonio, Texas, there is a manger of a vegetable plant and farm who is taking full advantage of the Economic Opportunity Act. He is salaried at $900 per month as an instructor and a brother is salaried at $700 a month as an assistant.

"They instruct in greasing a tractor, changing tractor oil, driving a tractor and charge back the use of equipment for the instruction plus getting a lot of cultivating and plowing done at no cost. "

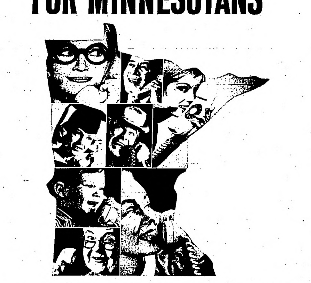
ANOTHER REDUCTION IN LONG DISTANCE COSTS FOR MINNESOTANS



Beginning January 16, nighttime rates on station-to-station calls within Minnesota start at 8 p.m. (that's one hour earlier) and are in effect all day on Sunday.

The latest change in Long Distance calling periods means new savings on many of your calls within Minnesota. Starting January 16th, lowest rates on intrastate calls start at 8 p.m. weekdays and are in effect all day on Sunday. In addition, you will enjoy somewhat smaller savings on such calls between 6 and 8 p.m. daily and all day on Saturday.

In other words, reduced-rate calling periods on calls within Minnesota will be the same as those which have been in effect for interstate calls since the rate reductions last February 1. Whether you call within Minnesota or to another state, rates are lower between 6 and 8 p.m. every weekday and all day Saturday. Rates are lowest of all every night after 8 and all day Sunday.

Goose and Deer Reports Given by Agassiz Refuge

Surveys were conducted by personnel at Agassiz National Wildlife refuge to determine hunter success and kill figures for geese and deer during the open seasons on these species in 1965. Since the refuge is closed to goose hunting, the goose survey was conducted on lands adjacent to the refuge and under its influence. The deer survey, however, covered refuge lands themselves since the area is open to the hunting of this game species.

During the first nine days of the goose season, the survey showed that 4,626 hunters harvested 798 geese while crippling 253. This represented a total kill of 1,051 for that period. Canada geese comprised 74 per cent of this total with the remaining 26 per cent being snows and blues.

As would be expected, peak numbers of hunters were afield on the first two days of the season. That weekend, hunters averaged .09 birds per hunter trip. This figure rose to .19 birds per trip on week days. The proportion of trips on which no geese were bagged averaged 83.8 per cent.

The number of goose hunters per square mile of area surveyed increased 191 per cent over 1964. Many hunters expressed their dissatisfaction with the crowded conditions and with the poor sportsmanship displayed by some individuals.

As has been the policy in past years, Agassiz refuge was again opened to deer hunting during the 1965 season, which in this area extended from November 13 thru November 17. Approximately 523 hunters participated and bagged a total of 188 deer. This represents a success figure of 36 per cent which is comparable to that experienced in other good deer hunting areas of northern Minnesota.

Of those animals which were reported by hunters, 30 per cent were fawns. A number of large bucks were also reported killed with one having 15 points on its rack and another with 12. The kill figures were indicative of a healthy deer herd which is well within the carrying capacity of the habitat.

Except for blizzard conditions which prevailed for part of the first day and all day on Monday, weather conditions were generally quite favorable for good hunting. An ample amount of tracking snow was available, and all water areas on the refuge were frozen over, making it possible for hunters to disperse and to get into some of the better deer country.

Good sportsmanship was practiced by the majority of hunters. No hunting accidents were reported and only one moose was found dead from gunshot wounds this year.

New Tax Booklet Available from Internal Revenue

The 1966 edition of "Your Federal Income Tax," the official booklet on federal taxes, is now available for 50 cents from local revenue service offices.

The 160-page booklet covers in detail federal income tax laws as they apply to individuals, according to George O. Lethert, district director of Internal Revnue. The language used is nontechnical and the booklet contains many examples to illustrate application of the tax laws to actual situations, Lethert said.

The informational material is especially helpful to taxpayers who have unusual tax situations or those who are faced with a new tax problem for the first time, Lethert indicated. Check lists are included which outline taxable and nontaxable income, allowable and nonallowable deductions.

Tax-saving provisions for senior citizens over 65 years of age are fully explained, as well as the minimum standard deduction which benefits millions of low income taxpayers.

A special feature is the sample filled-in Form 1040, keyed to pages in the booklet where the various items on the return are explained in detail, Lethert concluded.

Special Form To Be Mailed With Veterans Checks

Veterans and dependents of veterans on VA's compensation and pension rolls who have school age children will receive a special questionnaire with their February checks, according to John R. Parrish, center director.

He said the checks and questionnaires would arrive about February 1. Need for the information asked by the questionnaire follows a recent law that provided higher rates of additional payments for school children and at the same time raised the maximum age limit from 21 to 23.

The questionnaire also asks for the payee's zip code number in keeping with current postal regulations in order to speed up the delivery of both checks and correspondence. A space is also provided for the payee's social security number, if readily available so that identification files may be kept up to date. Parrish said the questionnaire should not be mutilated nor folded and all questions should be answered before the card is signed. A special addressed envelope is provided for the return of the questionnaire.

Parrish requested that the zip code be shown on all return addresses of correspondence directed to the Veterans administration for any purposes. By doing this, the postal department and the Veterans administration will give prompt service to the veteran, he said.

A WORLD IN TROUBLE

ALL FOR THE CHURCH

"The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

What has happened to this marvelous world of ours in this twentieth century of God's grace? Mankind seems to be passing through a sea of troubles which has no counterpart in human history.

There are wars and rumors of wars among the nations, and many of the nations themselves are split into warring factions, each faction striving for supremacy, and each intolerant of the views, hopes, and rights of others.

The great trouble with the world is that men have forgotten God. They no longer seek spiritual guidance, but follow the vain ways of the modern world. We have become a cynical, materialistic generation.

If this drift toward world tragedy and chaos is ever stopped, the churches of the world must do it. The world's hope — our hope — is in God and His Church. He alone can save mankind from a sorrowful fate.

The Church seeks to turn the hearts of men from the ways of war and fear and hate to the ways of peace and love.

How's Your Health?

(Prepared in the public interest by the Minnesota Medical Ass'n)

Has it ever occurred to you that your doctor needs your help? The doctor undertakes a long period of training before he begins to practice medicine. The patient, on the other hand, often has little or no training or experience for his role. If you want the best possible health care, you will have to learn to cooperate with your doctor. Here are some suggestions from the Minnesota State Medical association on how to be a good patient.

By choosing your family doctor before you think you really need him, you will have the advantage of knowing where to turn in an emergency. Your doctor will also know your medical history and general physical condition so he will be able to give you the best possible care.

Information is essential to the doctor if he is to do a good job. Withholding information about an illness because of fear or embarrassment will only delay your recovery!

Time is also important in any visit to a doctor. The time you actually spend in a doctor's office is usually quite short. It will save the doctor's time—and yours—if you have in mind all the facts you think he will want to know and all the questions you want to ask him. Make notes if you have to, but be sure you are satisfied before you leave his office. It won't do any good to complain to a neighbor later.

Finally, the state medical association cautions, no prescription will help you if you do not have it filled. Your doctor's advice is worthless unless you follow it. The care your doctor gives to you depends to a certain extent on how good a patient you are. Make sure your relationship with your doctor is based on mutual respect and cooperation.

No Freeze-Out Problems Yet in Northern Lakes

Heavy snows in the northern part of Minnesota have not caused any severe freeze-out problems for fish so far this winter, the state conservation department reported this week.

Ted Shields, state game and fish director, said most lakes with a history of winterkill are located in southern Minnesota where waters are generally shallower and fertility of the water is usually higher than in the north.

To date, the heaviest snows have been confined to the northern half of the state while lakes in the south have little if any snow cover.

Winterkill occurs when an accumulation of snow and ice cuts off light penetration from the sun into the water. Without this light, aquatic vegetation dies and decays and in the process consumes oxygen in the water needed by fish to survive.

Many shallow lakes and large marshes in the northern part of the state offer excellent spawning and rearing habitat for northern pike. In some of these, such as the pools on the Roseau River Wildlife area, northerns enter the lake and spawn in the spring. In the fall the young fish are removed and transferred to deeper lakes where they can survive and where they can supply angling and help control panfish populations.

On a few lakes with a history of annual winterkill, fish rescue starts early in the fall. Since late summer, state fisheries crews have rescued over 500,000 game fish weighing 138,000 pounds, most of them northern pike.

Grand Rapids Has Timber Auction

Minnesota Forestry division will hold a small auction sale of timber in Grand Rapids at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, February 2, in the court house, it was announced today. The sale will include timber on 18 tracts and Christmas trees on three tracts, all in Itasca county.

Volume of timber to be offered is slightly over 4,000 cords including 300,000 board feet of sawtimber. Also up for sale are 47,500 spruce Christmas trees growing in swamp land areas. Total appraised value of the trees to be auctioned is $12,684.

Purpose of the sale is to make timber more readily available to loggers for a longer period than is possible on informal sales. Listings of the timber offered on the various tracts are available at division of forestry offices.

Wills Attends Photo Session Several From TRF

James H. Wills of the Times news staff attended an afternoon-early evening seminar for news cameramen held Saturday at the Bowler in Fargo. The meeting was sponsored by the National Press Photographers' association of which Cal Olson of the Fargo Forum is president. Olson and Chet Gebert, Forum photographer, were in charge.

The instruction was carried out with the use of audio-visual aids. First of these was a taped lecture with film slides by Dr. Edward Fischer, professor of communications at the University of Notre Dame. This presentation pointed out how expert lighting and composition can add to a news photo's impact. Later Al Fleming of KTHI-TV showed a film documentary of the construction of the world's tallest tower.

Also shown was a newsreel of the flight of Gemini 4, when Astronaut McDivitt took his walk in space. Following a steak dinner, a film entitled "Viet Nam—It's a Mad War", narrated by Chet Huntley, was shown. The meeting was interrupted briefly at about 6 p.m. when Fargo newsmen were called out for film coverage of an armed robbery at the south side Red Owl store.

Purchase of a portable 2-way radio unit (walkie-talkie) for the police department was the main item of business at a lengthy regular meeting of the Thief River Falls city council held Wednesday night.

Three bids were received and opened Tuesday afternoon. Bids for a new portable radio were submitted by General Electric at a cost of $605 and Motorola at $713. Motorola also submitted a bid for a used demonstrator unit at $653. The council voted to award the bid to Motorola for the used unit. Although Motorola was not the low bidder, its unit is more compact and easier to operate than that of the General Electric firm, the council decided, exercising its option to act in the best interest of the city.

The council heard the second reading of an ordinance amending Section 21.206 of the municipal code and coordinating the times during which on and off sales of non-intoxicating liquors may be made, and also the first reading of an ordinance providing for two regular meetings of the council each month, amending Rule 29 of Section 2.101 of the municipal code. Following final reading of the latter ordinance, the council will meet the second and fourth Tuesday of each month.

The Clark Oil and Refining company applied for a building permit for a gasoline service station to be located at the corner of Main avenue and Zeh street, costing $10,000 for the building. Total investment will be $25,000. The permit, however, is non-conforming, and an ordinance will require the firm to submit a petition containing the signatures of 75 per cent of the property owners living within 300 feet of the proposed enterprise.

It was voted to advertise for bids on the following: official newspaper, official depository, airport gasoline, police gasoline and general city gasoline. Bids will be opened at 3:45 p.m. February 15.

Morris Owen, superintendent of utilities requested and was granted authority to purchase a sand and gravel tamper for the street department at a cost of $975. The machine will be used for packing sand and gravel around new water mains and sewers and elsewhere when necessary. Main objective in purchasing the machine is protection of streets from a settling gravel base.

Owen was also granted authority to purchase a new pump and 40 feet of hose from the city water department. In addition, he was granted approval for himself and three of his employees to attend a municipal utilities association workshop.

Bids for four new pickup trucks will be opened at 2 p.m. February 15. They are to be purchased for use by the sewage, electric, park and street departments.

The following city officers were reappointed for the ensuing term: Elton Cummings, chief of police; Dr. H. Paul Wendt, health officer; William E. Fahey, city clerk, Robert A. Wurst, city attorney; Richard Mabey, city assessor; Roy Langevin, fire chief; Alvin Jablinske, street commissioner; Thomas Fuller, liquor store manager; and Morris L. Owen, superintendent of utilities. R. J. Ulferts, Mrs. Lloyd Bennes and Mrs. Hans Chommie

Redeemer Church Annual Meeting

Annual meeting of Redeemer Lutheran church was held Wednesday evening at the church. Orall Johnson, secretary, gave the report of the church council and Rev. Dennis Rodin gave the pastoral report.

Elected to the council for three-year terms were: Dr. Roland K. Anderson, Ted Booth, Dale Folger, William Halabasch, Goodwin Hanson and Irvin Larson. Elected for one year to fill an unexpired term was Merle Dagen.

Cited by the secretary as the most significant portion of the council's activity during the past year was the action taken to build a new church on the church property located in the southeast part of the city.

Rev. Rodin's report indicated that the church has 483 confirmed members among a total baptized membership of 731. A total of 440 of the confirmed members are classified as active, since some hold membership although they have left the city. Congregational receipts for the year totaled $39,293 for an average annual contribution of $81 per confirmed member to all funds of the church.

Among resolutions adopted was support of a project to relocate the Northwestern Lutheran Theological seminary near the site of Luther Theological seminary in St. Paul. Four special offerings will be held during the year to assist in this project.

-41 Reading This Morning Coldest In Times Records

For the past several days and particularly this morning, the mercury has appeared to be trying to crawl out of the bottom of the thermometer. Just before sunrise this morning, the official thermometer at the Thief River Falls municipal airport registered 41 degrees below zero, which is the coldest level reached since the Times began keeping permanent records 11 years ago. This city, however, was beaten for the title of "icebox of the nation" by Bemidji, which reported a low of -46 degrees.

Cause of all the cold weather is a massive arctic high-pressure ridge which has engulfed the entire mid-section of Canada and the United States and has influenced weather on the east coast. This high, which has moved slowly southward, brought subzero temperatures as far south as the Texas panhandle and brought the first sub-freezing weather of the winter to the Gulf coast. A number of heavy snowstorms in the southern and eastern states were attributed to the frigid weather system. In this area, the extreme cold was accompanied by an ice fog and a display last night of the aurora borealis, commonly called "northern lihts".

No relief from the arctic weather is in sight. The wind continues to blow slowly from the north, and the forecast calls for fair and cold today, tonight and tomorrow. Highs today will range from -5 to -18; lows tonight from -20 to -35.

The steadily-intensifying cold wave is evident on the weather record, as is shown by the following temperatures recorded at the airport: 13, -3 and a trace of snow on Wednesday; 9, -11 and an inch of snow containing .05 inch of water on Thursday; -8 and -25 on Friday; -8 and -30 on Saturday; -14 and -36 on Sunday; and a low this morning of -41.

TRF Employment Totals 2,854 in Mid-December

Employment in Thief River Falls totaled 2,854 as of mid-December, according to the Minnesota state employment service. Compared with September employment, this is a drop of 184 workers, most of them seasonal manufacturing employees. The 2,854 total is however, 54 above mid-December a year ago.

The only significant changes in the various employment categories were in manufacturing and construction. Decreases in the areas normally occur with the arrival of cold weather, which forces contractors to curtail or shut down operations.

Outlook is for very little hiring until next spring. The seasonal upswing in employment usually does not begin until April, and then only if the weather permits farm and construction work to begin.

Library Has Most Books And Borrowers in History

Carnegie public library in Thief River Falls completed 1965 with more books available to borrowers and more borrowers registered to read them than at any time in the library's history. This is the indication in the annual library statistical report prepared by Miss Bertha Hastad, librarian, for submission to the library division of the Minnesota Department of Education.

Total number of volumes loaned for home use declined slightly during the year from 89,600 in 1964 to 87,490 in 1965. Most of this drop was caused by the closing of one rural school which had previously received book shipments from the library for home use by students.

Volumes of adult non-fiction loaned for home use increased from 23,932 to 25,783 while adult fiction volumes decreased from 22,936 to 20,517 and childrens books borrowing declined from 42,732 to 41,190. A total of 11,307 reference questions was answered during the year.

Registered borrowers increased in number from 5,718 at the end of 1964 to 6,328 on December 31, 1965. A total of 741 new borrowers was added during the year with 131 borrowers withdrawn from the list. Totals at the beginning of 1964 included 2,401 adults and 3,317 juveniles while the year-end figures were 2,722 adults and 3,606 juveniles.

Book stock increased from 25,913 volumes at the beginning of the year to 27,274 volumes on December 31. The library added 1,147 new adult books and 438 juvenile books during the year for a total of 1,685 additional volumes. During the same period, 193 adult books and 131 juvenile books were withdrawn from circulation. Currently on the shelves or in the homes of borrowers are 14,912 adult books and 12,264 juvenile books.

The library also offers six newspapers and 121 periodicals to readers visiting the library. During the year the library operated with three full-time and three part-time employees. Salaries totaled $12,7[illegible] for the library staff and $2,112 for the building staff.

Operating expenses totaled $23,619 for the year as the library operated on a very tight budget. Major operating costs in addition to salaries were $5,212 for books, $551 for periodicals, $245 for binding, rebinding, repairing and mending, $783 for heat, light, power and water; $245.50 for insurance and $1,466 in other operating expenses. Balance on hand at the end of the year was $6,458.50—compared with a year-end balance of $5,309.50 in 1964.

Income during the year included $20,907 in city appropriation, $2,000 from Pennington county, $426 in fines, fees and memberships, $80 in rental collection, $130 from the sale of two sets of encyclopedia, $1,000 from Pennington county for the library building fund and $149 in interest.

R. J. Ulferts is chairman of the library board with Richard G. Mabry as secretary. Other board members include Mrs. L. B. Hartz, Eric Hammershoy, Mrs. Clarence Isaacson, Mrs. Stanton Dahlen, Gene Bello, Mrs. Lloyd Bennes and Mrs. H. O. Chommie.

The new library being built across from the present building at First and Main is expected to be ready for occupancy this spring.

Judith Ann Rupprecht Weds William Crowell

Miss Judith Ann Rupprecht, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rupprecht of rural Thief River Falls, and William Crowell, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Crowell of Rochester, Mich., exchanged marriage vows Nov. 26, at 8 p.m. at the Silver Creek Lutheran church.

The Rev. Harold Peterson of Trinity Lutheran church, Thief River Falls, officiated at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. David Schwartz, church organist, played a program of organ music as the guests were ushered to their seats and she also accompanied Mrs. Donald Rupprecht as she sang the "Song of Ruth" and "The Lord's Prayer".

Lighted candelabra decorated the chancel and bouquets of yellow carnations and bronze baby mums graced the altar.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white taffeta gown fashioned with a floor length skirt that swept back to form a chapel length train and a lace over-jacket styled with long sleeves that came to points at the wrists. Her only jewelry was a heart shaped locket, a gift from the groom. A crown of pearls held her veil of silk illusion and she carried a cascade of white baby carnations centered with yellow roses.

Joan Rupprecht attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of French blue chromspun nite-lite. Her jewelry was a pearl pendant, her gift from the bride, and she carried a cascade arrangement similar to the bridal bouquet.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Rupprecht wore a two-piece turquoise dress with black accessories and a corsage of yellow roses and mums. Honor guests at the wedding was Mrs. Arthur Grandstrand of Viking, grandmother of the bride. She wore a brown figured dress with a corsage of yellow roses and mums.

A reception was given in the church parlors by the parents of the bride and served by friends of the family. Highlighting the serving table was a five tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. The cake, baked and decorated by the mother of the bride, was cut and served by Mrs. Donald Rupprecht and Mrs. Robert Hillyer. Mrs. Otto Rupprecht and Mrs. Allen Iverson, aunts of the bride, poured. Langen Requests Improved Rural Postal Service

"In suggestions for needed improvements in the United States postal service, why has rural America again been by-passed?" asked Congressman Odin Langen recently in a letter to the Pesident and the Postmaster General. Langen's comments came after the President endorsed the Postmaster General's recommendations to restore some of the postal services that were curtailed in 6,000 cities during 1964 and 1965. Congress will be asked to provide the necessary funds.

"The post office department should explore all the techniques available to modernize our postal service and to make certain that are they being used to provide the American people with the best postal system in the world at the lowest possible cost to the taxpayer," said Langen.

"However, it is inconceivable that Congress should be asked to improve the postal services for only those who live in cities with a population of over 3,000. This is another direct slap at small towns and other rural areas where postale service have been curtailed to a critical level. Are these second class citizens?"

Langen, who urged restoration of needed postal services in the nation, said that these latest announcements by the Postmaster General and the President are indicative of the attitude the administration displays toward rural areas. "It all sounds big in the headlines," he said, "but rural America again finds itself shortchanged when you read the small print."

322 Arrests Made For State Game Law Violations

Transporting loaded or uncased firearms in a motor chicle and violations of the big game laws accounted for most of the 322 arrests by state game wardens during December, the Minnesota Conservation department reported today.

There were 130 arrests for possessing a loaded or uncased firearm in a motor vehicle and five persons were arrested for having a strung bow in the car. There were 24 arrests for fishing violations and 28 for infractions committed in closed areas in parks and refuges during the fall hunting seasons.

Included in the big game violations were four arrests for taking moose during the deer season, 10 for shining deer and 12 for taking deer during the closed season.

There were 11 small game violations during the month and 19 arrests for infractions of the waterfowl regulations.

Five arrests were made for violations of the fish netting rules and three persons were arrested for using someone else's deer hunting license. Eight persons were prosecuted for having no seal on the deer they had taken.

VA Says Monthly Pension Payment Must Be Reported

Approximately 26,000 disabled Minnesota veterans and dependents of some 12,000 deceased veterans in Minnesota who receive monthly pension payments were reminded today to report their annual income promptly to the Veterans administration to avoid having their payments stopped.

John R. Murphy, manager of the VA center in St. Paul, said the VA has mailed to all pension recipients a punched card upon which the income report must be made. Pensions cease under the law if the income of a pension recipient rises above an established amount.

Dependent parents who receive dependency and indemnity compensation also receive income questionnaires and their pensions are similarly regulated by the amount of their income, Murphy said.

Deadline date for return of the questionnaires to the VA is Jan. 31, 1966. Information and assistance can be obtained from the VA center at St. Paul.

Dean White was a guest of program chairman Rev. Paul Biegner. He spoke on the progress of the college since it was started last fall and what can be expected in the futurue as enrollment increases and more faculty members are added.

One important aspect of attracting new students will be an extensive scholarship program by local individuals and firms, Dean White said. In some cases this is very important to students. Employment of students was touched upon as well as adequate housing Dean White ended his talk with a question and answer period.

President Kays reminded members to be present at their next meeting on Wednesday January 26 as the District Governor, Erling Wyland of Barnesville, will be in attendance.

Farm Problems Discussed Here By FU Officers

Factors which affect farm and community purchasing power were discussed at an area meeting for Farmers Union county and local officers held recently in Thief River Falls. The session was attended by 170 members and officers from the area.

Speaking at the multi-county officer workshop, Edwin Christianson, president of Minnesota Farmers Union, stressed the importance for farmers to be effectively represented where decisions are made on such things as farm prices and income, interest rates, taxes and economic concentration and monopoly.

"Despite the many legislative achievements of 1965, there is much to be done in this new year," Christianson said. "The increase in price supports to a full parity level, a better dairy program, livestock marketing incentives and priority for family farmers are among the major goals.

"Other major factors which affect farm purchasing power are high interest rates and price manipulation in industries where a practical monopoly exists," he said. "Legislation to prevent economic concentration in the food business and to roll back the recent increase in the cost of money are essential."

Archie W. Baumann, secretary of Minnesota Farmers Union, said that the money appropriated for the department of agriculture each year is one of the best investments made by the nation for the benefit of the general public as a whole.

"Besides assuring adequate food and fiber for consumers and industry at prices fair to farmers and to consumers, the farm programs help retain processing industries in this country and thereby help provide jobs and payroll," he explained.

Mrs. Lura Reimnitz, director of education and junior activities for the organization, emphasized the need for better education and employment opportunities for rural young people.

Cy Carpenter, Farmers Union legislative representative at the State Capitol, said that personal property tax relief for farmers and main street retail businessmen could have been provided in the 1965 legislative session, but that it was blocked by key leaders of the legislature who insisted that a sales tax be adopted.

"Of course, we know from the experience in other stacs, that a sales tax would just be an additional tax over the above existing taxes," he said.

Christianson To Address Gully Credit Union

Annual meeting of the Gully Credit Union will be held Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at the Gully village hall, according to Victor Thorson, chairman of the Credit Union board. All members and interested persons are invited to attend.

Guest speaker will be Edwin Christianson, president of the Minnesota Farmers Union, who will speak on "Credit As a Farm Tool". He will recognize that operating credit is an accepted thing in present-day farming, but that there are limits on how it can be used effectively.

Other officers and board members are Floyd Berg, vice chairman; Robert Thorson, clerk; Anton Boman, treasurer; and George Johnson, director. In its 16 years of operation, the Gully Credit Union has become a quarter-of-a million-dollar institution.

Brooks Manufacturing Company Keeps Busy

A manufacturing enterprise that began with an order for 400 foot stools for a Minneapolis department store last July has grown to a full-time factory employing eight women and two men.

Located about eight miles southwest of Oklee, the Brooks Manufacturing company, with Wally Groberg as its founder and president, produces hassocks, foot stools, shopping bags, pillows and other items made from vinyl and filled with poly-urethane foam.

WITH THEIR background of experience and equipped with the necessary machinery, it was only natural that they have also expanded into the reupholstering of furniture.

Wally grew up in Fertile, where his father operated a harness shop and where he learned to operate commercial sewing machines. For 19 years he was in construction work but the production end of manufacturing has always fascinated him and his acquaintance with a Minneapolis manufacturer's warehouse operator sharpened his interest even more.

As owner of income-producing apartment properties in the Twin Cities area, he found he had time to return to the Oklee community and launch his enterprise on the farm he and his wife acquired from Mrs. Groberg's father, the late George Peterson.

Wally, after nearly 20 years of working outdoors, sought indoor activity because of the Minnesota winters and one that would give employment to housewives. There was an immediate acceptance of the products mainly because they are made from the newest in materials which surpass in quality other similar articles on the market and because they are offered in a wide variety of colors and styles.

THEIR NEWEST article, just entering production is called a "Lady Fashion Accessory Bag". It is a durable, lightweight bag to be sold mainly in dress shops.

Products of the firm are sold through a number of channels—through jobbers, wholesalers, retailers and by direct mail. One Minneapolis - based wholesaler is distributing in southern Minnesota and Iowa. Another distributes in North and South Dakota.

"We have no problems in the manufacturing end," Groberg said, "but it takes time and effort to develop the sales aspect." At the present time, the firm has an inventory of merchandise ahead, but it is considered a healthy balance because sales are increasing daily.

WALLY ALSO works in the production end, doing the cutting of wood for the footstools, hassocks, etc., and Clarence Parsley does the assembling of the wood components. Mrs. Frances Parsley is plant supervisor and also works in the new upholstering department assisted by Mrs. Jim (Theresa) Trudeau. Mrs. Luverne Grimm is in charge of assembly operations and Mrs. Lloyd Nelson heads the sewing department which has six commercial machines.

Other employees include Mrs. Eleanor Hodgson of Terrebonne, Mrs. Veda (Myrtle) Plante, Mrs. Aristide Paquin and Mrs. Art Peterson. Harley Parsley, who is working in the Crookston sugar beet plant at the present time, will rejoin the Brooks firm February 15.

Many specialized tools are used in the operation including electric scissors, an electric staple driver and others. But most of all it is the application of energy and skill by a group of dedicated workers who are so proud of their products that they do quite a bit of selling in their spare time.

The firm acquires its vinyl mainly from the General Tire & Rubber company and the Nopco Chemical company supplies the poly-urethane foam.

Just this week the staff began production of 3,000 shopping bags in one lot and, with the exception of a two-weeks shutdown over the holidays, it appears that the enterprise will be in full production indefinitely.

Council To Buy Portable 2-Way Radio for Police

were reappointed to the library board for three-year terms and Frank Bond was reappointed to the park and recreation board for a seven-year term.

Police Chief Cummings requested and was granted authority to change the frequency of the city's police radios, due to interference by radios of the Winnipeg police force, which is beyond control of the Federal Communications commission.

The chief was also granted approval to attend the Governor's Advisory Council on Children and Youth. Officers Ray Bren and Roy Pederson were granted approval to attend a juvenile institute in February. Bids for a new police car will be opened at 3 p.m. February 15.

The council authorized City Clerk Fahey to submit a technical assistance application to the Economic Development administration in Washington, D.C., for development of plans for dredging the river. Total amount of the grant applied for is $35,750, of which the city would contribute $3,636. The city will request $32,114 in federal funds.

Dean Charles White of the Thief River Falls junior college requested funds to match with a federal grant for a work-study program enabling junior college students to work on city projects while attending school. The council voted to contribute $1,000 as 10 per cent of a $10,000 grant, the balance to be paid by the federal government if the proposition is accepted by federal officials.

In final business, the council retained the services of Martin Rantanen for snow removal at the municipal airport, while the city's Jeep is out of commission. Rantanen will be paid $4 per hour to do his job.

Prowlers Defeat EGF, Lose to Ada Vikings

On Friday night, in a game played on the Lincoln high school court, coach Whitey Olson's basketball Prowlers turned in a red-hot second period, scoring 27 points, to gain control of their District 31 game against East Grand Forks and go on to defeat the Green Wave, 59 to 46. THAT *POINT OU BURST BAVE THE Prowlers a 39 21 halftime lead.

On Saturday night, playing the Ada Vikings at Ada, the Prowlers were outpointed 28 to 18 by the Vikings in the second period, and 26 to 17 in the third period and dropped a 77 to 59 decision to the District 30 squad.

This Friday night, January 28, the Prowlers will journey to Grand Rapids for a game against the Indians of Region Seven. In last season's game between the two teams, and which was played here, the Prowlers scored a 60-48 win.

In Friday night's District 31 game here the Prowlers jumped into an 8-0 first period lead, but East Grand Forks pared that margin to 12-9 at the period stop. But in the second period, with one of their finest exhibitions of shooting, the Prowlers ripped 27 points into the west basket and gained a comfortable 39 to 21 lead at the intermission. Tommy Cummings looped in four field goals and a free throw, Mark Stromberg scored three field goals, Wayne Liden had a pair of field goals, Karl Poppenhagen a field goal and pair of free throws and Bob Brodin and Bruce Saustad added field goals.

In the second half the Prowlers ran into foul trouble, losing Poppenhagen and Saustad early in the third period, and Stromberg with 3:29 to play in the fourth period. The Prowlers were able to hold off the ever-trying East Siders to win by a 59 to 46 score.

At Ada on Saturday night, coach Dennis Anderson's strong Vikings, with strong rebounding and double-flure scoring from Ken Pierce, Jim Stadum and Doug Hanson, defeated the Prowlers, 77-59.

The Prowlers, too, had three players in double figures, with Cummings scoring 22 points to gain the game's high-point honors.

Hockey Prowlers Expect Busy Week With Three Games

The Ft. Frances, Ontario, high school Muskies, flashing good skating speed, and showing finesse in setting up scoring plays in front of the Prowler net, defeated the Prowlers, 4-1 in high school hockey game played here Saturday night.

This week coach George Schlieff's Prowler will play three important Region Eight conference games. On Tuesday night, January 25, the Warroad Warriers will invade the arena rink for a set of A and B squad games. On Friday night, January 28, coach Bob Strand's Crookston Central squad will be here, with a B squad game between the Central B and Prowler B as a preliminary. And on Saturday night, January 29, the Prowler A and B squad will travel to Baudette for a pair of games.

In Saturday night's fast and well-played game here against Ft. Frances, the visitors tallied a pair of goals in the opening period. Jack McFayden, getting a pass in center-ice from Rick Barefoot, circled the Prowler defense, and with a backhand shot from the left, found the right-hand corner of the south goal for a tally at the 3:42 mark. At the 10:47 mark, following a shot from the point by Lyle Smith, Dale Cooper picked up the carom off the backboard and flipped a shot past the left corner goal-post and into the cage.

The second period found the Prowlers outshooting the Muskies, 11 to 7, and it was only some nimble goal tending by the Muskies' Bill Hollands that kept the locals off the scoring column.

In the final period, McFayden's goal, on an assist from Huey McKinnon at 2:42, gave the visitors a 3-0 lead. The Prowlers averted a shutout when, at the 5:25 mark, Monte LeMoine rapped a rebound last ct. Billy Poole's on-goal try past Hollands and into the north net. Kent LeMoine had set up the play by feeding a pass from right wing to Poole in front of the Ft. Frances net. Hollands kicked out Poole's try, but LeMoine, getting the rebound, about ten feet out, backhanded a shot into the net.

In a preliminary game, the Prowler B squad, with Arlen Overbye scoring a pair and Jim Gibson and Gary LaValley adding single goals, defeated the Fort Frances B squad, 4 to 3.

The winter sports season is just about approaching its final month of the schedule, and the three Prowler major sports —hockey, wrestling and basketball—are unbeaten in district and conference competition. Coach Ed Krystosek's Prowler wrestlers will engage in District 31 tournament competition at Crookston on Thursday, February 17. Three squads will participate—Crookston and Warren—with semi-finals matches slated for 6 p.m., and the finals for 7:30 p.m. Some consolation matches, to determine second place in the individual standings, will be held at 9 p.m.

Coach George Schlieff's hockey Prowlers can gain a bye past the south sub-regional tournament, which is slated for the Crookston rink on February 10, 11 and 12. The Region Eight tournament will be held at Roseau on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 15 and 16.

Coach Whitey Olson's basketball Prowlers will enter District tournament play at Grand Forks on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, March 7, 8 and 9.

But to get back to winning records of the three squads. The hockey Prowlers, in Region Eight conference play, are unbeaten in defeated East Grand Forks, 4-1, here; Crookston Central, 2-0, there; Roseau, 2-1, there; and Hallock, 7-1, here. But the row will be getting tougher. The Prowlers have a home-and-home series with the Warroad Warriors, a game here against Roseau and game against the Baudette Bears at Baudette.

Coach Krystosek's wrestlers, in a pair of dual matches in District 31 competition, have recorded wins, having defeated Warren, 36 to 8, here; and Crookston Central, 31 to 11, also here.

The basketball Prowlers have three wins and no losses in District 31 play. The Prowlers defeated the Warren Ponies, 60-43, here; East Grand Forks, 59-46, here. The Prowlers have four district games to play, Crookston, here; East Grand Forks, there; Climax, here; and Warren, there.

Memo for Senior Hockey Fans

Hockey fans will have an opportunity to see an official Manitoba Senior Hockey league game here on Monday night, February 7. On that date, with the faceoff scheduled for 8 p.m. in the arena, the Warroad Lakers, presently the league leaders, will play the Red River Mixers of Grand Forks.

The two teams have been slated to play a league game here on December 12, but lack of ice forced the cancellation of that game.

Local fans will be interested in this game, and will perhaps give their cheers to the Red River Mixers as a pair of local skaters, Dale Wennberg and Jerry Westby, are on the Mixers' roster. The Mixers are coached by Don Ross, the former all-state high school player for the Roseau Rams, and later an All-American defenseman with the North Dakota Sioux.

The Mixers, though, will be up against one of the top-ranked teams in Canadian senior hockey when they meet the Warroad Lakers. The late-starting Lakers have taken over first place in the league standings. Although Dayton Grafstrom's squad lost the services of Roger Christian when the former United States Olympic hockey star broke his leg as he crashed into a goal-post during an exhibition game at Grand Rapids 10 days ago, the Warroad squad is being rated as a favorite to reach Canada's Allan Cup finals.

I'm sorry that Al Holzknecht can't be here to watch this Warroad vs. Grand Forks game. Al will be trudging around the golf course in Sun City, Arizona, sharpening up his golf game, especially his short game. And as Bob Craik said when you talk about Al's short game, you're talking about Al's entire golf game!

It Must a Jinx

When coach Larry Selk's well-rated East Grand Forks basketball team dropped that 59 to 46 decision to the Prowlers here on Friday night, it marked the eleventh successive loss for the Green Wave to the Prowlers on the Lincoln high school court. Not since 'way back in the 1954-55 season, when the Green Wave edged out the Prowlers, 40 to 37, has East Side defeated the locals here.

That 1954-55 Prowler squad was co-captained by Bill Fraim and George Gifford, and had such squad members as Louie Wedul, Lee Kjos, Eddie Fillatrault, Chuck Brandvold, Mark Bjorkman, Ron Severson, Dean Anderson and Evan Jones.

During that span of years the Prowlers haven't found the East Grand Forks floor to be a bonanza either. Playing at East Side, the Prowlers have lost seven times and have won four games, with the latest victory being a 66-48 win during the 1962-63 season. The Green Wave has won the last two games played, and will be favored to win the game there on Friday, February 18.

Archery Club To Meet Wednesday

Thief River Falls Archery club will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the city auditorium meeting room. On the agenda will be election of officers and discussion of a location for an indoor archery range. A film will be shown following the meeting. Anyone interested in archery is invited to attend.

Local Wrestlers Defeat Fertile 33-13 Wednesday

In a dual match held at Fertile on Wednesday evening, coach Ed Krystosek's Prowler wrestling squad, by a 33-13 score, defeated the Fertile Falcons of District 30.

The next match on the Prowler schedule will be against coach Ken Schmoker's highly-regarded Bemidji Lumberjack squad here on Saturday night, January 29. The Lumberjacks, with a veteran squad led by such senior lettermen as Jim Ritchie, Gary Blashill, Bill Dunlap, Larry Donat, Ricky Morlan and Terry May, scored a dual match victory over the Park Rapids Panthers several weeks ago.

In marking up their win over Fertile on Wednesday night, the Prowlers boosted their season's mark in dual match competition to six wins and one loss.

Livestock Means Most To Farm Cash Income

A 14 per cent jump in livestock receipts in 1965 led Minnesota farm income to an all-time high, according to W. Keith Bryant, agricultural economist at the University of Minnesota.

Cash sales of agriculturre products for 1965 show livestock as the major income producer with 39 per cent of the cash market. Livestock products accounted for 32 per cent and crops for 29 per cent of the total 1965 farm income in Minnesota.

Sales of Minnesota farm products increased seven per cent last year to over $1.5 billion, a total gain of $101 million over 1964. Bryant gives the following breakdown of Minnesota farm income for 1965.

Despite the unfavorable planting and harvesting weather in the state last year, crop production rose eight per cent over 1964. Gains were: barley, 37 per cent; oats, 23 per cent; hay, 18 per cent; and wheat, four per cent.

Corn yield increased by two bushels per acre to an average of 61 bushels but a decrease in acreage harvested dropped the corn crop two million bushels below the 1964 total of 272 million bushels.

Quality of corn and soybeans was generally lower. Yet, despite some discounting for high moisture, the crop corn averaged $1.03 per bushel, about the same as the 1964 crop.

A record soybean crop of 58.6 million bushels was harvested last year in spite of September frosts which cut average yields to 18.5 bushels per acre. Soybean acreage, up 11 per cent over 1964, offset the decreases in the crop yield. Soybean prices increased two cents per bushel to $2.51.

The combined marketings of livestock and livestock products showed an average increase of nine per cent over 1964. This trend was mainly due to the 37 per cent advance in hog receipts over the previus year with a 38 per cent jump in the average price per hundred weight to $20.56. This increase in prices was due mainly to a 14 per cent reduction in hog slaughter nationally.

Calf prices suffered a drop of about 10 per cent under the 1964 price, but the cattle price was up about three per cent. Marketings increased also about three per cent in the state over 1964.

A national decline of about nine per cent in the sheep and lamb marketings raised the sheep and lamb prices substantially above the 1964 prices. Minnesota total receipts increased still more as the state slaughter run eight per cent ahead of 1964.

Livestock products forged ahead of 1964 totals with turkeys and dairy products setting the pace. Total milk production ran slightly ahead of the previous year but an increase of about six per cent in the price of milk accounted for the major gain in total receipts.

Minnesota led the nation in turkey production last year with a crop of 15.9 million birds. This was the second largest turkey crop for the state, still short of the record 19 million birds produced in 1961. The number of turkeys marketed and a slight increase in prices kept the turkey receipts in line with the general upswing in farm income.

Egg production in Minnesota declined for the tenth consecutive year. Egg prices were also slightly down and egg receipts fell to $53 million in 1965 from $56 million the year before.

Pvt. Daryl Gram Fires As Expert In M-14 Rifle

Army Pvt. Daryl K. Gram, son of Mr. and Mrs. Buel B. Gram of Middle River, fired expert with the M-14 rifle at the completion of his basic combat training at Ft. Hood, Tex., January 12. The expert rating is the highest mark a soldier can achieve in his rifle qualification test.

1966 Food Prices Expected To Rise From 1965 Costs

Americans spent about six per cent more for food in 1965 than the year before, and they'll continue to spend more in 1966. But the percentage of increase won't be as great—probably not over four per cent above 1965 figures.

Higher retail food prices, greater total consumption of food because of population growth and more marketing services accounted for the fact that food expenditures rose more than usual in 1965, according to the University of Minnesota Institute of agriculture.

Actually, the percentage of income being spent for food declined slightly in 1965 because food expenditures did not rise quite as fast as income, according to Mary Ryan, extension consumer marketing specialist at the university. Income after taxes was up 6½ per cent in 1965 over the previous year and expenditures for food were up about six per cent. The percentage spent for food is expected to decline slightly in 1966.

The American food bill in 1965 was about $85½ million, Miss Ryan reports. Anothe $12 billion went for alcoholic beverages.

For each person, expenditures averaged about $439. Per family food expenditures averaged $1,469 for the year or $28.25 a week. However, simple averages per person don't apply to different sized families, Miss Ryan warns.

As the family increases in size, total food expenditures increase, but not in proportion to the number of persons. Thus single consumers spent an estimated $675 for food in 1965 compared to about $570 per person for a two-person family and $285 per person for a family of six or more. Total family expenditures are estimated at $1,140 for two-person families [illegible] $1,995 for families of six or more.

Food expenditures also vary with size of family income, vocation of family head, number of earners in the family, family preferences and location.

State Employment Service Seeks Camp Personnel

Minnesota State Employment service has announced its annual drive to help directors of hundreds of Minnesota's summer camps to recruit counselors and specialists needed to staff their programs.

State Employment service offices have received 600 requests for counselors and camp housekeeping and maintenance personnel, according to V. W. Nobles, who is in charge of the recruiting project. He urged college students with camping experience, campcraft skills or even a strong interest in the out-of-doors to apply immediately. While a few key positions may not be filled until late spring, the bulk of the approximately 1,500 jobs expected will be selected in the next two months.

In addition to regular camp counselors, who are usually assigned a group of younger children to supervise, instructors are also needed to teach a variety of camp subjects: swimming, riding, sailing, nature study, arts and crafts, canoeing, music, riflery, athletics and [illegible]. Persons with extensive camp background and administrative ability may qualify as program directors or camp director, Nobles said.

Besides the program specialists [illegible], hundreds of others are needed for administrative [illegible] as camp nurses, dieticians, cooks, kitchen help, groundsman and maintenance people. While the great majority of personnel recruited for camp jobs are college students, other qualified persons are urged to apply.

Applicants should be at least 18 years of age and, in general, should believe in the purpose of camping, have interest in and understanding of children, enjoy outdoor life, accept others and possess good physical condition, maturity and judgment.

"When a man considers all that he doesn't know, the immeasurable abundance of things of which he has no or only the vaguest idea, he gets downcast. And yet, he also feels free and great. In the vastness of his ignorance, he stands trembling with the feeling of infinity, as under the starry sky."

—Alfred Polgar

The Jericho Road

An article in "Liberty" magazine by Bob W. Brown, pastor of Trinity Baptist church in Lexington, Ky., caught our attention recently. Entitled "Down the Jericho Road", it makes some very pointed comments regarding the church and the welfare state. The following are selected paragraphs:

"Those of us in the church in the past decade have been gripped by frustration. This does not make the churchman unique, for most Americans are afflicted with some kind of emotional disorder. The source of our frustration may be unique, for we actually want to give, but find ourselves too often offering too little too late. The day is passing us by.

"Church leaders bear part of the blame for our ineffectiveness. In keeping with the attitudes prevalent in our nation, we have become monstrous computers adding constituents, baptizing babies, and creating a religious superstructure of insitutionalism that rises high above the masses. We have obscured our motives by using questionable methods that are shocking in the face of our mission. No one actually blushes in shame, for a pause to blush, or repent, might upset the delicate statistical balance we seek to maintain.

"There is no time for us to stop on the Jericho road where a man lies wounded and give him aid. We have been conditioned by our Madison Avenue orientation to believe that one man between Jerusalem and Jericho is hardly worth the effort. Numbers count. There is strength and power in size, and thus we hasten to the place where the crowd gathers. This error permeates the church leaders of our country and thus affects the program of the church.

"But suppose we do stop. Pennsylvania Avenue is already there. The man on the Jericho road will be investigated not by a Samaritan, but by an agent of government. He will be cared for in a hospital built with government funds. He will have his bill paid by government medical assistance. He will receive compensation while he is out of work. If he dies, the government will help pay the funeral expense and provide for his wife and children. The chairty of the church will be only incidental to the paternalistic treatment afforded by the Great Society."

In Quest of Power

Not only are the nation's labor unions seeking to strengthen their existing organizations through a number of legislative goals, they are expanding into new fields in their quest for power. In these efforts they are more or less publicly active, but the methods are visible and the support in organizations and finances is of little doubt.

Among two of these union-backed movements which are worthy of note in our sometimes seemingly insignificant corner of the state are the National Farmers organization and the Minnesota Federation of Teachers. There are dedicated members of both which would disclaim such support, but the denial would be based more on organizational loyalty than actual fact.

Labor union bosses have been having their troubles in recent years. Union membership is declining in relation to the total work force. Additional funds are needed to increase union power—not industrial barbaining power but actual political power. If existing unions can not offer enough to induce expansion, then new organizations must be created to build the desired strength.

The same line of thought is behind the union pressure for repeal of Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act—the so-called right to work law. Should Section 14(b) be repealed, the union bosses would hit an estimated $15 million annual jackpot. Needless to say, those funds would come in mighty handy in an election year.

Repeal would mean 250,000 workers now shielded by compulsory unionism would be forced into labor unions by "union shop" clauses already existing in labor-management contracts. Union membership would be automatically increased in the "right to work" states by at least 15 per cent without the negotiation of the single new collective bargaining agreement.

No union cries of woe because of the Senate filibuster need bring forth a flood of tears in sympathy. The unions aren't concerned about what is right and wrong in their quest for power. As James J. Kilpatrick wrote in the Washington Star, "Principle be damned. They want the $15 million."

We can sympathize with the NFO member his efforts to better his financial situation—a position into which he has been forced through no real fault of his own. We can also understand the frustrations of teachers in trying to extract salary increases from boards of education when they have no weapon stronger than a request.

But while we can see merit in parts of the NFO program, we can also see weaknesses which are too big to be overlooked. Among these are initial union financial support (and those folks don't inest unless they expect diidends), top-to-bottom control in spite of county, area and state divisions, exhorbitant percentage fee to the NFO once contracts are put into effect and a reckless willingness to be led on the part of the members who seem to believe that anything is better than what they have now.

In the MFT we see the union tactic of playing the "worker" against the "administrator", de-emphasis of education and re-emphasis of teacher welfare, an attitude of selfishness rather than the long-worked-for and well-deserved image of selflessness which has been the hallmark of the education profession.

Wages in any work or profession should be paid in amounts in which they are earned on a basis of what the worker or professional person can produce. Organization for coercion (unions call it collective bargaining) is not a laudable endeavor. It is part of the quest for power—and too much power is to be feared rather than encouraged.

Tax Time Again

Perhaps the best-read portion of the Times today will be the personal property tax table prepared by the Pennington county treasurer's office. This annual legal publication inspires innumerable people to rise up in righteous indigation and condemn the tax as discriminatory, inequitable and ridiculous.

We have said before, and will say again, that we doubt the good Lord Himself could do an equitable job of personal property tax assessment. Placing a value on an item is next to impossible, and assessing every item is even more impossible.

Tax assessment has been compared with the way in which farmers reputedly weighed hots in Texas. They would secure a board, balance it over a rock, and tie the hog to one end of the board. Ahen they would hunt until they found another rock which, when placed on the other end of the board, would balance the hog. Then they would guess the weight of the rock.

We can imagine that at this time of the year a number of farmers are beginning to wonder if the sales tax they have heard about is really as bad as they would like to believe. Replacement of the personal property tax on livestock and machinery with a sales tax exempting crtain nessary items or offering a family credit provision might not look so bad along side the heavy personal property tax statement.

And while we're on the subject, the income tax can not be overlooked. There are several gross inequities in the methods in which our government extracts funds from the public to finance its spending programs.

Among these is the withholding system. Although popular with most people, this income tax on the installment plan makes it much easier for the govrnment to spend our money. When wage earners are on the withholding system, they don't really count the deducted tax as income. Gradual increases in taxes, spread over a number of payment periods in the year, don't hurt so much as a lump sum payment. There would be a lot more pressure on Congress and the administration to curtail spending if every taxpayer had to scratch up the cash to pay his total tax bill at the end of the year. This would also make Uncle Sam wait until the end of the year to collect his share.

Another inequity is the $600 exemption fo dependents—a figure which has remained static for years while the cost of living has soared and inflation has whittled down the value of the dollar. Exemptions totaling $3,000 for a family of five would place that family at the "poverty" level established by the government itself. Certainly President Johnson wouldn't want to leave the impression that the "average" American family is poverty-stricken in his Great Society, but the $600 exemption seems to indicate that a family of five can live on $3,000 a year.

Yet another inequity in the withholding tax is that the employer serves as a tax collector and bookkeeper for the federal government without reimbursement for these services. And still another tax inequity is the taxation of corporate profits and then the taxation of dividends paid to stockholders.

One more parting shot on taxes in general must be taken before we leave a distasteful subject. A number of Conservatives in the state legislature favor a sales tax, while a number of Liberals cry the evils of a sales tax and say an excise tax is better. A sales tax is a tax on what a person buys, while an excise tax, on the other hand, is a tax on what a person buys. See the difference ?!?!

A woman sitting on a bus with her small child was interrupted by a drunk sitting behind her who told her that she had the ugliest child he had ever seen. The woman became hysterical and could not be calmed down. Finally she got off the bus and was walking down the street in an agitated condition when a man came up to her to see what the trouble was. The woman, still so distraught that she couldn't speak, was led into a bar where the man handed her a shot of whiskey and said, "Here drink this and you will feel better. THREE IMPORTANT REMINDERS ABOUT MEDICARE
1. Medicare is not always automatic. Make sure you are covered.
Unless you are now receiving Social Security or Railroad Retirement benefits, you must apply for basic Medicare coverage. Visit or write your nearest Social Security office. The deadline for applying through your Social Security office is March 31, 1966—but play it safe. Do it now.
2. Keep your present health plan until July 1, 1966.
Remember, Medicare benefits do not begin until this date. If you drop your present hospital or medical coverage too soon, you may find yourself without protection—just when you may need it most. So again, don't take chances. Hold on to what you have.
3. What happens after July 1, 1966? Mail coupon below for free information.
As far-reaching as Medicare is, it won't pay the whole bill. Some services are only partially covered, others not at all. To fill these gaps, Minnesota Blue Cross and M.I.I. will soon be announcing a new low-cost program for persons with Medicare.
As yet, complete information is NOT available, but will be sent to you as soon as possible—If you complete and mail the coupon below. Do it today. Be among the first to receive details of the new Blue Cross and M.I.I. program.

Food Supplies Ample To Meet Rising Need

Penty of food for the shopper's market basket is in prospect for 1966, in spite of increasing demands from a growing population with rising incomes. Some of this food, though, will carry higher price tags than a year ago.

Most meats will cost more because of the expected decline in per capita supplies. Smaller crops and packs of some vegetables and fruits will make overall prices of canned foods higher. But prices of frozen vegetables, fresh potatoes, fresh citrus fruits and frozen orange juice are expected to average lower than last season.

In spite of a hike in food prices, however, most people will spend a smaller share of their take-home pay for food in 1966 since their incomes will be higher.

Red meat. Smaller total supplies are in prospect. A slight increase in total beef production is more than offset by population growth and smaller imports of beef. Retail beef prices will probably average higher than in 1965 throughout most of 1966.

Because of smaller pork production, retail pork prices are expected to average well above levels of a year ago. However, in the second half of the year prices probably will begin to decline, and by the end of 1966, pork likely will be priced under 1965 year-end levels.

*Fish. The small increase in supplies is not keeping pace with population growth.

*Poultry. Broiler production is expected to increase in 1966, and retail prices for broilers and fryers are expected to decline slightly. Per capita chicken consumption in 1966 will likely reach a new high of around 35 pounds.

Another sizable gain is expected in turkey production in 1966, with the largest expansion, percentagewise, in the small fryer-roaster turkeys.

*Eggs. Output in all of 1966 may not be up enough to maintain per capita egg consumption at the 1965 level. In the first half of 1966 production is likely to be a little under last year's figures, but after mid-year laying flocks will probably have been rebuilt and egg output will be above a year earlier. For all of 1966 prices may average about the same as in 1965.

*Food fats and oils. Total supplies of food fats and oils in the 1965-66 marketing year are forecast at about five per cent above 1964-65. The increase stems entirely from the record 1965 soybean crop. Production of edible vegetable oils (cottonseed and soybean) is expected to increase, but lard output probably will be down significantly. Butter production will be down *slightly. During 1966 retail prices of the major food fat products are expected to average slightly below 1965.

Citrus fruits. Supplies of all fresh citrus fruits except Florida tangerines and limes are expected to b moderately larger than a year ago. California Navels and Florida Valencias comprise most of the increase for oranges. In grapefruit, Florida pink and white seedless account for most of the gain. More Temple oranges, tangelos and lemons are expected than last year. Retail prices for fresh oranges, and grapefruit have averaged somewhat lower in recent months than a year ago.

Within the next two years, production of citrus fruits could exceed the pre-freeze record volume of 1961-'62, assuming favorable weather.

Expect Hog Price To Stay Strong For Six Months

Hog prices should reman strong and above 1965 levels for at least another six months, judging from current supply indicators, according to Kenneth Egertson, University of Minnesota agricultural economist.

Current on-farm, pig inventories show that hogs weighing under 150 pounds are 10 per cent fewer than a year ago. These pigs will provide marketings from now until June. Thus, slaughter is expected to run from eight to 15 per cent less than a year ago.

Egertson says pork in inventory is also extremely low, so pork available for consumption will be even less than slaughter estimates indicate. With lower supplies, population growth and increased incomes, pork demand should remain at high levels.

Strong hog prices—20 to 25 per cent above 1965 and excellent profit prospects should prevail through mid-1966. But Egertson stresses that higher prices could be strong incentive for producers to expand farrowings in 1966.

Plitt Awarded "Commission" by Airline Company

George Plitt, president of Valley Feed and Supply Co., Inc., of Spring Valley, N.Y., whose wholly-owned subsidiary plant, The Farmers Grain & Milling company, is located in Thief River Falls, recently was given a commission as an "Admiral of The Flagship Fleet" by an executive of American Airlines, Inc.

This is an honorary commission conferred "in recognigtn of consistant and meritorius service and for many contributions to the development of air transportation as a public service and as a basic element of Air Power."

In conducting the affairs of his far-flung agricultural and pet supply manufacturing business, Plitt spends many hours in commercial airplanes, criss-crossing the country from coast to coast, with occasional trips to Canada, Mexico and Purrto Rico. It is routine for him to visit five or six states in a single week of travel, during which he keeps pre-arranged appointments with his plant executives or with customers or associates and follows an air travel schedule which demands split-second timing.

While much of his flying of more than a million miles has been done with American Airlines, Plitt estimates that he has traveled another half-million miles with major airlines which fly routes convenient to his schedule.

29 Miles of New Roads Built in State Forests

Forestry division of the Minnesota Conservation department continued active in the building of access roads into state forests in 1965 to aid huntes and to facilitate logging operations.

A report from the division released this week shows that 29 miles of new road were built and reconstruction was completed on 14 additional miles. Several briges over streams were built utilizing old railroad flat car frames.

Forest roads and trails open up areas to timber harvesting and en-men and other sportament to reach parts of the forest not previously used. The forestry division now maintains over 1,000 miles of these roads throughout the state.

Ask Boat Owners To Renew License

Minnesota boat owners today were urged to check the expiration date of their present boat licenses and to renew as soon as possible any license which expired Dec. 31, 1965.

Milt Johnson, boat and water safety director, Minnesota Conservation department, said renewal notices have been set to all registered boat owners whose license expried on that date. He urged the boat owner to send in his renewal application and required fee as soon as possible to avoid the possibility of not having a valid license on the boat when the owner desires to use it this spring.

"It takes to e to process these applications," said Johnson, "and last year many boat owners who applied just prior to the opening of the fishing season did not receive their renewed license before the season opened."

Since renewal notices were sent out arly this year, he said, there is no reason why all boat owners cannot have a valid license on their watercraft before spring.

The license law will be strictly enforced this year, Johnson warned.

An estimated gross of $131,455,000 will be paid into the highway users tax distribution fund in fiscal 1966, made up of state motor vehicle license fees and fuel tax imposed by the state.

After paying for the collection services performed by the motor vehicle division, the petroleum division and other state departments in the amount of $2,511,184, there will be $128,943,816 left for distribution to the counties.
